This is Decoration Day. The graves of the dead heroes are being decorated with the bright fresh flowers of spring, all over this brond land of ours. May the memory of the prave boys whose life lights went out in the storm of battle remain ever green in the hearts of their countrymen. "South winds blow soft where the soldler

lies sleeping

Tread with your lightest step, whisper more low,

Oh, waft to its home that spirit undying-Never a mission more pure shall ye know! Long be his name, his fame and his glory, Joined in our bearts with the land of his birtb.

And let als deeds live brightest in story, Chanted and sung by the fairest of earth! Keep bright the stars he left to your keeplog;

Soil not the banner-for age let it waves Over the land where the soldier is sleeping; Never should land be so proud of their graves!

The Venango Spectator bas the follow/ ng bumorous account of a wedding which recently came of in that city:

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL,-Charles Armstrong, a young colored man, had been pining in the county jail some twenty days or more to answer a charge of seduction -Miss Wilson, a young woman of his own per sussion, had loved Charles, not wisely but too well. As was observed by one of her friends-"De time had come to prosecute de man." In his lonely cell the ering and dus ky lover had time to meditate, and he min, gled poetry with his bread and water diet ! Contrition came to him, and he thought he ought to repair the wrong be had committed He told the Sheriff that he was "ready to marry de gal." So there was a bridal on Thursday evening last in the Sheriff's office Alderman Heasley uniting the parties, in the presence of a goodly number of witness es. From a long "pome," written by Charles in prison, we extract the closing verse. It is a little irregular in measure and rhythm, but the same fault has been noticed in the production of Tupper and Walt. Whitman: Oh, as I lay sleeping,

I dremp I had a dream; I dremp I was down by the the rivers Down by a purling stream, With a charming girl beside me And she was a setting still,

When I woke up broken-hearted

IN a Fix. -The Scranton Free Press tells the following good story on the foreman

About eleven o'clock one night, the wife of one of our citizens 'awoke ber bushend and said, "there's some one rapping at the outside door." Insamuch as two or three young men board there who ere liable to be out a little late there was nothing peculiar about this, and he wandered forth in his night shirt to let the young men in. It was very dark, and the bired girl, bearing the rapping at the door also went forth to open it. The girl got there a moment first and began to feel for the bolt-then our friend arrived and likewise began to feel for the bolt He reached out both bands and a moment leter discovered that he had his arms about the bired girl, who like him, wasn't dressed to receive company. There a window in the door, and to essist who; ever was inside to finding the bolt, one of the boys outside struck a match, the light of which shown through the glass and revealed to their actouched gaze a state of things that almost took their breath away.

A short time since, in this city, a brilliant and much admired lady, who had been suffering for some time with trouble of the eyes, was led to hear a speedy change for the worse, and immediately consulted her physician. An examination discovered a sudden and fatal failing of the optic nerve, and information was imparted as gently as possible that the patient could not retain her sight more than a few days at most, and was liable to be totally deprived of it at any moment. The afficied mother returned to her home. quietly made such arrangements as would occur to one about to commence so dark a journey of life. and then had her two little children attired in their brightest and sweetest costumes. brought before ber: and so, with their little faces lifted to hers, and tears gathering for some great misfortune that they hardly real zed, the light faded out of the mother's eyes, leaving an ineffectual picture of those dearest to her on earth—a memory of bright faces that will console her in many a dark bour .- [Covington, Ky., Journal.
