XXXVIIITH CONGRESS—FIRST SESSION.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22, 1864 SENATE.—A letter was presented to the Senate from the Vice-President, stating that he would be absent from the Senate a short time.

On motion, Mr. Foote was elected President pro tem.
Mr. Grimes presented a petition, signed by many

Mr. Grimes presented a petition, signed by many citizens of Iowa, asking the passage of a law prothibiting slavery, which was referred to the Committee on Freedmen and Slavery.

Mr. Sumner presented the petition of Joel B Stockton, of Arkansas, which states that he believes that the African material is the best material for a soldier, and asking that Congress shall establish, after the close of the present war, a regular army of two hundred thousand men, composed entirely of negroes, officered by white men. Reentirely of negroes, officered by white men. Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. Mr. Sumner presented a petition from women of Ohio, praying that something be done to ameliorate the condition of those persons who have been freed the condition of those persons who have been freed from slavery by the present war.

Mr. Sumner also presented petitions from citizens of New York, in favor of placing all soldiers on a similar footing. Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. Sumner also presented petitions signed by Josiah Quincy, Governor Andrews, and the members of both branches of the Massachusetts Legislature, asking such amendments to the Constitution as may abolish slavery, which was faild on the table.

tion as may abolish slavery, which was laid on the table.

Mr. Morgan presented the memorial of the Chamber of Commerce of the city of New York, praying for legislation on the part of Congress to foster and support the commerce of the United States. Referred to the Committee on Commerce. Mr. Carlile (W. Va.) offered the following joint resolution:

1st. That the military power of the Government ist. That the military power of the Government of a control of the States in arms opposing its authority; that the prosecution of hostitues against the citizens of the States in rebellion ought to be for the sole purpose of maintaining the constitutional Union and for the restoration of the Union upon the basis of the Constitution, leaving to each state the regulation of its own domestic policy, and protecting each and all in the enjoyment of the right of self-government, as recognized by the Constitution of the United States.

States.

2d. That the President be requested to declare, by proclamation, that whenever the people of any of the States now resisting the authority of the United States shall reorganize their State government by the state of t ment by repudiating the ordinances of secession adopted in their name, and shall recognize their obligations to the Union under the Constitution, full pardon and amnesty to the people of such State, assuring the citizens thereof that all their

State, assuring the citizens thereof that all their rights of person and of property, under the Constitution, shall be restored to and enjoyed by them, excepting, however, from such pardon and amnesty such persons as shall be designated by the Legislature of the State as fit persons to be he d for trial before the judicial tribunals of the United States under the laws thereof.

Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. On motion of Mr. Wilson (Mass.) the Committee on Military Affairs was instructed to inquire into the expediency of increasing the number of cadets in the Military Academy to the number of four hundred, and requiring the age of candidates to be not less than seventeen; also for raising the standard of qualification, and for changing the manner of their appointment so as to provide that manner of their appointment so as to provide that the examination for admission shall be based on the merits of the candidates.

On motion of Mr. Wilson, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution equalizing the pay of the United States soldiers.

Mr. Wilson presented a modification of his amendment heretofore offered, which makes it disamendment heretofore offered, which makes it dis-cretionary with the President to allow negro troops a bounty previous to the passage of the act. The amendment, as modified, was rejected. Mr. Davis (Ky.) called up the amendment to disarm the colored troops, and to provide for their enlistment as teamsters and laborers. The amend-ment was rejected.

enlistment as teamsters and laborers. The amendment was rejected.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the pending question—the joint resolution to promote enlistments.

Mr. Clark would like to know why black men should not be armed and put into the service?

Mr. Davis said he had answered that question forty times in the Senate.

Mr. Clark said this was not merely a question about the payment of colored troops, but a question whether we shall put black men into the field to save our white men. It was a matter of interest to the country that black men should be employed, because it saved the blood of the white men.

because it saved the blood of the white men. When we put arms into the hands of the black man, and he uses them in the service of the country to its advantage, he should not therefore be enslayed. The mere fact of his having been in the service should be a protection from bondage.

Mr. Collamer offered an amendment which provides that all persons enlisted into the service under the call of 1863, for three hundred thousand under the call of 1863, for three hundred thousand volunteers, shall receive the same pay and bounty. On motion of Mr. Wilson the further consideration of the subject was postponed.

Mr. Kelley, (Pa.) in speaking of the past, said slavery was excluded from the Northwest territory; and from the wording of the Constitution, as a recognized institution, denying that it had such a recognized that the counsels of the particle of an existence. Had the counsels of the patriots of other days prevailed, and the statesmen who succeeded them followed just and humane teachings, slavery would long since have been abolished, and other questions than that which now distracts the country would be in the course of solution by a peaceful and prosperous people. But the government was entrusted to the hands of wicked demagogues, who, departing from justice, had involved us in rebellion. It was the part of wise legislators to accept the facts as they are, and as they stand to day, and apply to them the proper principles, and so evolve from the horrors which surround us a system which shall be in accordance with the spirit of the age and Christian civilization. This bill was well calculated to produce these high results. Its immediate passage was demanded from the fact that the ancent order of things had been destroyed over a teran existence. Had the counsels of the patriots of was demanded from the fact that the ancient of things had been destroyed over a territory larger than was that of the thirteen original States. Not only the North, but the world at large, deman it the well-directed cultivation of the lands now and soon to be within our control. In large, deman't the well-directed cultivation of the lands now and soon to be within our control. In the course of his reply to Mr. Cox, who charged that amalgamation was becoming a principle at the North, he said Northern men, white men never select their companions from the African race; and referred to the fact that amalgamation was practised at the South, there being more than half a million of such kindred to the whites in that portion of the country, and some of whom had attended colleges at the North. The South had sent us what we have of the stock. Slavery is dead, let us give it decent burial and erect a monument at the mouth of the sepulchre so heavy that it cannot be removed. at the meuth of the sepulchre so heavy that it cannot be remoyed. Let there be appended to it the Constitution of the United States, written therein, "Slayery or involuntary servitude, except for crime, shall be forever prohibited within the United States and the territories thereof." When this is done slavery will be dead beyond resurrection, and the United States will be freedom's star of welcome to the oppressed of the world. Will you, he asked the opposition members, give us your vote for the bill as 2 test of your sincerity! But slavery is not quite dead, but is in the act of death, and we may therefore pass on to the next duty. Having eradicated slavery, let us secure freedom to the people who have been the victims of slavery. By the destruction of slavery we will rise to a new and higher freedom; and out of this insurrection will grow a resurrection which will lead us to a glorious immortality.

A message was 'ecceved from the Senate announcing their concurrence in the report of the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing light. Stevens (Pa.) briefly explained the report of the committee, and moved that the House concur in the report, which provides that spirits distilled and on distilled and removed for consumption or sale previous to the first of July next, of first proof, shall pay, in addition to duties payand upon all liquors which may be distilled after the passage of this act, and sold or removed for consumption or sale on and after the first day of January next, sand previous to the first day of January next, and previous to the first of July next, and previous to the first of July next, of first proof, forty cents additional per gallon, on all such spirits imported from foreign countries on and after the first of July next, of first proof, forty cents additional per gallon, on all such spirits imported from foreign countries on and after the first of July next and previous to the first of January next, sfifty instead of sixty cents per gallon.

Mr. Washburne (III.) stated so no of the reasons go into the hands of the speculator, or into the treasury, which was now reeling to tottering under the present vast and unheard-of expendi-tures. He scouted the idea that there was any under the present vast and unheard-of expenditures. He scouted the idea that there was any plighted faith of the government to whiskey speculators that no additional tax should be levied, and contended that there was no more obligation to protect the holders of liquors than there was to protect the consumer against having the price raised on him.

The speculators in whiskey had no special claims on Congress, but, on the other hand, Congress should repress the present curse of speculation, which is the handmaid of venality, extravalance and corruption. The House had changed front on the question. In the House hill the tax on liquors on hand had been put in by a vote of nearly, two-thirds. That alarmed the whiskey dealed who swarmed to Washington, and who said, let there be light and there was light. The Senate refused to concur in the House proposition to tax spirits on hand, and then the House exhibited a wonderful change of opinion by concurring with the Senate in striking it out of the House bill. The bill as it now stood not only excluded all tax on liquors on hand, but it had lowered the sliding scale fixed by the Senate from 70 to 65 and from 50 to 70 cents per gallon.

As a compromise he might have agreed to tax liquor on hand to twenty cents additional on a gallon, and an advance of the sliding scale to eighty cents and one dollar; as that was not in the bill. he appealed to the House to vote down the gallon, and an advance of the sliding scale to eighty cents and one dollar; as that was not in the holl, he appealed to the House to vote down the report, and have another Committee appointed, in the hope that something might be done to secure to the Treasury a portion of the immense sum to be paid by the people, which would otherwise go into the pockets of speculators. He warned the House if something of the kind were not done in this bill, the controversy on the question had but just opened, and that the question would be tried over again in the next Revenue bill, and after the representatives of the people had been instructed by an enlightened public sentiment. He teared that the action of Congress on this subject would indicate to the people that the interests of the combinations of individuals, of monopolizers, speculators, and corporations, would be com-

indicate to the people that the interests of the combinations of individuals, of monopolizers, speculators, and corporations, would be comparatively exempted from taxation, while the great burden would fall on the masses of the people who were least able to bear its weight. In conclusion, Mr. Washburne (III.) moved that the report be disagreed to and that the House ask for another Committee of Conference. Mr. Fernando Wood (N. Y.) felt it to be his duty to give the reason why, as a member of the Committee of Conference, he had agreed to the report. He fully agreed with Mr. Washburne in 11 that gentleman had said in support of the principles of his (Mr. Wood's) amendment taxing pirits on hand, which he had the honor to offer, and which was adopted by so large a vote. He elieved it right policy to tax whishey on hand, and regretted exceedingly, that so many gentlemen, no doubt from proper motives, had changed their position in this House. The principle of that amendment was ably discussed, and all the arguments which could be commanded were expressed for and againstit. He was ready to co-operate with the gentleman to sustain that principle nnd incorporate it, which he could in another bill; but as hunderstood the power of Conference Committees, they are excluded from considering points about which there are no differences, and that their jurisdiction can extend only to those points which are in controversy, the two Houses having finally and previously agreed on the disputed features of the bill. There were on the Committee of Conference gentlemen whose long experience in legislation entitled their opinions to respect. He had no opinion of his own as to the powers of such committees. It was sufficient to say that gentlemen who had been for sixteen years continually in Congress were of opinion that they had no jurisdiction over questions about which the two Houses were agreed, and to this opinion had hey leaded.

Mr. Washburne (III.) briefly expressed his reason for the formation over the powers of the heaves for t gress were of opinion that they had no jurasdiction over questions about which the two Houses were agreed, and to this opinion he had yielded.

Mr. Washburne (III.) briefly expressed his reasons for differing from such construction as to the power of Centerence Committees, and appealed to the Speaker as to his view of the matter.

The Speaker as to his view of the matter.

The Speaker by unanimous consent, stated, in response to Mr. Washburne's inquiry of him, that the conference report, ruled out by the Vice-President at the last Congress, was properly ruled out, in his opinion, because, after settling the disagreements, they reported a recommendation to change the original text; but of the power on concurrence by proposing amendments to the pending amendments, there could be no doubt, provided that they did not report any amendment in the same language and effect as both Houses had rejected.

Mr. Elijah Ward (N.Y.) said that while his colleague (Mr. Fernando Wood) had moved an amendment that the increase tax should apply to all whiskey on hand, with a view, as alleged, to reach speculators, without reference to the injury it would inflict upon distillers, legitimate traders and consignees who had made advances on spirits at the present rate of taxation, he had deemed it his duty to his constituents to vote against the whole bill in that objectionable shape, though disposed to favor a liberal system of taxation in a proper form. His colleague (Mr. Wood) having urged his amendment as a revenue measure necessary to support the government, had voted against it when made in conformity with his views. He urged that the hill, as reported, was prospective in its operation, except as to spirits on ship-board hound to the United States, and in bonded warehouses and public stores. He condemned the in houses and public stores. He condemned the in-justice of serio-active legislation recommended, and and the same principle already sanctioned in re-gard to domestic spirits should be applied to those imported. He regarded this course as essential to the consistency of the House. At present, it a vessel arrives the day after the act is passed, the mporter who sent his orders abroad without anti-inpoting the proposed increase, must pay the ad-titional tax—a species of legislation without parcipaing the proposed increase, and giftonal tax—a species of legislation without parallel in this country.

He showed that by the various acts of March 2d, 161, August 6th, 1861, and July 14th, 1862, sufficient time had been given to allow most of the goods, bona fide ordered and shipped without anticipation of increased duty, to arrive before the law was enforced, and urged that the proposed law was an unwarrantable interference with the ordinary laws and security of commerce; that merchandise on shipboard bound to the United States had always been exempted from increased duty, or a reasonable time for its arrival had been given.

Mr. Kasson (lows) in referring to the remarks of Mr. Fernando Wood, said the gentleman, in urging a reduction of the sliding scale, did not represent the opinion of the House. If the House voted anything, they voted against the sliding scale. He a reduction of the sliding scale, did not represent the opinion of the House. If the House voted anything, they voted against the sliding scale. He earnestly hoped they would reconsider both clauses in relation to the sliding scale, with the view of rendering the bill more in accordance with the opinions of the House.

Mr. Stevens (Pa.) hoped that the House would not stuttify themselves. The position taken by the committee was the only one which, by the parliamentary law, they could adopt. The House adopted the clause for taxing spirits on hand. The Senate struck it out, and in this the House concurred. The committee were, therefore, bound to put no tax upon spirits on hand. There was no principle in parliamentary law which authorized them to depart from it. In the course of his remarks he said that men on the temperance side of this question became as intoxicated as if they had been drinking liquor for a month, and they become so giddy that they loose their reason and forget the parliamentary law. [Laughter.]

so gludy that they toose their reason and forget the parliamentary law. [Laughter.]

He denied that the House were throwing away revenue by agreeing to the Senate's amendments, as modified. The Senate bill would have produced fourteen millions more, but this bill, as it revenue by agreeing to the Senate's amendments, as modified. The Senate bill 'would have produced fourteen millions more, but this bill, as it now stands, would produce nine and a half millions more from year to year. It was time they were done with this deleterious agitation. The gentleman from Illinois had been talking about speculators coming hither, but he (Mr. Stevens) thought the gentleman (Mr. Washburne) would hold out against an army of besiegers. None appeared before the committee but distillers, not one of whom had spirits on hand. Seventy-two large distillers alone were consulted. He moved that the House concur in the report of the Committee of Conference.

The questions was taken, and the report was non-concurred in—yeas, 57; nays, 86. as follows: Yaas—Messrs. James C. On

On motion of Mr. Washburne (Ill.) it was ordered that a new committee of conference be asked to the Senate.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union.

Mr. Blow (Mis.) resumed his remarks from Friday, is reply to his colleague, Mr. Blair. He defended Secretary Chase's trade regulations which had been attacked, and also commented upon a public address of Montgomery Blair. He said he could tell the Postmaster General that if the rebellion be erusbed out and the Federal authority restored, it would be sfleeted by the abolition party, and the black race protected in the freedom which is now established by violence, outrage and wrong. His prayer was that we might have the courage and ability to act so justly that the God of nations will not abandon us.

Mr. McDowell (Ind.) arraigned the President and Republican party as fanatical hypocrites, an of having changed the declared policy of the war, and made it our for the abolition of slavery. With the President's Proclammion had come dissensions and divisions at the North; the destruction of free and divisions at the North; the destruction of freedom of speech and the press; the suspension of the habeas corpus, and the cenial of the right of trial by jury; the invasion of peaceful homes, and arbitrary arrests and mock trials and exile; and now the dominant party had borrowed from Europe a Conscription law to compel our people to carry on an abolition war. He denied any sympathy with the rebellion, but said we must accompany the sword with the olive branch of peace, and build up a Union sentiment to protect the South after our armies shall leave it.

The Committee rose, and the House, at half-past four o'clock, adjourned.

DOUBLE TUBE PIPE.

One of the most valuable of all resent inventions for the luxury and interest of those who use Tobacco, is the above named Pipe.

It differs from the old style in having two Tubes throughout the stem, instead of one, whereby the smoke is kept entirely separate from the saliva and nicotine. The effect is really charming. The pure odor of the Tobacco is preserved, thus rendering the smoke far more delicious, and the Pipe never becomes offensive.

This Pire is rapidly superseding the old style of Pipes, and monopolizing the favor of all smokers, because it is in reality far better and cheaper than others.
