How doth the little busy bee improve each shining hour is illustrated by a man who bought four swarms of bees ten years ago, and has now an income of $1,000 per year from honey. Go and buy four swarms of bees, young man.—Ex.

Then advertise the honey, cheat the printer out of the price of the advertisement, ease your conscience by speaking ill of him upon every occasion. "Some things can be done as well as others."

The continued cold weather has compelled Burton & Kooker, the well known coal dealers, to put a night watch at their coal cars and coal bins. Only a few nights since one of the firm caught quite a party making a raid for coal, headed by that great civil engineer, Flora McCarthy, who when Burton came around the cars with a lantern jumped from the top of one of them, and "flew like a burrod," remarking when he arrived at headquarters, that he hadn't "brushed fur two blocks."

Oh! Flora, Flora, why will you sin. For a single glass of sugar and gin. Next!

Attention is called to the notice of meeting of the Republican electors of Petroleum Centre precinct, at the Petroleum Producer's Rooms, to-morrow (Friday) evening, for the purpose of nominating delegates, &c. Every Republican is requested to attend.

Drilling commences on the new Watson well, near Cherrytree Village, today. John F. Tarr, an old citizen of that borough, desires us to announce that the prospect for the striking of a five hundred barrel well is good, in his opinion.

Venango County Court Record.

FRANKLIN, January 29, 1873.

On Monday the regular term of the Court of this county met for the trial of criminal cases, and there has been disposed of the following:

Henry Radin—Charge, assault and battery. Not pros; entered on paying of costs.

John James et al.—Charge, surety of the peace. On hearing the Court dismissed the complaint at costs of prosecutor.

Francis Mullen—Charge, surety of the peace. On hearing the Court dismissed the complaint at costs of defendant.

Joseph Paton—Indictment, aggravated assault and battery. Not pros; entered on payment of costs.

Elizabeth Jones—Indictment, murder and concealing the death of a bastard child. This case is the famous Oil City infanticide matter. The trial occupied a day and a half, and the jury after an absence of three hours and a half returned a verdict of not guilty.

John Thompson and Thomas Reiser—There were three indictments against these parties for larceny at Petroleum Centre.—The defendant, Thomas Reiser, plead guilty to each charge, and the defendant, John Thompson, plead not guilty, went to trial, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty in each case.

Quite a number of ludicrous incidents occurred at the fire, yesterday, which are worthy of note:

An aged Irish woman, when the fire first broke out, ran out of her house with the exclamation—"Holy mother of Moses protect us," at the same time emptying on the fire a bottle of what purported to be holy water. The holy water did not appear to have much effect on the fire as the buildings all burned down.

In a house a short distance from those burned was a sick lady who was unable to be moved. Several men were on the roof hard at work in the bitter cold endeavoring to save the building which they finally succeeded in doing. In the meantime a good brother might have been seen rushing into the house and administering consolation to the lady as follows: "My dear woman, do not be alarmed; trust in the Lord, your home will be saved," running out directly and viewing the situation, and then rushing back to administer consolation. The house was saved and some of the boys are irreverent enough to think the Lord had nothing to do with it, and that the good brother might have labored to better advantage shoveling snow on the building. The reader can judge for himself.

Just before the McNiery building fell, a large black cat shot out of the cellar, with back up and each particular hair erect, creating considerable excitement among the bystanders for the moment.

We might mention that the unfortunates who were burned out are poor people and deserving the sympathy and aid of all. We trust the charitable minded will aid these poor people in the hour of their distress.

The coming election on the Local Option Law, is exciting considerable comment among our citizens. The prevailing opinion appears to be opposed to the law. We are free to express the opinion that we do not believe the law will work even if it should be adopted. The present license law if carried out would remedy the evils complained of by the friends of the law.—The vote on the question will be light.

They are making silver dollars at the mines in San Francisco for use in China, where, it is gravely stated, they are very scarce and much wanted. We do not know of a country in which they are not very scarce, or in which they are not much wanted.

The pelvic bone of a mastodon was recently discovered near Granville, Ohio, by an engineer on the Atlantic and Lake Erie Railroad.

The whole number of soldiers graves to be provided with head stones, it appears, is 308,372. The cemeteries containing these three hundred thousand dead are scattered widely, numbering about a hundred different localities.

Sombody recently greased 200 feet of down grade horse railroad in Jersey City, and passengers were treated to a rapid slide and sweet little "tip-over" when the foot of the hill was reached.

There was so much swearing among the trunk heavers on the line of road over which Almes travels, that it often takes several hours for the rails to cool that other trains can pass. Almes has 120 trunks besides the one to which her head is attached.

Great suffering still exists in Minnesota, owing to the congealed state of all alcoholic beverages.

A yankee named Smith opened up a first class tavern in classic Athens.

ONLY A SONG.

Only a song that a maiden sang. Yet it stayed in the young man's heart all day.

And his mind from business wandered away And the bright blue eyes and soft brown hair,

Gleaned out from the pages before him there, And the silvery tones through his memory rung.

The song was of love and he thought, 'Can it be

That she thought of me as she sang so sweet?"

And ah how the thrills of a love complete Seemed stirring his heart, and filling his brain

As he thought, "She will sing me the song again. And I will ask her to live with me."

They walk together Life's paths to-day. And their hearts are merry and light and free And life is as sweet as life can be;

And the happy years glide swiftly from view, And their love though old seems ever new, Which trouble or grief can never destroy.

Last week's very admirable young lady of this city died after a long and lingering illness of that fatal disease consumption.—She was in full possession of her faculties, and conversed with her relatives almost to the instant when she peacefully fell asleep. She was a girl of over twenty years of age, and had always borne an exemplary character, and for her death had few tears.—Some months ago an aunt to whom she was greatly attached died, and half an hour before the young girl died she said to her weeping relatives who were around the bed: "Aunt Maggie was here a few moments ago but she has gone. I want to go and be at rest, but I can't leave until she comes back for me." She conversed calmly with those about her, gave directions relative to the memorial gifts to her relatives and the manner of her burial, and then, with eyes brightening as if recognizing some loved ones, to all others present unseen, her spirit passed from its earthly tenement.—[Baltimore American.

Illinois milliners are immigrating to Kansas by the hundred.

Ice is nine inches thicker in Kansas this year than ever before.

"A skunk jumped over a stump into a skunk hole," repeated as rapidly as the tongue will allow is a very favorite juvenile literary amusement. And that we supposed, was all a skunk was good for. That animal even failed to secure a half holiday to a district school somewhere we read of, where a mischievous boy put a skunk in the teacher's desk, supposing it would order the teacher into a dismissal for the day. But the teacher—a woman of course—put a clothes line on her nose, and the school went on, the pupils being obliged to keep their hands under the desk, and could not, therefore hold their noses. But skunks are useful as we see in the debate, of the Michigan Horticultural convention, where a member protested against their destruction as they protected trees from the white grub so destructive.

Quincy, Illinois, has packed 70,000 tons of ice to use in her next summer's cocktails and lemonades.

At the little village of St. James, Minnesota, eleven people were frozen to death during the late storms.

An Indiana editor hires a band to serenade him twice a week, and he always responds by a column of thanks next day.

The obesity of a Keokuk, Iowa, hog, is attributed to the fact that he devoured his owner's son, a nice juicy lad of four years.

A Chelsea, Mass., man has a dog that is so fond of chicken meat that he has nearly cleaned out two or three roosts in his vicinity.

The lovers of pork in New Zealand are happy in the knowledge that there are about 1,000 more pigs than human beings on the island.

In addition to the sleeping cars that are a feature of all regular trains leaving St. Paul swarming coaches have been added since the roads have been snowed under.

Only three wives were thrashed by their husbands in St. Paul Sunday, and yet we are told that Minnesota is the place where men enjoy the comfort of life.

Fleas are so thick in San Diego, Cal., that it is necessary to blast through a strata of these lively insects two feet thickness to reach the surface of the soil proper.

The great fire at Chicago in 1871 was disastrous in more ways than one. Among other things it developed a peculiar class of fire reporters who have thrived ever since. This is the way one of them tells about the destruction of the First Congregational Church in Chicago: "The angel of fire has made his New Year's call to Chicago in the idea of January, 1873. His crimson wings flapped in our skies last evening, and fanned into destructive life columns of flame which swallowed up the stately edifice, dedicated to God's worship, which graced the city."

From the Sacramento Union of January 20th we get the account of the fight between the troops and the Modocs on the Friday previous. Our telegraph dispatches gave us all the particulars that are essential, except the fact that it is certain the Modocs have received Indian reinforcements, and the opinion of the guide who piloted the troops into the lava-bed, and who says it will require a thousand men to dislodge the Modocs.

An Omaha man tried to get stone blind drunk on a jug of linseed oil, but had to give it up. His feelings can be painted with a white lead pencil, but not with ours.

Temperance circles are agitated by the threats of the farmers of Illinois, Iowa, and other States, who intimate they will start distilleries and thus consume their surplus stock of corn.

A New Jersey jewelry manufacturing firm recently put down new flooring in their workshops, and the gold they obtained in burning the old flooring not only paid for the new one, but for putting two coats of paint on the entire factory.
