[For the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.] THE VETERANS.

BY CHAS. HENRY BROCK. Did you see them yesterday, Going down the broad highway? Did you bear the distant drum, And the people's short- "they come!" If, with me, you then had stood, Seen the city's multitude. On their front, their rear, their flanks, Pressing in their very ranks, Shouting for the glorious scene, As the brave boys marched between Gods! I think you would have spared Part a lifetime to have shared All the swelling thought that then Met those swarthy battl :- men?

Rank nor tinsel went not there: Girt with grime and all threadbar., Each accourrement and dress Bore the battle's rough impress: Yet that march of martial pride Monarchs might have knelt besid : Hearts beat quick, and every eye Glistened as the boys went by: For each iron face and form. Bronzed and bent by many a storm, Spoke to all its conscious glory :

Back we bring the Flag in glory !''

Quickly as the multitude, Proudly borne, that banner viewed, Jesu! what a shout was there Ringing on the wintry air; Faded by the smoke and flame, Vet it have no blot of shame: Tattered by the shot and shell, Grandly did its tatters tell How its bearers fought and fell! How the wind's triumphant breth Bore it on the storm of death: How full many a martyr's eye Saw its flashing folds go by. As its triumph rent the sky! Tho' by iron tempest reft Scarce a crimson ribbon left, To its oaken staff to press it Yet the people cheered "God bless if" Shrine it in the Nation's treasures, Hymn it with your post-measures; When the tide of war has run. Conjure every sire and son, If, upon the swelling breeze, Ever he such banner sees, Be it in the business mart, Or, where chords of pleasure start Melodies from heart to heart In the valley, on the crag, Conjure him by holy vow, Reverentially to bow, Laying "tis a battle flag!"

Rises to you azure dome, That the sunlight gilds above you, Joyous as the souls that love you Beating hearts and streaming faces Wait in old familiar places : Wait to kindle o'er to-night With the bosom's lost delight. Round each dear and hallowed board. Kingly plenty shall be poured; On your knees the babes shall wrestle. In your arms the loved one nestle. While your words of glorious battle, Sabre-gleam and musket-rattle, Shall encuain the loved to listen, Till each eye shall burn and glisten : Burn and glisten with the glory, Where, with steel, on pages gory, Heroes writ the UNION story! Come to-night and laurel o'er Homes of peace with deeds of war: Not as when we saw ye go Down the street to face the foe: Banners bright, and weapons new, Flashed unto that morning's view: And your line was wide and long, Marching down "twelve hundred strong!"

VETERANS! our "Welcome-home"

What of those who now are not? Burning brow and burnished eye, Dying calls and no reply; Wracked by agony and thurst, Ere the lingering life-bond burst: Blazing heat and freezing damp, Scattered starkly o'er the camp; Dying lonely, lonely carried dely out and rude Falling in the foot-sore march, And beneath the midnight arch, Counting all the cheerless stars, Ere the spirit leapt its bars; Singled in the deadly charge, For the bayonet or targe; Mangled by the demon-shell, From the battery's yawning hell; Writhing when the truce was sounded. 'Neath the gory dead and wounded; Calling in the gasping breath For the soothing hand, or Death; Dying, dying, praying only God to cheer the loved left lonely!

Ask the fever and the shot.

These, oh! these, and nameless others. On your unreturning brothers, VETERANS! flung the deadly blight; Left to you the blissful sight Of your happy homes to-night.

God be merciful to-day To the hearts that were not gay, In your homeward marching way: To the mother hearts whose sons Reeled before the belching guns; To the widow-hearts whose hope Crumbles in each battle slope; To the maiden-hearts whose trust Moulders in the gory dust. God be merciful to Who to night shall not recall One from out his bloody pall!

And when once again the olden Peace shall light her harvests golden, And the wooing west wind dallies With untrampled flowers and vallies; When the Nation's starry banner Blazes o'er her ancient manor; God! vouchsafe to me again All the thrilling sight and strain, As, from battle-fields and glens, Homeward march—THE VETERANS! All can see the importance of preventing this, and all the impossibility of doing it without your vigorous co-operation.

It can easily be accomplished. Volunteers are abundant but to pay the promised bounties, money is required. About $15,000 have been collected—at least as large a sum is yet to be raised. The contributions have been comparatively tew, and principally by those (including a number of ladies) not themselves liable to draft.

Our Ward reaches from Seventh street to the Schuylkill River, and from Spruce to Chestnut, and contains about twenty thousand inhabitants. These twenty thousand are alike interested, poor and rich, married and sirgle, man and woman.

Mere boasts of loyalty, or denunciations of those opposing the Government, will not avail. Self-interest, if not patriotism, requires immediate action. In so short a time as yet remains it will be impossible for the Committee to visit all. Do not, therefore, wait to be called upon. Send or bring your subscriptions, large or small, without a moment's delay, to either of the Committee. Small contributions, if numerous, will help mike up the amount. Three thousand subscriptions of $5 each would do it entirely. If checks are given, they may be drawn to the order of the Treasurer, Judge Strong, of the Supreme Court.
