The Avondale Disaster—Funerals of the Miners—Responsibility of the Catastrophe.

New York, Sept. 10.—A Scranton dispatch says Mr. Benjamin Hughes is quite satisfied no more bodies remain below, and his opinion is supported by the best authorities. Nevertheless, to satisfy everybody, the work of search, though temporarily stopped for the purpose of ventilating the coal parties of the mine, will be carried on tomorrow with additional gangs of men, and every possible risk and danger explored. The funeral of forty-three miners today was an event of unusual impressiveness. A solemn requiem was held by the city bells, flags were hung at half-mast, stores were closed, the principal streets deserted, the numerous laborers draped in mourning, and all the working population of Avondale appeared to have taken themselves to Avondale. One train of thirty-two platform cars carried thirty-five hundred passengers to the scene of the late disaster. So great was the crush that two men were knocked off the cars and out to pieces. The throng at Avondale was immense, and extended down the railroad track for miles. A majority of those present came merely from motives of curiosity. There were hundreds of women dressed in costume more befitting a picnic than a funeral, and among many of the men there was a levity and rudeness of manner better adapted to the neighborhood of a fairing than a solemn scene of such great grief. A great deal of controversy is going on in town on the question of who is to blame for the present inefficient system of ventilating mines and giving protection to the miners. One side insists it is the miners who are to blame, for if they choose to say we will not work in any mine which is unprovided with a means of escape in case of accident to the shaft, the owners of mines would quickly see it was their interest to adopt the proper precautions against the dangers that are now so apparent. Miners, they say, will take the risk of working anywhere, provided they are paid, and are as utterly indifferent to palpable danger as the sailor who goes to sea in a leaky ship.

Dr. Lightenell, who ran over two ladies with his horse and buggy in Lock Haven, some time since, while under the influence of liquor, has been sentenced to a two years term in the State prison.

The losses by fire throughout the United States during the month of August, just passed, amounted to $9,428,000, or nearly double those of August, 1888, and much exceeding the total of any month during the past or present year. The value of property destroyed by fire since January 1, 1889, already amounts to $27,190,000, while the total losses in 1888 were less than $35,000,000. The fire of August 6, in Philadelphia, when property valued at $4,000,000 was burned, was the most destructive one that has occurred in the country since July 4, 1865, when the city of Portland, Maine, was devastated—the loss amounting to $10,000,000.
