Plumer Items.

The corruption which has been so thoroughly ventilated at Washington this winter, seems to have become epidemic extending its ramifications North, South, East, West. Not even this romantic village is exempt. We are informed that one of our citizens' barn has been entered at 3 o'clock when good people are safely reposing with the embrace of Morpheus and sundry articles disappeared, certainly not without hands. But those hands with the balance of anatomy that makes the genus homo is yet unknown.

We learn with regret that our oldest and most respected citizen, Mr. A. S. Prather, intends moving to Jamestown, N. Y. Mr. P. was born and brought up upon the farm which he now vacates after so many years, having been engaged in the store and banking business in Plumer during its better days and at Pitohole, reeking business at Oleopella and banking at Sharon, and a large manufacturing business at Jamestown. It is purely business relations that causes him to leave the old homestead. While Plumer loses one of the oldest and best citizens, Jamestown will gain a good citizen, imbued with public spirit, enterprise and capital—a desirable acquisition. We have to record one of those domestic scandals which will happen in spite of fate. The party of the first is a full grown man. Second part his housekeeper. This couple who have been living together for several years with seeming serenity and peacefulness only upon an occasion like the present, have two children, one the "proggeny" of first part and one party of second part. It seems that these had no particular love for each other and were much given to quarreling, forgetting that "Dogs and cats," &c. This did not suit either party of first or party of second part, and caused expressions and views to be given freely upon both sides. Party of first part thought he would compromise the matter by getting a place for each of the children and they could live harmoniously and felicitously so long as they "choose." This did not suit party of second part who exclaimed indignantly: "If her child, went she would go too." Party of first part not caring to abrogate what he considered a wise plan, "cutch to it" and "let her go."

The Record is increasing its circulation in Plumer. It has a peculiar fascination for the Plumer, "School Marms" which seems preternatural and prejudicial as they denounce it (Record) as a low vile contemptible sheet, "and utterly loath your correspondent. If they will allow us and excuse our breach of pacifiousness—why do you read the "obnoxious sheet?"

Our readers will bear in mind the concert of the Plumer Choral Union, in the U. P. Church, Plumer, this evening. We understand that quite a number intend going from here. We feel safe in saying they will enjoy a rare musical treat and one that will amply repay them for the time and expense attendant upon going. Among the list of amateurs musicians will be found the names of several of our townspeople who enjoy an enviable reputation as first class musicians. We hope to see a full attendance at the concert this evening.

Citizen Malloy indulged his fighting proclivities again last night, claiming that he was the champion feather weight of the union. As a matter of course he received a drubbing, and now has nothing to say except that he is "bully" of the light weight. Now let the light weights show up.

Down the River.—There were ninety two persons, residents of Titusville and vicinity, who left for the down river oil region one day this week. A number of them had previously made arrangements to go into business, some in Butler and some in Clarion counties, while the others went to look up a place to locate—Titusville Cour.

At West Levent, Me., there is such a depth of snow over a portion of the county road that a funnel was cut through the drift, and for two days teams have been driven under a snow arch about forty rods in length.

A number of our citizens have returned from the Butler oil fields and do not give so good an account of that region as most of the newspapers published thereabout state. With only 12 to 17 feet of third sand rock and wells 1,500 to 1,700 feet deep, we imagine some one will get bit fearfully.

A man who often does business around town, and who, by the way, is a meek and lowly cuss in his conversation with the people of the world, found a wasp nest the other day, with its little occupants apparently all frozen to death. While looking at about one of the ways fell down the back of his neck. In a few minutes the man began to tremble in the face, and in half a minute all his cloths were off and he was heard talking with himself in a very hurried manner and with much profanity. The next of his body had revived the wasp.
