[Written for the Phila. Evening Bulletin.] SABBATH READINGS.

BY THE REV. EDWARD C. JONES, A. M. HEZEKIAH'S SICKNESS AND RE-

COVERY. Man must approach the dust before he can realize that earth is one grand impertinence. Thus no doubt Hezekiah felt it as he reposed in feebleness on a royal couch. Isaiah came to him with the prophetic burden: Set thine house in order—that is is time to make the final disposition of all your affairs. It is time to enter the last item in the account book—time to arrange the whole economy of your domestic, civil. spiritual relations—time to invoke a blessing on your successor-time to part with crown, sceptre and purple garb of royalty forever. Wonder you that the king wept sore, and turned his face to the wall and prayed to that great Being, by whom kings reign and princes execute justice, for a prolongation of his days. Wonder you that he pleaded the promises and reminded God how closely he had followed the precepts of goodness and truth. Oh, the agony of that intercession. Oh, the depth and compass of that wrestling prayer. Said Satan on one occasion, "Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life." Instances, indeed there are, where existence is parted with in a reckless and indifferent spirit. Calamity and grief will sometimes * reconcile us to the change from earth to futurity, but in most cases earth's children cling to earth as the mist which rolls up from the valley ascends but slowly and holds tenaciously to the mountainbrow before it wreathes upwards to the clouds and disappears forever. No instinct is stronger than the love of life. Nor is the instinct censurable. If hours be the soil in which we plant a harvest for eternity-if moments be the golden coin to be put out to interest for the securing moral, spiritual, intellectual advantage what marvel if we evince anxiety to have length of days? That the prayer of Hezekiah for the prolongation of his term of life, harmonized with the divine will, is obvious, from the fact that the same prophet who announced his coming death now returns to disclose the cheering fact that a respite of fifteen years would be granted him, and that in three days he would go up to the house of the Lord. So unlooked for was the gratifying announcement, that Hezekiah evinced a great incredulity and distrust. To quote the household aphorism, "The news was too good to be true." Happily for man, Jehovah accommodates himself to our feeble faith. He puts his fatherly hands beneath the arms of tottering childhood and steadies the footsteps of those he loves. He knoweth our frame. He knows how hard it is for sinful man to realize that Supreme Goodness should condescend to meet his wishes, and therefore he not only gives us his promise, but confirms that promise with an oath, saying-As I live, saith the Lord, my word shall never pass away. In the case of Hezekiah, two signs were in reality granted: one the sunple agency by which he was healed, and one the return of the shadow ten degrees upon the dial of Ahaz, his departed father. The first was the simple application of a lump of figs to the diseased part of his body. This effected his physical restoration. This certainly was a sign sufficiently strong for the weakest faith. If an improbable cause is thus united to an astounding consequent; if figs neutralize the force of a distemper, but was nothing bettered but rather grew worse by what the physicians esteemed remedial agencies of the highest kind, then certainly he may live for fifteen years, or fifty years, if such be the Divine proclamation. Another sign was, however, granted. The shadow crept back again with leisurely but steadfast pace on the solid plate of the time-measurer. as if the chariot of the sun had halted and retraced his burning path as he was about careering to the western goal. And as he saw the shadow slowly creeping backward and moving on from the degree of past meridian to the hour which told of a noonday sun, oh, must he not have clapped his hands in a pious ecstasy and cried-"I shall not die but live, and declare the works of the Lord." The sequel of the life of Hezekiah did not harmonize with his grateful feelings upon his convalescence. In the vain display of his treasures to the Prince of Babylon, who had come to extend his congratulations upon his recovery, we see the traces of unsubdued pride and selfishness, the attachment of the heart to sources of created good. So hard is it to weaken our grasp on time. So soon does man snap the golden strand of pious resolution which he wove in the loom of prayer upon his bed of sickness. When strength comes back to him earth picks up the shuttle, golden warp and all, and carries it off, triumphantly off, like Samson to the hazy distance, and Satan smiles sardonically at man as a reed

THE NATURE. CAUSES AND TREATMENT OF NERVOUS DEAFNESS. Translated from the French of 'Duchenne,' with additions. By Laurence Translated from the French of 'Duchenne,' with additions. Published and for sale by Lindsay & Blakiston, Published and for sale by Lindsay & Blakiston, No. 25 South Sixth street.

"This neat and unpretending little volume before us is devoted to the consideration of a group of diseases of the ear, for the relief of which most of us do very little that is rational, or indeed, generally, of any real avail. Forming an appandix to this translation from Duchenne is a paper by Dr. Turnbull—on Nervous Deafness. It gives his views and experiences on this obscure and importent subject, embracing remarks on the character, ettology, physiology, etc., etc. The little volume is very interesting and worth reading."—Cincinnati Lancet and Observer, October, 1853.

"Ur. Turnbull's 'additions' present a very good account of the existing state of knewledge with regard to nervous deafness."—Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, Sept. 10, 1863.

"We have now reached the conclusion of the little volume, which is presented to us in a very neat form. Considered as a whole, it is quite creditable to the translator; and to those specially interesting in Aural Surgery, and unacquainted with the original, will repay perusal and prove a valuable addition to the literature upon the subject."—Medical and Surgical Reporter, Aug. 22, 1863.
