The Drug Is selling Dru ER than any

An advertising candle-maker modestly announces that "without intending to cast any reflections on the sun, I may venture to assert with confidence that my patent octagonal, double wick, spermaceti candles give the best light ever invented."

An exchange says that a man weighing four hundred and sixty-three pounds recently sat on a jury in Iowa. The jury in question must have felt very uncomfortable, if the weather in Iowa was as hot as it has been here lately.

In consequence of the frequent occurrence of cases of spontaneous combustion in "charged silks," the German railroads have refused to receive them for transportation. Charged silks are goods which have been treated with grease or oil, for the purpose of increasing their weight and their consequent apparent value, this being done mainly in France and Belgium.

The spirit of Captain Kidd seems to have come back in New York. Not a night passes without some case of piracy occurring among the vessels in the harbor.
