Gold to-day 119 3/4.

The concert last evening was a success in every particular. The instrumental music by the band was certainly very fine. Their rendition of such difficult pieces as the "Anvil Chorus," "Come Where my Love Lies Dreaming," "Prayer from the Night Camp in Grenada," &c., is certainly very creditable and exhibits a degree of musical talent that it would be hard to excel even among older bands. Especially well rendered were the Instrumental Quartettes by Messrs. Hamilton, Kane, Jones, McKailp and Holzworth. Scotch Ballad by Mrs. Brandon was good. The afterpiece kept the audience in good humor while it was being played. We have not learned the amount realized, but it will probably aid materially towards purchasing the new uniforms. The attendance of so large a number at the concert is an evidence of the good will of our citizens towards the boys of the band that we are glad to witness. We trust they will favor our citizens with another entertainment before long.

It will be remembered that last Christmas we published an account of a row on the cars between this place and Rouseville. It will also be remembered that several of the individuals engaged in the row left the cars at Tarr Farm, and after getting out engaged in the pastime of stoning the cars, breaking several windows and endangering the lives of passengers. Since that time the railroad company have been engaged in ferreting out the matter, and yesterday caused the arrest of a man named James Parker, a resident of Tarr Farm. A preliminary examination was held in the case before Esquire Donaghy of this place, this forenoon, which resulted in Parker being held in the sum of $1,000 to appear at Franklin, to answer the charge. The requisite bail was entered for his appearance at court.

Yesterday was a high day among the sporting men and lovers of that "innocent" amusement, "dog fighting." The fight was announced to come off at Shaffer, but owing to the vigilance of a deputy sheriff from Shamburg the parties were obliged to stop at Miller Farm. The first match was between a Titusville pup and a Buffalo dog. This match was witnessed by large numbers of two-legged canines from this place, Oil City, Titusville, Buffalo and other places. The Titusville dog was declared victor. Great rejoicing among the Titusville dogs. The second match, between an Oil City and Petroleum Centre dog, was stopped by the sudden appearance of the Shamburg deputy. Mourning among the Centre and Oil City dogs. This last match came off, we learn, at a late hour last night, at some point on the flats near this place. The law in regard to such brutal exhibitions should be enforced and examples made of those engaged in the practice.

A South Carolinian lately took his intended second wife to view his extended first wife.

The manufacturers of Akron, Ohio, during the last quarter of 1869 made sales to the amount of $1,002,721.

Mrs. Gottschneider's Notions of Woman's Rights.

From the Rondout Freeman.

Gottlieb Gottschneider is a little Rondout Dutchman, with a strapping big brow who has evidently her own notions about woman's rights. Mrs. Gottlieb had an admirer, with whom, in Gottlieb's absence, she was in the habit of adjourning to a neighboring lager beer saloon, and indulging in copious libations of the German fluid, at the aforesaid admirer's expense. This coming to the little man's ears he vowed vengeance, and with wrath in his eye, and hickory stick in his hand, he watched the treacherous couple, and a few evenings since found them together in their accustomed haunt, the lager beer saloon aforesaid. The little Dutchman "pitched into" the disturber of his peace, and the wind-up of the affair is told by Gottlieb as follows: "I tells Christina to walk straight home, and Shinkins, he picks up der beer mug, and lets to beer spill over mine face, and he hits me in der back mit his boot, und I goes out; und Christina she no come und I go home und goes to ped, between two ladder peds, I vas so mad; und Christina she comes und laughs at me because Shinkins hit mine back before mine face mit his two boots.

Five Hundred Dollars for a Drink.

A few days ago two fellows while intoxicated assaulted a gentleman on the highway near Lewiston, Maine, and endeavored to shoot him. The interposition of a fourth person saved his life. Afterward the offenders called upon him to see if they could not prevent a prosecution. He agreed not to prosecute them on condition that they gave a guarantee of $500 each that they would touch nor, taste nor, handle nor, intoxicate drinks for five years. One of them has deposited $500 in the bank, and the other has given a lien on his real estate for that amount. The first violation of the pledge forfeits the violator $500.

A countryman walked into a New York barroom the other day, and called for a glass of ale. Having swallowed the refreshing beverage with great inward satisfaction he laid five cents on the counter and was proceeding on his way, when the bar-keeper stopped him and intimated that the price was ten cents. "What, ten cents for a glass of ale," exclaimed the worthy old Jerseyman with a look of indignant surprise; and then, while he brought from a bulky pocket-book the required additional currency, his countenance settled into a mournful resignation, as he plaintively continued: "Ten cents a glass for ale, eh? Well, if I had ever suspected that, I'd have took whisky."

The following was perpetrated by a tender-hearted man, who stood listening and shivering, as he listened to the notes of a hand-organ beneath his window: Enraptured here I'm by the window standing,

-Listing the heavenly music in its chime; With ecstasy my punch I thrust my hand in, And take the-refrom a jolly paper dime; But stop a moment, ere I let it went, I guess I'll compromise, and throw a cent-

A New York paper says that "Many people—especially strangers—in this city stay away from church on Sunday for fear of being considered intruders, and this feeling is very natural under the circumstances. We have seen in fashionable places of worship half the pews vacant, and yet a visitor is unable to obtain a seat, unless he or she would take one near the door or up in the organ loft."

They tell how a cruel father in New Albany, Ind., was not long ago outwitted by the ardent lover of his daughter. Knowing there was a savage dog on the premises, the lover took an equally ferocious dog with him, and set the two fighting. While the old folks were trying to separate the combative beasts, the girl slipped out the back door and was married to her devoted John.

New Well—A new well was struck on the Little farm, West Pitohole Creek, about a week ago. The well is owned by a Boston company, and is yielding sixty barrels a day. This farm is located about a half a mile from the Paxton farm, about half way between Pitohole and Shamburg. Since the striking of this well leases have been in active demand in that vicinity.

A well on the McCray farm, near the shaft, is nearly completed. The sand rock is of the finest kind. It will no doubt prove a good well.

There is to be a grand dance at Akin's Hall, this evening. Good music will be in attendance and a jolly good time may be expected.

The Armstrong & Christie well, Mallory farm, which has been testing for about a week is making a fine show. Will no doubt be a good twelve barrel well.

Prof. Jenkins has not arrived yet.

LITTLE LIPS.

BY EMILY BAYNE.

"Little lips, so gently pressing, "Little fingers, soft caressing; Oh, the bosom of a mother Knows more care than any other!

"Little feet, so early straying, Little wills, soon disobeying; Oh this father's heart a mother Knows more truly than another!

"Oh, the love-links of a mother, Stronger far than any other; God has welded every chain In the infant's heart and brain!"

It is singular what mistake people labor under. Many a girl thinks she sings sweetly who only screeches, and half the ugly dandies think they are killing handsome. Nor is this peculiarity confined to mankind. Many a stork may think himself an eagle bird, but the eagle never mistakes his identity for that of a stork.

Among the attractions at Mauch Chunk is the deer park of Judge Parker, which has recently been completed, and several occupants are already gliding along within its enclosure as majestically as they are wont to do in their native wilds. "What is curl-w?" said the stranger. "Curl-w! why, curl-w is a bird some thing like a snipe." "Could it fly?" "Yes." "Did it have wings?" "Yes." "Then I don't want any curl-w. Any thing that had wings and didn't leave this d-d country, I don't want for dinner."
