The city of New Orleans is not prospering as well as its friends might wish. A correspondent writes us that trade is very quiet, money scarce, and many business houses unoccupied. Merchants who have been in business for twenty years are talking of winding up their affairs and seeking a better place for their operations. The great southern steamship monopolist, Charles Morgan, is, however, said to be coining money very fast, making as much as $96,- 000 per week clear of all expenses. He charges more than twice as much freight on merchandise from New Orleans to the Texas ports as is charged upon merchandise from New York to the same ports. From New Orleans to Galveston he charges $18 for passage, which is three times as much as is charged from New York to Boston, which are the same distance apart. Businessmen complain that his enormous charges are driving away the Texas trade to St.
Louis, Louisville, New York, and other places.
