Their swinginfi clear of the track allowed the freight ours free scope to crash into one anoth er .--The fou th backward car on the eastward bound train was loaded with eighty barrels of coat oil. This car mounted clear over the tops of the others, and breaking in haives, scattered its inflamable freight mid the general wreck. The oil coming in contact with the live coals scattered from the locomotive, commenced to bura fariously, and soon the two trains were on
