BUSINESS NOTIOES THE ONLY TRUE PURGATIVES. IS. RADWAY'S REGULATING PILLS. "I would rather have one box of Dr. Radway's Fills, than all other pills in the world. They are pills that cure. When you take a dose of these pills, you can depend upon the expulsion of the diseased humors from the system: the Liver, Howels, Stomach, Kidneys, System, Skin and Blood are acted upon and the bowels, after an operation induced by Radway's Pills, are left as clean and healthy as the stomach would be after a dose of lobelia. No straining, weakness, or Wrenching pains, or piles or tenesmus, but a morough and natural eracuation is the result." This is the testimony of one of the most distin-guished physicians in the would. Never were there words uttered. "Radway's Pills are pills mat cure." The sufferer of Liver Complaint, Dys-pepsia. Constipation, Billosness, Costareness, Jaundice, Dropsy, &c., may rely upon at abso-lute cure, by the use of one to six boxes. It is not necessary to take these pills for mouths or years to accomplish a cure. They should be used in all anses where a cathartic is required. Br. had the most robust champions among the jurors generally carried the day; without regard to the merits of the case, and stomach had more to do with the verdict than brains had. Like the English judge, who would hang his man rather than eat his mutton cold, our old times jurors would strain their consciences in making a verdict, rather than suffer the cravings of hunger, the want of fire, or be deprived of comfortable rest. oil most decidedly. The law makers finally saw the error of this system, and for a number of years past jurors who rendered wrong verdicts had not the excuse for it that they were hungry, cold or sleepy.

The Freeth case, where a monstrous verdict was rendered by a jury that was notoriously packed, led to another very great reform in the mode of selecting jurors. In that case a single individual, a most disreputable character, who had his price, was foisted into the jury box by adroit management and bold fraud, and he served his employers so well that he forced his eleven colleagues into compliance with his demands, and a verdict entirely at variance with the law and the evidence was rendered. But the case had the good effect of calling public attention to the liability of the old system to abuse, and new and important safeguards were thrown about the jury box. The rule which requires entire unanimity in rendering a verdict has very nearly the same effect as the old starving and freezing process, for after all it is a mere question of physical endurance. The forcing operation is not performed so summarily as when done in the absence of food, fire, candle and bed : but it still becomes a question of time and endurance. Days and nights of confinement and absence from family and business are a severe trial to the patience of most men, and are very apt to cool the ardor of the conscientious majority wh have less endurance than the obstinate minority, who, either through ignorance, perversity or interest, hold out. Such pressure as this accounts for the frequent ridiculous verdicts that are rendered, and for the number of juries that are discharged because of their inability to agree, thus defeating the ends of justice, putting the courts to vexatious trouble for nothing, and saddling the county with heavy expense. We have known of many cases where intelligent jurors have been forced into the compromise verdicts which are usually the result of these dead-locks, who have been ashamed to go into court with the verdicts which they have been compelled to endorse.

Trial by jury dates back to the days of the ancient Greeks and Romans; but a majority of the jurors was sufficient to form a verdict in those times. The Teutonic, Norman and Scandinavian nations went upon the majority system in their jury trials; and even in England, where the principle of unanimity has been most persistently adhered to, it has not always been the case. Anciently, juries in England consisted of more than twelve persone, and cal endurance. The party in the suit who the oil was worth about $15,000,000, if refined, and about $12,000,000 if crude. The export of 1864 will be, it is estimated, about 40,000,000 gallons. When we add to the foregoing figures the vast amount of oil consumed at home, it will be seen how immense is the quantity produced, and we cannot wonder that, along the entire length of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the traveler constantly passes long trains of cars filled with barrels, which send out the odor of The effect of this great production of petroleum has been very marked in other ways than in the mere increase in the export of the article. A railroad twenty-seven miles long has been built which has carried nearly half a million barrels of oil and 60,000 passengers, in addition to the vast quantity sent down the Allegheny river; the trade in the tools required for boring and pumping has made quite an increase in the business of Pittsburgh, which supplies Oil City; fortunes have been secured by the inventors of lamps in which the oil is burned, and the manufacture of shades and chimneys is a very thriving business. If the production of the wells continues to increase as it has done since 1861, we may expect the oil interest almost to rival the coal trade and some other lines of business hitherto supposed to be unapproachable in extent and importance.

THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Esq., who has been rendering excellent patriotic service in Ohio and in the Army of the Cumberland, for the past two or three years, has returned to Philadelphia, with the intention of remaining here to prosecute one of the arts in which he is a master-that of a painter. He will also, of course, not neglect that of a poet. His poem of " The Wagoner of the Alleghenies," published by Messrs. Lippincott & Co., has had a remarkable success, particularly in the West. A single-firm has retailed over twelve hundred copies. The demand for it continues good. As the work of a Pennsylvanian and the scenc's being also Pennsylvanian, we take pride and pleasure in reporting the success of "The Wagoner."

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1864.

REFORMS IN JURY TRIALS. The Convention to form a Constitution for the new State of Nevada has incorporated in the instrument a provision that might be imitated with profit by older States. It is provided that the affirmative votes of nine out of twelve jurors shall be sufficient in rendering a verdict. This is common sense, and a great improvement upon the system which requires unanimity in juries. Our jury system has been greatly improved within the last thirty years, but it still has the important defect that the people of Nevada are endeavoring to cure. There are many persons living, who are able to read this article without spectacles, who remember the time in Philadelphia when iuries that were out deliberating upon a case were not permitted to have light, food, fire or a bed until they had agreed upon a verdict, and the consequence was that the result of the case became a question of physithe law required that twelve of the number should agree upon a verdict. In course of of time the number of jurors was reduced to twelve, and unanimity was required. In the days of Jeffreys and Scroggs, judges used to hector their juries before they retired to deliberate upon their verdicts, and where the latter did not agree with the views of the court, it was not unusual to whip the jurors publicly at the cart's tail. We have known of instances where Philadelphia juries might have received this treatment without doing violence to justice, although public scandal might have been promoted by the operation. In our Grand Juries the old English majority system still prevails, the votes of twelve Grand Jurors only, out of a larger number, being necessary in "finding" a bill. In England, the abuses growing out of the unanimity rule in petit juries, are well understood, and within a year or two Lord Chancellor Campbell introduced a bill in the English Parliament for the purpose of effecting a reform in this respect. No action has yet been taken upon it. 🖘

Another ridiculous feature of our American jury system is the exclusion from the box, in the trial of capital cases, of all who have formed or expressed any opinion of the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. The effect of this rule was to exclude all intelligent and reasoning men, and to supply their places with persons who were too ignorant to read the published reports of murders, &c.. or if they did read them, too stupid to form any intelligent opinion concerning them. In the trial of Arthur Spring for murder, in 1854, it was found utterly impossible to obtain a jury with this test, so notorious were the particulars of the crime, and so manifest was the guilt of the accused. The then District Attorney-who was a far better lawyer than he is an honest politicianhit upon a shrewd and sensible way of getting over the difficulty, and his plan has since become the practice of the Court. It was to follow the usual question, "Have you/formed or expressed an opinion?" &c., with the question whether that opinion would prevent the juror from rendering a verdict in accordance with the law and the evidence. This was a vast improvement upon the old rule. Our jury system has been greatly improved within the last quarter of a century, and the adoption of the Nevada plan of two-thirds being enough to form a verdict, would do very much towards bringing it to perfection.

PETROLEUM.

It is stated that in the year 1861 1,112,-476 gallons of petroleum were shipped from this country to foreign ports; in 1862 the quantity was 10,887,701 gallons; and in 1863 the figures were 28,000,000 gallons. Much of the oil was sent to Europe in bulk, the barrels being emptied into the holds of the vessels. According to the Tribune the export trade last year employed what was equal to 252 ships of 1,000 tons each, and
