Planting himself to Grow.

Dear little bright-eyed Willie,
Always so full of glee;
Always so very mischievous—
The pride of our home is he.

One bright summer day we found him
Close by the garden wall;
Standing so grave and dignified,
Beside a sunflower tall.

His tiny feet he had covered
With the moist and cooling sand,
The stalk of the great, tall sunflower
He grasped in his chubby hand.

When he saw us standing near him,
Gazing so wonderingly
At his baby-face, he greeted us
With a merry shout of glee.

We asked him what pleased him
He replied with a face aglow:
"Mamma, I'm going to be a man;
I've planted myself to grow."
