ABOUT TOWN.

The prevailing question—How to keep cool?

A little daughter of Mr. Jas. Deahler, who resides in Wild Cat Hollow, while in the front yard at play, yesterday afternoon, and denly became overcome with the heat of the sun and fainted away. A physician was immediately summoned, and but for the active treatment resorted to the child would undoubtedly have died. It is somewhat better this morning, but some days must elapse before it fully recovers.

The thermometer stood 92 in the shade at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Mother, may I go out to swim?
Yes, my darling daughter,
But first of all go to Griffes Bros. store,
And get some Soda Water.

Like a dutiful daughter "she went."

A goodly number of the little ones connected with the Catholic Sunday School, left town this morning to attend the picnic at Miller Farm Station. A procession of the children, headed by a martial band, passed through the streets to the depot.

The irrepressible Taylor, J. H. D., of bill posting, sticking-distributing fame, has fallen from the paths of rectitude and gone to peddling fresh fish, which he receives daily from the Cleveland and Buffalo markets.—Soated in his new wagon behind a fast nag crying out "Ere's yer nice fresh fish!" he presents the appearance of a full grown Cape Cod fisherman.

We understand Messrs. Fisher, Norris & Co., the well known machinists and forgers, intend putting up a large trip hammer in their machine shop before long. It will be propelled by steam.

A few drops of rain this afternoon cheers us as we weighed mortals.

Whiskey and jansy is a favorite drink this fine weather.

The following patriotic sentiments, from the Pittsburgh Commercial, in regard to the decoration of the graves of our dead heroes to-day, will meet the sentiments of all who bear in mind the principles for which they died:

"To-morrow is Decoration Day. Like the anniversary of independence, this observance has sprung up directly out of the hearts of the people, and like it, too, has become an enduring memorial of patriotism and affection. Of all our public national ceremonies it is the most simple and touching. As there are few families that were not stricken by the sad casualties of the war, so there are none so poor in place or circumstance as not to be able to join in the appropriate and expressive act of strewing the resting places of our hallowed dead with the fragrant flowers of spring. It is true, as has been well said, that we cannot honor them. They are above us, like the stars. Yet we can honor ourselves by paying these tender tributes to their memory. We cannot do them any good, but they can do us good. We cannot exalt them, but perhaps the contemplation of the sacrifices which they made, and of the principles in defense of which they fell, may exalt us and put us into closer union and sympathy with themselves and with one another. For their grandeur and the grandeur of their cause increases with every year. We shall never realize its full magnitude and importance, but succeeding generations will. Yet we can at least show ourselves worthy of them. And we hope that since nearly every household in these cities has directly or indirectly felt the sorrows and known the bereavements of the war, so every one of them will stand represented in the sacred observances of the occasion.

"Four hundred thousand men,
The good, the brave, the true,
On battle plains, in prison pen,
Lie dead for me and you:
Good friend, for me and you."
Let the flower strewn graves of those who sleep around us attest how deeply we mourn and revere them."

The State Legislature adjourned yesterday. Let the people rejoice.

A row occurred between the XVth Amendment portion of community residing at the mouth of Bennehoff Run, last evening, which resulted in several different suits being brought before Justice Reynolds, the result of which will appear to-morrow.

A new well has been going down for some time past on the McFait Farm, adjoining the Wilson farm, which is making an excellent show. It is said to have thirty-seven feet of sand rock. The well was finished last night, and was to have commenced testing to-day. It is owned by Mr. J. B. Ingersoll, who has a lease of thirty acres on this farm.

Human nature shows many strange inconsistencies. How often do we find the strong and great possessed of petty foibles that would seem fit to even the lowest and weakest; and how often do we find in the weak temporary gleams of greatness.

Not once in a century do we find a perfect hero; but human nature is made up of strength and weakness, of vacillation and decision, of good qualities and bad ones, anomalies united in one heart; the general nature being directed by culture—perhaps by chance.

Quite a number of "old vets" left town this morning to attend the Decoration ceremonies at Franklin.

BECK BEER.—Beck beer has made its appearance. There are several fables connected with its name and origin. The one generally received as authentic is that in the old time a Ritter came from Brunswick to Bavaria, and put up at the castle of another knight. Beer was set before him, and he partook of it, but said that it was poor; not like that which he had brewed for him at home. His friend told him to call again next spring and bring a keg of his home-brewed with him. He did so, and the two friends drank potion for potion, each taking the other's beer. Presently the Brunswick knight felt sick, went out-doors and was found on all fours vainly trying to rise. On being interrogated he said it wasn't the beer that done it but a goat (Beck) had met him at the door, run between his legs and upset him. Hence ever afterwards the strong beer of spring went by the name of Beck beer.

Now that the origin of Beck Beer is understood, we may mention the fact that John Theobald's proprietor of the Opera House Saloon, will have several kegs of this delicious beverage on draught to-morrow.—Those who desire to see Old Beck himself should pay John a call to-morrow.

PRESBYTERY OF ERIC.—This body will meet in the Presbyterian Church, Titusville, this evening at 7 1/2 o'clock. Since the union of the two branches of the Presbyterian Church this body now numbers some seventy delegates. The Presbytery will remain in session till Wednesday evening.

Fifty Knights Templars from Pittsburgh, Allegheny City and Oil City, will sail for Europe in the steamer Oceanic, June 3d.—It is the intention to leave Pittsburgh on Wednesday' the 31 inst., at 4 20 p. m.—They will arrive in Philadelphia on Thursday, and on the evening of that day will be entertained at Masonic Hall, reaching New York city on the 2nd. Under the escort of deputations from the lodges of Philadelphia and Washington.

On the morning of their departure they will be conducted to the landing by the entire body of Knights Templars of New York city, about 1,500 in number. Three steamers have already been chartered to accompany the party down the bay. The tourists will be accompanied by the Great Western Band, of Pittsburgh, numbering over forty pieces. The "White Star Waltz" has been arranged for their use. The state rooms have been extended aft on the main deck of the Oceanic and there will now be accommodations for two hundred cabin passengers.

Thus comments the Woodhull & Claflin Weekly after the decision of Judge Ledwith on the Claflin conspiracy:

"Now that Justice Ledwith has rendered his decision in the case wherein Col. Blood was charged by Annie Claflin with assault, will the press, which was so eager to put the charge before the public, be as eager to give his justification and acquittal?"

Especially do we call attention of certain papers which published a libellous affidavit as that upon which the order of arrest was granted to the fact that said affidavit was never before the court. If they were deceived in supposing it was, would they not show wisdom by making the amende honorable without delay. Or will they assume the responsibility? If they published it, hoping that the trial would develop the supposed scandal and have been disappointed, let them say so; especially those which assumed their truth and enlarged upon them editorially.

PETROLEUM BOMBS.—The freedom with which the Parisians are using petroleum bombs, opens up a new and fearful possibility in revolutionary warfare. Nature has beneficently supplied us with this material for useful purposes, and the oil region is the main fountain from which it flows in quantities almost sufficient to give light to the civilized globe. If however, it is to be applied as an element of misery and destruction, the first well had better never been struck. Meanwhile nations stand agast, and recoil with horror at the possibility of a city like Paris being enveloped in liquid fire. The crime of using this substance for such a purpose, will bring upon its perpetrators a brand of infamy more deep and damning, than if they had entered into wholesale poisoning.

THE LOVE TOKEN.

"I pray thee, my love, a token,
A token unto me give,
So I may never, never forget
Your sweet self while I live.

Thus under a maiden bower
A knight with a silver tongue,
In a manly voice so loud and clear,
On a certain evening sang.

Then the pretty maiden sighed a sigh
And jumped from her little bed,
And quietly took the kerosene lamp
And dropped it on his head.

We learn wisdom from failure more than from success; we often discover what will not do, by finding out what will do and he who never made a mistake, never made a discovery.

Thirty-four rattlesnakes were killed at the head of little West Hickory creek, one day last week, and it wasn't much of a day for snakes either. A party went to Rattlesnake Den, near Trout Run, on the Clarion River, a few days since, and killed twenty-four, when the stench drove them away.

Philo Fields, the gambler who is accused by John G. Venable of defrauding him; was examined yesterday, before Justice Cox. John Dearborn was called as witness by the defence. At the conclusion of the direct examination, Venable was informed by the court that he had the right to ask any question he saw fit.

"May I ask him any question I please?" asked Venable.

"That is your privilege," answered the court.

With a look of profound wisdom, Venable said:

"Mr. Dearborn, the court gives me the right to ask you any questions I please.—Now I want to ask you if you ain't a G—d old fraud.—N. Y. Sun.
