A Mobber Frightened to Death.

A few weeks ago the members of a household in Rochester, England, were startled one forenoon by a heavy fall on the floor above. Several of the family thereupon rushed up stairs to the principal room on the second floor, from which the noise seemed to come. On opening the door they found a strange man lying on the carpet.— He evidently had just fallen but was quite dead. His features wore a look of terror, awful to gaze upon. Around the room was strewn property which he had removed from the trunks and closets, to carry; but there he lay stricken down in the midst of his booty.

It was remembered that just before the noise of the fall some persons of the family had passed the room, on their way further up stairs. The robber must have heard them. Fearful of detection in his crime, the excitement of his position probably hastened the crisis of some fatal affection of the heart or brain, and he dropped, actually frightened to death.

Never was the old-fashioned verdict of the coroner's jury, "Died by the visitation of God," more appropriate than in this case for many persons will believe that the death of the robber was a punishment sent direct from the hand of the Almighty.

The clergyman at Rochester seems to have thought of something of this kind, for he refused to permit the prayers of the English Church to be read over the body of the man; consequently it could not be interred in the cemetery, but was placed in unconse-crated ground.
