NATIONAL CHARACTERISTICS.—At the age of twenty-five an American has learned six trades, made four fortunes, one failure and two campaigns, pleaded a lawsuit, and preached religion, killed six men with a revolver and conquered an island. An Englishman has written two theses, accompanied an embassy, established a counting house, converted a catholic, made a tour of the world, and read the complete works of Walter Scott. A Frenchman has composed a tragedy, written for two newspapers, received three sword thrusts, attempted two suicides, provoked four husbands, and changed his political opinions nineteen times. A German has disgraced fourteen of his intimate friends, swallowed sixteen barrels of beer and Hegel's philosophy, chanted eleven thousand couplets, compromised a servant, smoked a million of pipes, and dipped into two revolutions.—The Roman prince has done nothing, seen nothing, loved nothing, suffered nothing.—The grate of a cloister is opened and a young girl brought forth, as in experience as himself, and these two simpletons kneel before a priest, who permits them to give birth to other simpletons.—Edmond About.
