JAY COOKE & CO.

The failure of this eminent firm, whose reputation was national, has sent a shiver through financial circles here and in Europe.

It is said the London house stands firm. So much the better. It is understood in banking circles that the failure involves a hundred millions more or less. We fear it is but the forerunner of a financial flurry that will carry ruin to every commercial centre and depression to every marketable commodity in the country.

It is not so much the collapse of banks and banking houses, as well as of leading firms in every branch of trade caused by losses incurred through this house, that will bring this about as the loss of confidence by the masses in moneyed institutions all over the land, and the withdrawal of surplus and deposited capital, which, if left intact, always in a crisis like the present, preserves the equilibrium.

All forms of investment will suffer heavily for some time to come. Railway enterprises that are unfinished will remain so for years, and even necessary repairs on finished and running roads be deferred and thus jeopardize the safety of the travelling public.

The inevitable depression in stocks of all kinds, the high price of gold, the exorbitant rates of interest, will without a doubt diminish greatly the volume business transacted and leave heavy stocks of merchandise unsold to be carried over to another season.

Crude, our product already lying prostrate, will suffer yet more from the present pressure, and what with fourth sand and money tight, will have a hard run to live the coming fall and winter.

Let us live in hopes that the financial horrors of '07 are not to be repeated.

Fresh New York oysters received daily at Snowden & Pugh's Petroleum Exchange Hotel. - Steaks, 50 cts; raw, 50 cts; fried, 75 cts. Families supplied.

Professor Donaldson, of Daily Graphic balloon story, used to give exhibitions on the high tops in the streets of Petroleum Centre and other towns in this region during the early days of the oil excitement.

Mr. Lou. Voucher returned to town yesterday after an extended trip east, during which he visited New York, Philadelphia and the various watering places. Looks well and hearty, and reports having had a fine time. Also, brings a good report of the "New Jersey apple jack crop"

The remains of a chief of the Ottawa tribe of Indians have been found in the road bed, on the banks of the Maumee River, in Ohio. Several arrowheads, and a tomahawk of stone, a mammoth brooch, a pair of silver bracelets, and innumerable little trinkets were found about the remains; and in the vicinity a stone hatchet and a copper bucket were exhumed.

The Great Failure Yesterday.

Jay Cooke has gone down. The news of the suspension of his three great banking houses located respectively at New York, Philadelphia and Washington was carried to the country over the wires yesterday afternoon, and the excitement consequent therefrom is beyond description. The failure of Jay Cooke & Co., causes of course others to suspend. Reports of the suspension of the First National Bank of Washington, also of E. W. Clark & Co., Philadelphia, and Richard Schell and Robinson & Snyder come to hand. What will be the extent of the effects of this terrible disaster no one can at this time estimate. Previous to yesterday Jay Cooke almost might have been called the nation's banker. The consternation all over the country caused by the failure can be imagined. While we are not an alarmist, the statement of Jay Cooke that the company is able to take care of all its liabilities, is precisely what is done when the great failure is first announced. It is pleasant to hope that Jay Cooke will come out all right. But we fear the worst has not yet been disclosed. The North Pacific Railway Stock and his speculations in gold, we have no doubt, have brought him to his present condition.

The worst misfortune named in our dispatches this morning in consequence of the failure, is the probable suspension of the Life Insurance Companies with which Cooke is connected. The National Insurance Company, of which he was the founder, is probably the most severely hurt.

But the failure of Jay Cooke & Co., we believe, should be attributed to speculation.

An extraordinary thing happened to a gentleman in Dubuque the other day. He was walking on the platform behind the eating house at the I. C. R. depot enjoying the gentle evening twilight. Before him was a green, scum-covered slough, which the gentleman mistook for a verdant meadow. He stepped on it for the purpose of taking a little stroll, and found himself in eight feet of water. He was fished out the wettest and slimiest of men, and it is supposed will hereafter hold "fresh fields and pastures new" in natural abhorrence.

Oysters served up in every style at the Petroleum Exchange Hotel.

The failure of Jay Cooke & Co will be likely to influence the oil market to some extent, as well as every other branch of trade.

As an illustration of the widespread use of a certain popular title, it is related that a gentleman recently stepped into a saloon in Denver, and cried out in a loud, cheery tone, "Hello! come, Professor, take a drink." Six men sitting in the saloon at once arose and came forward, while a boot-black, whose stand was just outside the door and a passing cobbler smilingly accepted the invitation, and stepped in.

That "honesty is the best policy" may be exemplified by the following little incident: A man at Belmont, Mo., sold to a mill owner a saw log, which proved to be hollow. As he sold it for a sound log he voluntarily went and gave back the price, and hauling it to his own yard chopped it up for firewood. In this operation he found ten five dollar gold pieces which somebody had secreted in it.

A religious contemporary tells how systematic penny-giving recently saved a church in Wisconsin which was embarrassed with a debt of $10,000 that it would have been impossible to pay in the ordinary way. The pastor divided the debt into the penny shares to be paid daily for five hundred days and it was lifted forthwith.

The Philadelphia Ledger gives its whole volume in the following terse language: "Corner lounging—hanging about taverns on Sunday afternoon—ruffianly treatment of persons walking along the streets—appeal to police—interference by other loungers and hangers on—bystanders shot and killed. This is the order in which last Sunday's homicide came about. The lesson is a short one, but fearfully severe."

A parish in Anglesea, Wales, has the following poetic name, "Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgrobwnbrolltirohwlgogarbwlhantylligogoch." By the less vulgar it is called Menai Bridge.

On the 6th of October the Connecticut capital question is to be decided by popular vote. The newspapers of the State are greatly agitated over the issue.

The Glance of Love.

Goat Island, says a Niagara Falls correspondent, abounds in romantic walks, shady retreats, cool resting places, and picturesque scenes, which afford every opportunity for low converse, sweet whispered nothings, or serious talks, as the case may be; and from 10 A. M., until early twilight the woods are full of lovers, married and single, who flirt, build air castles, read Tennyson, Joaquin Miller and Swinburne to each other, stopping at frequent intervals to take long, lingering glances into each other's eyes, glances which convey more affection in a minute than the lips could utter in a week. Most of man and womankind have been there at some period of their lives, and right there let me propound a question: Why, in the name of all the fond hopes never realized, and the tender emotions of the human heart, does there come but one period in life—just preceding or immediately after marriage—in which we indulge in these peculiar, soul-inspiring glances? I put the same question to a poet and philosopher once, and while he freely admitted that the love he bore his wife after twenty years of married life was no more to be compared to his early love than a glowing anthracite flame to a fire-fly's spark, yet he had never been able to realize that peculiar bias and ecstasy of mind experienced during his courtship days, and the only time his wife had ever given him one of those soul-seaching glances was ten years after marriage, and was occasioned by a denial on his part that he had devoured the last half of a custard pie, and a dash on her part to look in his eyes to see if he was prevaricating. And now, when I see these young people around me enjoying the springtime of life, I mentally quote the old couplet— "Love's young dream"

The "hoodlums" of San Francisco are infinite in resources. They have devised a new way of making money, which is brilliant. Two of them enter into partnership. One of the firm insults a rich young lady in a public place; the other, with great spirit, knocks him down, and gallantly protects the young lady, and sees her home, where, of course, the grateful father gives him fifty dollars or so.

Burglars continue to ply their vocation in Erie. One of the knights of the dark lantern and jimmy entered the bedroom of a widow, the other night, carried off $80 in cash, and would have disposed her of a watch, but the book of the chain caught in the drawer, causing a rattling noise which awoke her, when the villain decamped.
