POLICE.—Yesterday a queer old suit in which the social system of Pioneer was somewhat exposed, came up before Justice Reynolds. It appears one Bland, a colored individual, has a better half who is given to "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain." A short time since, according to his testimony, he caught his better half in too close quarters according to his views, with a certain white man, known as the "lightning ticket seller of Pioneer." Thinking his honor had been wounded, Bland proceeded to polish the woman off in fine style, administering to her a sound beating. He then turned on the miserable ornery specimen of a white brute, and dished him up a good solid pounding, which we might as well remark served him just right. The woman did not resist the beating she had received, and swore out warrant. A jury trial was demanded by Bland, which resulted in the defendant being declared not guilty, and the prosecutor pay cost.

The white man or thing rather, is the same party accused some months since of greasily insulting two young ladies in the depot at Pioneer. He is said to have a wife and several children residing there.

This is about the worst case that has come up before the Justice in a long time, and the details were too disgusting for publication.

The time table on the Oil Creek Railroad will be slightly changed on and after tomorrow, July 6th. The early train north will leave at 7:01 instead of 7:13 as formerly. There will also be a change in the time of the afternoon train going north.

The Fourth of July passed off quietly here. In the evening an extremely heavy rain storm prevailed, which literally flooded everything out for the time being. Later in the evening the fireworks purchased by the committee were exploded making a very nice display.

A CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS.—We learn of several accidents which occurred yesterday, as follows:

While the Fourth of July procession was passing the new saloon owned by a man named Dolan, near the new river bridge, at Parker's Landing, about 11 o'clock yesterday, without a moment's warning the veranda of the house which was crowded with people, fell to the ground, carrying the people with it. Mr. Wm. Shepard, an old and respected citizen was standing under the porch and was instantly killed, his neck being broken by the weight of the timber. A little girl was injured so severely that she died a short time after being taken out.—Sixteen or seventeen of those on the porch were quite severely bruised. This is all we could learn of this sad affair.

An old man named Sebastian, residing at Salem, Clarion County, was drowned in the Allegheny River, at Oil City, yesterday. It appears he was intoxicated at the time, and had crossed the river in a buck board arriving all safe. He, however, immediately turned round and drove back but missed the track and got into deep water, and apparently becoming confused fell out of the wagon and sank at once. An inquest was held and a verdict of accidental drowning rendered.

We learn that a man was run over and cut to pieces on the Valley Road at Scrutgrass, yesterday. He was intoxicated at the time.

It is also rumored that a man was shot at Scrutgrass, yesterday, while in a drunken row.

Letter From Kane City.

Brother K. of the village of Kane City, was a most rigid exemplary Methodist, so thought he at least. As an example of his good opinion of himself we offer the following. He denounced Catholics, Presbyterians, Baptists, in fact all denominations outside the Methodists were wrong in their belief and creeds. Were one to try to argue the otological subjects with him he would always get huffy and say—"Don't try to convert me from the true path by recodite sophistry." However, he was materialist enough to live well. One morning during a spirited revival he told his experience in about these words: Brethren and sisters some fifteen years ago, I was brought to a knowledge of the true and living God. Some of our converts ask can one tell when his sins are forgiven, certainly you can. Why Brethren when I experienced religion my very flesh changed. I felt it in my very finger ends and stand before you this evening a spiritually and physically different man than before my conversion. Free from sin and ready and willing to die at this moment if the Lord wills it. A miserly and sacrilegious landlord being present arose and coolly requested Mr. K. to settle his rent if he valued life so lightly.—An audible titter and adjourned meeting.

A day or two since we were accosted by a raw rural youth, who, evidently unused to the ways of municipal life knew not the cheek possessed by city boys. We were at our friend's place of business when euphonious barbarous language fell upon our ears: "Say, hain't Maggie workin' at your house?" "Yes sir," we replied, evoying our interpolator. "Do you goin' up home soon?" "Yes." "Will you let a feller go along?" "Being pleased and reassured at our assent he grew communicative. "Mag sbe's my gal, bang'd nice gal too.—Bob Smith used to go with her, but you know I done him. She's mine now. Say, don't let any these ere chaps round here look at her, jist let me know. I'll fix em.—Say, yer pap won't care 'bout me seein' Mag will he?" We assured him that he could see Maggie if he choosed with perfect impunity and that no immunity would be exacted.

By this time we were at the house. Maggie, suffused with blushes appeared and was at once clasped in the arms of her overjoyed lover. Such a meeting we never saw before, no maudlin, shallow sentimentality, but pure simple undeffiled affliction.

Haverhill, Mass., has some "women who dare" The formation of an association to effect a radical change for the better in the style of ladies dress is contemplated by some of the young ladies of that city. They are said to be in earnest, and will set about their work with all that courage and determination which its difficulty demands.

Four hundred and eighty tons of iron were rolled at the Indianapolis rolling mill the past week. This is the largest week's work ever turned out of the mill since it commenced operations.

A new style of dressing the hair recently adopted is to brush it back from the forehead and fasten it at the back in a coil or knot. It is very plain, and may not become every lady, but it will be found delightfully cool for the summer, and is much more sensible than the old style of gigantic chignons and towering heaps of puffs and frizzes.

A girl of twelve years, at Rolling Prairie Ind., has such a mania for horses, that she frequently imagines herself one, and will eat grass, stamp, kick, etc. She will frequently get up in the night, harness her father's team, and drives miles away, or until she is overtaken and brought back.—She will even go to the neighbors and hitch up their teams and run away with them.

Last night a disgraceful row occurred on the late train up between Oil City and Rouseville. Two men from Tarr Farm having imbibed too much Oil City local option, got into a row. One was a small man and the other a large man. The large man had the advantage and was beating the other one severely, when another man came up and underlook to take the big man off.—This was not apparently relished, as the big man drew a knife and stabbed the other in the hand, inflicting a severe wound. No arrests were made although all parties concerned ought to be punished for participating in so disgraceful an affair.

Herr Wieniawski has found a protege in San Francisco, the ten year old son a Jeweler named Lichtenberg. The little fellow played several pieces for the great violinist, and afterwards repeated a piece after Herr Wieniawski had played it. Herr Wieniawski consented to give the boy a lesson of one hour's duration every day during his stay in the city, and take him to Europe and place him in the Musical Conservatory at Vienna, under his own tuition, free of charge, until he graduates.

The hero, finding his ardor cooling, and desiring to frighten his betrothed into breaking the engagement, told her that he was greatly distressed by palpitation of the heart. She did not seem inclined to believe him, so he went to a doctor for a medical certificate of bad health. What he received did not suit him, and he applied to another physician, who was more open to the influence he brought to bear. Armed with this certificate he visited his lady adored, and as he supposed, presented it to her, but unfortunately he gave her the wrong certificate, and it was read at the trial.—The doctor declared that the heart trouble was not serious, that at the age of the applicant he might hope to recover from it, and that matrimony would be likely to do him good.
