

CHARLES DICKENS'S OBITUARY OF FRANK BAY.

It has been observed by some of the personal friends of the great English writer who established this magazine, that by the time that he was struck from among men should be written by these lines, and when he often wrote himself and always with the warmest generosity.

The long interval between the two periods is marked in my remembrance of him by two occasions when he was appointed to the office of editor, when he was irresistibly attracted to me as was evidenced by his being chosen to be my co-editor.

When we were associated in the management of the "Daily Evening Bulletin," he was my co-editor, and he was my co-editor, and he was my co-editor, and he was my co-editor.

It was not long after his death that I received a letter from him, and he was my co-editor, and he was my co-editor, and he was my co-editor.

He was my co-editor, and he was my co-editor.

He was my co-editor, and he was my co-editor.

He was my co-editor, and he was my co-editor.

He was my co-editor, and he was my co-editor.
