Dodge City, a station on the Atchafalaya, Topoka and Santa Fe Railroad, is the chief point of shipment of buffalo meat and hides in Kansas. The principal business of the town is the outfitting of hunters. Since September 22d, 1872, when the railroad reached Dodge City, there have been shipped from that point to Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago and eastern cities 43,029 buffalo hides and 1,435,200 pounds of buffalo meat. The above figures represent the results of three months' hunting, but the grand total for the season of 1872-73 around Dodge City, will, it is estimated, reach 100,000 buffalo hides. Under such wholesale killing, it is believed, that the buffaloes will speedily become extinct on the western prairies.

A correspondent writes us from Galloway City, on the Galloway farm, as follows: Galloway City is a small village about one and one-half miles from Franklin, on Demuseytown road, and located on the Galloway Farm.

It comprises two grocery stores, several boarding houses, two hardware stores owned by G. W. & A. A. Plumer and Elliott Bros., where all kind of hardware and oil well supplies can be had.

On the corner of Main and Agnes streets stands the residence of J. B. Burton, one of the leading operators, formerly of Kane City.

The Pig's Ear Restaurant, formerly kept by Wales, Babcock & Co., has been closed for some days. It will be opened again in a few days.

Under the law of the United States, it might become a question whether it was legal for a user of the weed to supply a friend with a "chaw." The status very distinctly states that no one must sell or dispose of tobacco in large or small quantities without paying first a license of five dollars.

Meadville, Pa., has become the centre of various industries necessary to produce the machinery used in the oil districts. Castings for well rigs are made a specialty in the foundries. Ingenious devices for drilling and polishing the interior of oil pumps are in operation and a special machine is mentioned which drills out at the same time four solid bars of iron. The bars are placed in an upright position and bored from the bottom, so that the clippings clear themselves from the cylinder, and the work does not require a constant attendant. A new lock of oil wells, made of brass and of the size of a watch, is also mentioned as worthy of notice.

"Old Persimmon," a new Kane City correspondent, says Cleaver No. 1, an old correspondent, attended a dance recently and forgot to take his partner to supper. Mr. Brown was blest with a young son on Monday. Weight "just nine pounds."

C. H. Williams, the coal dealer, advertises in today's paper that he has just received a large stock of coal, comprising all kinds of stove, chestnut and nut coal, for both house and engine use, "which the same" he proposes to sell cheaper than the cheapest. A call will probably convince the purchaser, as he assures us he "means business on the first floor."

The new well on the Lamb farm, mention of which we made a day or two since, was completed yesterday morning, and was to have been tubed in the afternoon preparatory to testing. The well is owned by Geo. Repler, and has 67 feet of fine sand rock. The show is said to be excellent for a big well in which event stirring times in developing may be anticipated thereabouts. This farm is located near the Octave district.

The Pittsburgh papers record a desperate shooting affray between two gamblers named Harrison and Fairchild, in which both of them were dangerously wounded, and a man named Hughes slightly injured. All of these worthies formerly traced the oil region with their presence. They held forth in Petroleum Centre in the palmy days of keno and faro.

The coal trade is quite lively at present.

Our old friend, Major Goodman, of Tionesta, was in town yesterday. Since his last visit here the Major has struck a streak of luck in the purchase of timber land in Forest county. He is liable to make a good round stake, which will rejoice his many friends hereabouts.

THE PRIZE FIGHT.

The advent of the representatives of the "bruising" fraternity among us, as our readers have been informed, was signalized by a characteristic free fight, the particulars of which have been detailed. The subsequent movements of the siders and abettors, after leaving this city were in keeping with the brutal conduct exhibited in this city. The train that bore the champions of the ring to Collier's station resembled a bedlam. The adherents of Hicken and Campbell were so earnest in their support of their respective favorites that on more than one occasion serious consequences were apprehended. This feature, so common to the many exhibitions termed ring fights, was kept up until the party reached the station.

Some delay was experienced when the party arrived upon the ground. The principals were willing, anxious to begin business, but the backers demurred. Certain formalities were to be preserved. When these were settled, a hitch arose concerning the referee. After considerable wrangling, the parties stately interested compromised by selecting one Seddons. This was the signal for business. It was noon when the principals stepped into the ring ready for the encounter. Despite the intense cold, the excitement of the crowd at juncture rose to fever heat.

It is not our purpose to give the brutal details that followed. The fighting favored Campbell at the onset, but the tide soon changed in favor of Hicken. Twenty-four rounds were fought, when a difficulty occurred between the seconds, which finally resulted in a general row. Campbell's seconds, namely, Butt Reilly and Ony Geaghan, raised a point that Hicken's seconds, Ned O'Baldwin and Abe Smith refused to consider. Geaghan terminated the wary encounter that ensued by knocking O'Baldwin down, whereupon one Murphy, a backer of Campbell's fired a pistol in the air, and struck the "Giant" with it. The blow was a terrific one, but fortunately it did not fall upon a vital spot. The "Giant" still lives to fight and run away. Here was the signal for a general melee, in which the backers of both parties took an active part. When the row was quelled, there was no disposition evinced on the part of the referee to render a decision. Thus the principals had their trouble without reaching any conclusion, further than to inflict a severe body beating upon each other. Campbell suffered the worst in the encounter beyond all doubt. Hicken's face shows comparatively little punishment. His body did not escape so easily, however. In the impromptu row that followed the set fight—Ony Geaghan succeeded in whipping O'Baldwin in the briefest space of time possible. The "Joint" caught it heavily.

The crowd returned to the City yesterday evening at ten minutes past eight o'clock, considerably the worst for the liquor consumed during the day's proceedings. The principals did not reach the depot. Coaches waited them at Birmingham where they were taken in charge of by their friends. Great dissatisfaction prevails among the "fancy" at the result of the fight, the impression prevailing that the referee will not render a decision. In view of the fact that men stood over him with razors, and threat came to cut the rope, spiriting the principals out of the ring meantime, almost any man would be excusable in declining to give a decision.—[Pittsburgh Mail.

The officers of the Pan-Handle Railroad have discovered an extensive swindling operation, which has been carried on for two years by employees of the company, working between Cincinnati and Pittsburgh. The modus operandi was for the conductor to take up the tickets on the train and pass them back to the station agent without punching them. The loss to the road is estimated at about $800,000. One person has been arrested, and fifteen others are implicated.
