To-day is the anniversary of the great Chicago fire, when in a few short hours over two hundred million dollars worth of property was wiped up by the flames, thousands of people rendered homeless and destitute, and the greater part of the city laid in ruins. In anticipation of this anniversary, the Evening Post has published an elaborate article, giving in detail the work done during the year in the way of reconstruction. It is an exhibit which will gratify the average Chicagoan, however grand his ideas may be. It has been ascertained, after careful census, that more than 1,000 buildings have been erected during the year, and that in first-class structures alone something like $40,000,000 have been expended. The population, so far from having diminished, has increased by at least 50,000 souls, all self-supporting and reproductive. Work is plenty, wages reasonably high, and employees in good humor. The Palmer House, the Pacific, the Gardner, the Sherman, the Tremont, the Matheson, the Briggs, the Clarendon, Anderson's European, the Honore, Woodruff's, the Oriental, the Clifton, Wilson and Waughop's Burke's European, and all the other hotels of the city have been rebuilt, and in a style far surpassing their former proportions. Of the theaters, McVicker's, Alken's Hooly's opera house, Myer's opera house, the academy of music, Halsted street opera house, and Nixon's amphitheatre, are all completed or nearly so. Thirteen new churches have taken the places of those destroyed. Five new grain elevators, with largely increased capacity, have been constructed. Hundreds of the most elegant and substantial business blocks have been reared in the heart of the city; and within another year almost all traces of the great conflagration will have disappeared.

Detroiters fight hard. At a dance given in that city the other night six men had their eyes bleaked, one received a bite in the cheek, two got bloody noses, and the amount of hair pulled out of one left on the floor was nearly enough to stuff fifteen large pin cushions. In addition to this thirteen plates of glass were broken.

THE ELECTION.

The election passed off very quietly in this place, yesterday. The Republican State ticket received a majority of 4. On the congressional vote Richmond received 268 votes and Griffith 252—a majority of 18. In 1870 Gillilan received 265 votes and Griffith 228. This shows a Democratic gain over the vote of that year. The full vote of both parties was cast. Here is the vote:

The Delegates at Large and District Delegates voted averaged about the same as the vote on the County ticket.

The election returns of last night indicated the State to have gone Republican by a large majority, claimed as high as 20,000 to 25,000.

The latest dispatches received up to the hour of going to press, concede the State to have gone Republican by from 12,000 to 15,000 majority.

Ohio goes Republican. Nebraska gives a Republican majority. Indiana is doubtful. We shall probably have complete returns by to-morrow morning.

The result of the election is a great disappointment to the losing side, as even Republicans, or many of them, were of the opinion that Buckalew would be the successful candidate.

TO OIL OPERATORS.—C. D. Jennison, of Kane City, desires to notify oil operators that his patent Seed Bags or Device for Shutting Off Water in Oil Wells, are just what is needed during the thirty days shutting down movement. They are warranted to shut the water off entirely no matter how long the well may be stopped. Oil operators are invited to call on or address Mr. J. at Kane City, Venango County, Pa. 2w.

The Republicans jubilated this afternoon by firing off an arvil several times.

A later dispatch says Indiana has gone Republican by 3,000 to 4,000 majority.

A real case of otello Desdemona is reported from Albany. A colored man in the employ of a wealthy farmer who had one fair daughter and no more, won that fair daughter's heart by telling her of the dangers he had passed in his redemption from slavery, his service as a body servant in Sherman's army, in its march to the sea, and all the "battles, sieges, fortunes" that he had undergone. The story of the dusky Moor so captivated the gentle maiden's heart that she eloped and married him without her parents knowledge and consent.

It is said that sundry persons in Baltimore have become so lost to every consideration of humanity as to attempt to get up a corner in the oyster market.

The discovery of rich deposits of tin in Australia bids fair to prove of great commercial importance. The government geologist of Southern Queensland and thinks the richness of the ore quite unparalleled in any other country, and the professor of mining at Melbourne pronounces its abundance marvelous.

At Mankato, Minn., a woman was accused of throwing a baby into the river. The river was raked by an incoherent community and a dead cat brought to light.

The other Sunday the following was posted up in the lobby of the Cambridge, Washington County, N. Y. Presbyterian Church: "Notice—The person who stole 'Songs of the Sanctuary' from seat No. 32 should improve the opportunity of singing them here, as they will have no occasion to sing them hereafter."

The New York Bulletin holds these views

in regard to the producers' movement: While the present movement can hardly be justified on sound, economic principles, yet it is marked by certain redeeming features that very considerably modify the strictures that unusually apply to arbitrary attempts to control the natural course of trade. The oil business from first to last has been at the mercy of speculators. Indeed, it started into existence under the excitement of one of the most remarkable speculations of the age. The low and frequently losing prices at which oil was at first sold forced it into consumption, and it seemed to fill a new and sudden want of the mass of consumers. Production on a vast and extensive scale was thus occasioned, and the local banks stimulated the movement by the aid which many of them imprudently extended to operators. During the last ten years production frequently fell below a paying point. But the recent combination of the oil refiners has at last precipitated a crisis, and compelled the adoption of some means to prevent the utter ruin of the producing interests.

The Chicago Times publishes a lengthy review of the operations of the Relief Society. It says: A concise statement will show the world's charity to Chicago to have been about as follows. These figures are based on the reports about given, which, in every case where the amount is not stated as estimated, is authentic, and estimates of gentlemen of good judgment who have been closely connected with the relief work during the past winter, and are capable of arriving at figures approximately correct: Amount received by the Chicago Relief and Aid Society $5,500,000 00 Amount received by other societies 439,704 50 Miscellaneous sums contributed by individuals, and for specific objects, and values of food, clothing fuel, etc 500,000 00 Amount contributed and disbursed by Cincinnati, Milwaukee, Louisville, St. Louis, Indianapolis, etc 504,552 00 Grand total $6,944,256 50 The Relief Committee have on hand about a million dollars.

The first boat of Peter the Great, which is looked upon by the Russians as the progenitor of the Russian fleet, has been brought from the Moscow Exhibition to its former resting-place, by the fort of St. Peter and Paul, with ceremonies similar to those which accompanied its transport to Moscow some time since.

The American Volunteer.

This is the taking title of a popular literary paper which comes to us from Pittsburgh, Pa., D. Lowry & Co., publishers. A single glance at its varied contents dispels the idea that Pittsburgh is devoted exclusively to the business of making nails, glass, &c. The sheet before us will compare favorably with the best weeklies published in the East. Filled with spicy, relishing stories, ably written serials from the pens of the most popular authors, poems, biographical and historical sketches, the Volunteer bids to fair to "become a welcome visitor to every fireside. One noteworthy feature is the contents of the eighth page, which is devoted exclusively to the discussion of questions which interest the surviving soldiers and sailors of the late war. The column devoted to correspondence gives more information of a valuable nature than can be found in any other publication in the country. Nothing that could offend the most fastidious is admitted to its columns. We can conscientiously recommend the Volunteer as a fireside paper. Terms $3 per year.

In the opium or "slave trade" at Macao, there appears from all accounts, as the brokers say, "to be a good deal doing."

An extraordinary equine-noctial seems to have occurred in England. London papers say that among other facts of unpleasant nature which the general up-turn caused by the preparation for the Autumn military manoeuvres has revealed, is the falling off of the supply of horses in England, not only in number but in breed.

The cheerful chestnut vender has assumed his position on the street corners, and the hand-organ is stowed away until another season.
