Among the killed in the terrible railroad accident, near Scrubgrass, yesterday, is the name of William Casey, a well known sporting character. The report has it that Casey "died at his post" while nobly striving to save the life of a fellow being—the little newsboy. If such is the case, and there appears to be little doubt, it takes off the curse of many of the evil deeds ascribed to him, and proves true the old verse—
"But whether on the scaffold high,
Or in the battle's van;
The fittest place for man to die,
Is where he dies for man."
Mr. Casey has a wife and child residing in this place.

The great wrestling match for $2,000 and the championship, between Homer Lane of New York and Lang Dolan, came off at Brighton, near Boston, on Feb. 7th, resulting in Lane winning the two first falls, the money and the championship—the "cross buttock" and "cross toe lock" doing Dolan's business for him quicker than we can write it. Now that Lane is the champion, could we not get up a match between him and citizen Tom Maloy. Lane has experience, but Tom is "light but very quick," and could get all the backing needed from either Plumer or Kane City. "Av kourse" Tom is a little out of gear just now, but "sheep's pinc" and "Tona-wanda hitters" would soon get him in condition. Time!

W. J. L. Keffler has purchased the interest of Davis in the Youth's Gazette, publishes at this place and will hereafter conduct it business. We may add that the Gazette is improving with each issue.

Nearly one-fifth of the population of Berlin are paupers.

On Friday and Saturday evenings of this week, Miss Fannie B. Price, an old time favorite actress will appear at Sobel's Opera House. The Petersburg Progress says of the company:

The announcement that Miss Fannie B. Price was to play "Fanchon," at the Opera House on Thursday evening last, drew out a large, and fashionable audience. Every seat in the house was taken and occupied before the close of the second act. Although Fanchon has been produced here before, this season, it is admitted the rendition last evening was, we were about to say incomparable. Miss Price as the Cricketer, called forth the admiration of the audience repeatedly. The troupe gave excellent support, and more particularly do we speak of Mr. Frank Hostwick, as Barbeaud, and Mr. Tom. Calaman as Didier. The performance throughout was highly appreciated, and we can safely promise good houses during the remainder of their stay.

We have many among our readers who came from Northern New York—particularly from Jefferson, Lewis and Oswego counties. They knew, in their earlier years, how it was themselves in "old fashioned" winter, to tunnel the snow from the front door to the gate; to walk—yea verily to skate—miles on the snow crust over fields and fences; and there are some of our readers who can back us up in the assertion that, in the Redfield woods of Oswego county—where the speckled trout disport themselves in summer—the people use two year old snow. No one need dispute our tales of the winters of that region, for we have good witnesses at hand.

The present winter in Northern New York is one of the old style. The "oldest inhabitant" of Jefferson county does not remember so much cloudy weather at the same season of the year as there is this year. Watertown claims eighteen feet of snow fall this winter; the mercury at Evan's Mills stood thirty-seven degrees below zero, while in Lowville, Lewis county it stood at thirty degrees below zero. Denmark in that county has not reported and we imagine it will not until the thaw gets down to it in the spring.

The Democratic Township Convention, met at the Petroleum Producer's Rooms, yesterday afternoon.

On motion, Dr. T. H. Stuart was elected Chairman of the Convention, and H. E. Stevens, Secretary.

After the meeting was organized, a motion was made to proceed to the nomination of officers which was carried. The following is the result:

- Constable, George Norton.
  - Assessor, Assistant Assessor, Hugh Joint, John Ricketts.
  - Town Clerk, Hugh Joint.
  - Treasurer, J. B. McGraw.
  - Road Commissioners, J. S. Shearer, 1 year, D. S. Keyes, 3 years.
  - School Directors, Geo. W. Westlake, 3 years, R. M. Hutchinson, 3 years, James Anderson, 1 year.
  - Auditor, John Ricketts.
  - Path Masters, James Fauquier, Jacob Allison, Michael Boyles.
  - Judges of Election; N. Seymour, Rouseville, Wm. J. McCray, Petroleum Centre, James Tyson, Rouseville, Geo. C. Ricketts, Plumer.
  - Inspectors of Election, J. F. Nealey, A. W. Cowell, Owen Gaffney, W. Campbell.
- On motion adjourned.

Dr. Thayer is in Pittsburgh on business, connected with his establishment, which he intends putting on the road about the first of May. This show of the Doctor's will be something "new and novel," an experiment which it is to be hoped will prove profitable to the proprietor.—N. Y. Clipper.

The "new and novel" part of the show probably consists in the Doctor going to startle his friends by trying to get through the tenting season without a "bust up."

The new well of Bly & Maybe, on Sage Run, two miles from Oil City, struck last Saturday, is flowing about fifty barrels. It is near Greene well No. 2, and is twenty feet in the sand.

Greene well No. 2, on Sage Run, continues to flow over three hundred barrels, with no symptoms of diminishing. It is beyond question the largest well in the Region.

Doctor Fee has ruck a new well on his farm last Saturday. Its production is variously estimated at from fifty to seventy-five barrels.

ANOTHER HORROR.

Accident on the Allegheny Valley Railroad.

Three Killed and Fifteen Wounded.

SCRUBGRASS, February 10.

The Brady's Bend accommodation bound north on the Allegheny Valley Railroad, met with an accident involving the loss of three lives and the injury of several passengers, at a point about eight miles this side or north of a place called Black's Siding, ten miles south of here. The train is a mixed one, leaving Brady's at 12:25 p. m., and is due at the siding at 3 p. m. To-day it was made up with engine No. 37, next seven loaded oil cars, and last an iron clad passenger coach. It was in charge of conductor James Bonner and engineer Samuel Weigle, and at the time of the occurrence of the accident was nearly thirty minutes late, and was running twenty miles per hour.

The precise point of the accident is a curve one mile south of Rosedale, and when rounding the curve, the fireman noticed that a piece about four feet was broken out of one of the outside rails. He notified the engineer, who whistled for brakes, but the warning came too late to allow of an effectual application of them, and the seventh car of the train, in passing over the gap, was thrown from the track, dragging four oil cars and the passenger coach in the rear down the bank. The embankment at this point is about fifteen feet high, and the coach was turned once and one and a half times over, and landed bottom side up out in the river, and in about four feet of water. The coupling of the oil cars broke, the tanks which contained about eighty barrels oil each, a large portion of which ran down into the passenger car and catching fire from the forward stove, soon enveloped the whole car in flames. There were at this time about twenty-five passengers in the car, who of course rushed for the doors and windows, and with the exception of those killed, got safely out, although a few of them were more or less burned. Efforts which soon proved successful, were made to extinguish the flames, and then the bodies of the dead were recovered, and the injured properly cared for by the company's surgeons and employees working under the direction of Col. J. J. Lawrence, Superintendent of the road, who fortunately arrived soon after the accident occurred.

SCRUBGRASS, PA., February 10.

The following is a correct statement of the accident on the Allegheny Valley railroad which occurred this afternoon:

The Oil City accommodation, with a train of oil cars, when running on time near Black's Siding, at 3 o'clock p. m., a few miles north of Emlenton, broke a rail, and five cars of oil and the coach were thrown from the track down the bank. The cars at once took fire, but all the passengers escaped except three who were killed. The killed were Scott, a newsboy and William Casey, said to be a sporting man, and one unknown.

The injured are John L. Hanna, 52 Wood street, Pittsburgh, badly burned, sent to Emlenton; Michael Kane, Petersburg, track laborer, gone home; George P. Riddle, Emlenton, lips cut slightly, gone home; C. W. Kidder, slightly burned on the head, gone to Franklin; A. C. George, of Rouseville, burnt slightly, gone home; Mathew Collins, Hamilton, Canada, head and hand burnt, gone to Oil City; R. C. Coulter, Petersburg, burnt in head, gone home; J. B. Hoover, Franklin, head and hands burnt, gone home; Alfred S. Hamilton, Greenburg, Pa., head burnt, gone to Parker's; Harry Wilbur, Corry, head and hand burnt, gone home; O. E. Singleton, Parkers, slightly injured, gone home; John Deihanty, Tidouise, burnt on head and hand, will go home to-morrow.

The injuries to all are slight; except Mr. Hanna, who is the most injured, but it is hoped not seriously.

The track at the place of the accident was as good as any on the road, the ties all sound and the iron good, but the hard freezing weather has caused the rails to break worse than ever before.

The company's surgeons and others were promptly on hand, and every attention paid to the injured that was possible.

The Coroner is now at the scene of the accident, and will enquire into the cause or cause.
