THE NEW NAVY YARD ON THE DELAWARE | they are passed, and therefore based necessa On Saturday last, by invitation of a number of prominent residents of Delaware county, the Naval Committee of the U.S. Senate, together with Philadelphians representing the business interests of this city, assembled at Thurlow's Station, on the Philadelphia, Wilmington and and Baltimore Railroad, near Chester. The object of the excursion was to visit the site of the proposed Navy Yard, a mile or two below that town, and also to compare it with the League Island site. Among the gentlemen present were Senators Hale of New Hampshire, Hicks of Maryland, Willey of West Virginia, Ramsay of Minnesota, Cowan of Pennsylvania, and John M. Broomall, Member of Congress from the Seventh Congressional District. The House Naval Committee did not attend the meeting, either from want of invitation, or inability to leave Washington. Judge Kelley, however, was on hand. Among other Delaware county gentlemen present were S. M. Felton, Esq., President of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad; Mr. Ward, the law partner of Mr. Broomall; Captain Smith, United States Navy, and Mr. McManus. William B. Thomas, Esq., Collector of the Port of Philadelphia; James Lynd, Esq., President of Select Council; George Inman Riche, of Select Council; Edwin Rafsnyder, of Common Council; Messrs. Busby and Tatem, of the Board of Trade; and Alexander Cattell, of the Corn Exchange, were invited. and one or two naval officials from Washington city were also present. At Thurlow's an excellent breakfast was set forth, after which the party set forth in carriages to view the Chester site. This proposed location has various advantages, such as extending alongthe river for nearly two miles, the ground gradually rising from the river to a ridge which extends clear down to the highlands of Christiana. The water is said to have an average depth of thirty-six feet all along this front, while the breadth of the river is from one and a quarter to one and three-quarter miles. The excursionists next proceed to Marcus Hook, where they took the steamer Ariel and came up the Delaware to League Island. Arriving at the latter place its advantages for a navy yard became fully as apparent, if not more so, than the Chester site. The island has a front of five hundred acres, with a wall around it which has stood for over twenty years. The ground is firm, with a gravel foundation just below the surface, and the water is fully as deep in front of the island as it is in front of the Chester location. In fact no one could view League Island without being much impressed with its advantages, and that too, without disparaging the location further down the river. Leaving the island, after a brief though pleasant stay, the party came up to Philadelphia, some by rail and the remainder by the steamer Ariel. In the evening the doings of the occasion were closed by a banquet at "parlor C" of the Continental. Mr. Felton presided with his accustomed ease and felicity, Broomall, Lynd, Miller, Wetherill and Ward. The whole affair passed off very agreeably both to hosts and guests, and the Naval be convinced of the immense advantages possessed by the banks of the Delaware, either at League Island or Chester, for a great Navy League Island from its proximity to Philadelphia, and from the ease with which supplies of iron, coal, &c. may be brought there from the great railroad lines centering at Philadelphia. As to the mere building of the docks, &c. the difficulties, if there are any. are just as great at Chester as at League Island, and the work would cost no more.

THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG-GENERAL HANCOCK.

To the Editor of the Evening Bulletin :-When a quack tries his medicine upon a patient and kills him, he is indicted and punished for malpractice, and all the medical profession as well as the rest of the world cry out against the folly of a man attempting to practice in a profession he knows nothing about, especially when a human life is involved.

We scarcely expect to hear orthodox doctrine from the pulpit when the preacher has not been educated to the ministry, and no man can enter our courts and practice law unless he has been regularly licensed. No ship owner ever thinks of entrusting his vessel, cargo and passengers to the care of one not brought up to the sea, and yet in what is now confessedly the most difficult profession in the world, the military, we too often see the lives and welfare of thousands of men committed to those who have not the first qualification for the office. And strange to say, this course is passively acquiesced in and frequently openly endorsed by those who would be loudest in condemning quackery in any other profession." How quickly would these cry out were a military man sent into the pulpit to preach, the court to plead, the surgery to amputate, or on board of a vessel to command it in a storm. And yet is one less absurd than the other?

As a consequence of this state of affairs, every one, high and low, of all other professions, or of none at all, seems to consider himself or herself competent to criticise military operations of the most complicated kind, and even women mount the rostrum and condemn (seldom commend) the movements and actions in a grand campaign! Fancy, if you can, the farcical exhibition of a female lecturer drawing a crowded house to hear the theological doctrines of our standard divines picked to pieces; the surgical operations of cal operations of our eminent doctors commented upon and condemned; the judicial opinions of our Supreme Court analyzed and criticised, or the naval conflicts and management of vessels of a Dupont or a Farragut examined with the sarcasm and astuteness of a competent critic! And yet equal absurdities have been perpetrated in regard to military affairs. Now, soldiers, who are good for much in their way, do not generally profess to be good for much in any other, and they usually act upon the principle that every profession has its own standard, and think it hard they cannot have theirs. It is true that popular sentiment has in this country taken doctors and lawyers from the ranks of their professions and made them eminent generals in ours. But these, even if we concede the fact, only constitute the exceptions which prove the rule. Most military men would feel worse even than fish out of water, if they were taken from the field and made doctors, lawyers, divines or even congressmen.

We have been led into this rather rambling dissertation by reading lately a resolution dissertation by reading lately a resolution passed by Gongress giving a vote of thanks to certain general officers and the Army of the Potomac for their services in the campaign which terminated on the well fought field of Gettysburg. Now, these resolutions, several of which have recently been passed by Congress, have either a military or political signification. Tha is they are either the recognition by Congress of the military services of those in whose favor

rily upon the recommendation of competent military authority, or they are made irrespective of such recommendation, and with the idea of giving some political importance to the persons named in them.

And here let us remark in passing that the particular resolution referred to is the only one yet introduced into Congress wherein any but the name of the army commander is introduced. This is a significant fact, and one for which there must be some reason. It cannot be because any one denies the pre-eminent ability, indomitable courage, and wise sagacity which in Major-General Meade gave us the victory at Gettysburg. These characteristics of the man, and the feeling prevalent in the army just before that, without a change of commanders, we were simply marching forward to another Chancel-lorsville, are, we believe, denied by no one competent to form a judgment. It can scarcely then be the intention to deny to General Meado the honor of having personally fought and gained the battle.

In this connection, however, it will be proper to notice a rumor, which, it is said, been repeated in high quarters in the United States Senate, that the battle of Gettysburg was fought strictly according to a plan drawn up by Gen. Hooker before he relinquished the command, and communicated to Gen. Meade by Major-Gen. Butterfield, who acted as chief of staff to both. No statement could be more utterly without foundation. For not only is it the fact that Gen. Hooker did not and could not have known that a battle was to be fought at Gettysburg; but more han this, Gen. Meade himself did not and could not have known it beforehand. It will naturally be asked how it happened that a battle was fought on that ground, and fortunately we are enabled to answer the question intelligibly. In the first place, any one with a map before him can see that with two armies, one north and the other south of Gettysburg, and determined to fight each other, a conflict would probably take place at some point in the vicinity of that town, simply from the facilities the numerous roads leading to it from all directions gave for the concenration of troops. Whilst pushing forward to ascertain the posiion of the enemy, on the 1st of July, the gallant and lamented Buford fell upon him to the northwest of Gettysburg, and fought him for several hours, until the brave Reynolds came up to his support with his infantry. Reynolds was supported by the 11th Corps (Howard), whilst the 3d (Sickels) and the 12th (Slocum) were approaching the same point. On the fall of Reynolds, Gen. Meade, who was then at Taneytown, directed Mai.-Gen. Hancock to proceed at once to Gettysburg, and assume command of the three corps in that vicinity, 1st, 3d and 11th. At this time it was in contemplation to give battle on Pipe Creek, some miles south of Gettysburg, and Gen. Hancock was instructed, "If you think the ground and position there (at Gettysburg) a better one than Pipe Creek to fight a battle, under existing circumstances, you will so advise the General and he will order the troops up. You know the General's views," &c., &c.

Here it is necessary to remark that of the three corps commanders, those of the 3d and 11th, (Howard and Sickles,) ranked Hancock as Major Generals. On his arrival on the field of action, about 2, P. M., General Hancock found everything in confusion, and our troops retreating in every direction. After great personal efforts by himand speeches were made by Senators Hale, self and staff, the retreat was arrested, and the remainder of the 11th corps (part of it already in position near the cemetery) was collected and placed in position, whilst the 1st, which came back in better order, was placed, one Division on the right of the 11th, connecting it Committee of the Senate could but with Culp's hills, and the rest along the ridge to the left. On its arrival, the 3d corps was Having made this disposition. General Hancock reported in detail to General Meade the condition of affairs, what had been done, and what were the advantages and disadvantages of the military position assumed; and then the 12th corps having reached the ground and been placed in position according to his suggestions, he turned over the command of the whole to its commander, Major-Gen. Slocum, and returned after dark to report to General Meade in person. On his report General Meade decided to concentrate on this position and fight the battle there. On the 2d of July General Hancock in command of the left centre played an important part in repulsing the enemy after the disaster to Sickles's corps, and, unasked, sent assistance to Howard on the right, which remained there on the 3d and on the next day he fell seriously wounded whilst successfully repulsing the main attack of the enemy on his corps.

Under these circumstances, it is difficult to conceive why, if any subordinate commander was to be selected for special mention in the thanks of Congress, that the one who, junior to the others, was selected on account of his military qualifications to perform such important functions, as was Gen. Hancock, was not designated by Congress, instead of taking one who, with the necessary rank, and being on the spot, was not considered by his commanding officer as properly qualified for the command. Certainly no military reason can be assigned, and we are led to infer that a political one was the governing motive. This, however, cannot be urged as a reason for so grave a wrong against a gallant soldier. Nor can it justify another in accepting honors in a way which has been denominated by the greatest soldier in the land as a "pruriency of fame not earned." MILITARY.

PHILADELPHIA. THE GREAT TRIUMPH OF MRS. M. G. BROWN'S "Metaphysical Discovery" over all quackery. Read carefully the following certificates, tendered me for the benefit of all suffering humanity:

humanity:

GLOUCESTER, N. J., Jan. 30, 1864.

I. Mr. William Lee, of Gloucester, Camden county, N. J., do certify that my wife, Ellen, has been suffering severely with a complication of diseases for eight years. The first symtom of disease was a womb complain, on its first appearance she was confined to her bed for seven weeks; diseases of various kinds set in one after another, till my wife was an entire wreck. She has been under the treatment of ten of the first physicians, all of whom failed to render her any rehef, and she was fast sinking in the arms of death. It is more than four years since she was able to attend to household duies. I have been compelled to employ a housekeeper. We had given up doctoring as useless. Most providentially and through the blessing of God, my housekeeper went up to Kingsessing, Pa., to see her sister. She found that her sister's neighbor, John Richmond, had given up all work and was at the point of death.

Ringsessing, Pa., to see her sister. She found that her sister's neighbor, John Richmond, had given up all work and was at the point of death. He sent for Mrs. M. G. Brown's "Metaphysical Discovery," had been restored to health and is at his work again. When my house-keeper returned, she told me the circumstances, and prevailed on me to write to Mr. Richmond, and ask him the particulars. I done so, and received an answer, which you will flad at the bottom of my ceruficate.

We then sent for Mrs. M. G. Brown's "Metaphysical Discovery" and my wife has used it faithfully, at a the result is that the womb disease, which was so bad, is entirely gone. She can now co the work of her own house, which she has not done for many years. I consider that dease is fast leaving her system, and she is regaining her original health. Her eyes, which were so weak through all her adilt tion, are now clear and strong, and Huphasitatingly ascribe my wife's recovery, from the jaws of death, to Mrs. M. G. Brown's "Metaphysical Discovery," and heartily recommend it to those who are suffering from any disease, as it must certainly strike at the root of all diseases. It has done so in my wife's case. Should any person wish to call on me in reference to the above, I am willing to see them personally-or write to them if they desire.

Answer of John Richmond Kingsessing to Wm. Lee, of Gloucester, Camden county, New Jersey.
