SENATE. Mr. Grimes (Iowa) introduced a bill to ame the act of July, 1862, to establish and equalize it grade of line officers in the United States Navy The bill requires the establishment of a Board Examiners, senior to the persons examined, of the mental, moral and professional fitness of caudidates for nomination to any office lower than Commodore. If an officer fails in the examination, he is to be placed on the retired list. No turner appointments upon the active list is allowed till the number is reduced to that how required by law. Mr. Wilson (Mass.), from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported a bill in relation to the pay of cadets at the military Academy, with amendments.

pay of cadets at the military Academy, with amendments.

Mr. Wade (Ohio) introduced a bill making appropriations for the repair, preservation and completion of certain public works heretofore commenced by authority, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

This bill provides for the expense of dredging by steam in Lakes Champlain. Ontario, Erie and Michigan, and for the improvements in the harbors of the three last named

Mr. Wilkinson (Mich.), rising to a personal explanation, read from the Boston Post a recent speech of Governor Andrew, in Fanenil Hall, criticizing a recent speech of his in the Sedate Chamber in reference to the comparative merits of the ber in reference to the comparative merts of the Eastern and Western armies. He denounced the sketch of the speech from which Gov. Andrew had quoted as garbled, and said that he snow d have been assured of its authenticity before arr over assured of its authenticity before arraiging him for having spoken a word in derogation of the troops from the East.

Mr. Wilkinson then read from the Globe the re-

Mr. Wilkinson then read from the Globe the remarks he had made in the Senate the other day, in which he imputes the repeated want of success of the Army of the Potomac to the want of capacity on the part of the officers, and not to any want of courage on the part of the men. He read from the evidence of the late Senator Bowden before the Committee on the tonduct of the War, in reference to the force at Yorktown, which is placed at from eight to ten thousand, and yet General McCliellan sat down before it, and caused Massachusetts and other soldiers to die for months, without earning distinction or glory. He asso read an extract from the Richmond Sentiael, in which some of the recent movements of General Grant are styled "atrocious blunders," What should we not havegained if McClellan had possessed a grain of Grant's "atrocious blundering" capacity?

He then proceeded to review the entire campaign of the Peninsula, commenting severely—upon the fact that Hooker was allowed to fight a whole day at Williamsburg, while an army of 35,00 men lay under their commander in chief within five miles, without coming to his relief. Also, to the fact of Casey having hear thrown for in education of the case.

without coming to his relief. Also, to the fact of Casey having been thrown far in advance of the main army at Fair Oaks, where he was obliged to attain the shock of overwhelming numbers unturelieved, at a late hour of the afternoon, by Sumrelieved, at a late hour of the afternoon, by Sum ner's forces, who, to aid them, swam the Chicka Telieved, at a late hour of the afternoon, by Sumner's forces, who, to aid them, swam the Chickahominy.

Mr. Wilkinson repeated the charge, that while the great victory of Malvern Hills was being won General McCliellan was safely ensioned on a gunbeat. There General Grant's blundering audacity would flave reaped the full fruits of victory. He also animadverted on the course of the commanders of the Army of the Potomac during Gen. Pope's second Bull Run fight.

He was informed that before the battle of Gettysburg, which he considered the greatest battle on record, the order had been issued for a retreat, which would have been'carried out if sone of the corps in the advance had not already become engaged, rendering a retreat impossible. This battle was fought as no battle ever was fought before, and a more memorable victory was won than any ever gsined by Napoleon. Lee's army could then have been annihilated. The soldiers would have done it; but the army was halted on the banks of the Potomac, while Gen. Lee's army were left to cross with only eight rounds of cartridge per man, which would have lasted but four minutes. He helieved Gen. Meade was a pure and patriotic man, but for the honor of the army and the country, it should be known that the want of success is due not to the men, but because the army has not been managed as the conquering and victorious army of the West has.

Mr. Johnson (Md.) would not have said a word in reply to the Seraior from Minnesota if he hadner.

not been managed as the conquering and victorious army of the West has.

Mr. Johnson (Md.) would not have said a word in reply to the Seraior from Minnesota if he had not, in making his personal explanation, gone out of his way to attack others not concerned. He has assailed officers in whom the people and (in some of whom) the President has confidence, and one of whom the Executive still retains in an important command-and in whom he has confidence. In reply to the assertion that during the battle of Malvern Hill Gen. McClellan was on a gunboat, he emphatically denied it. Upon what authority does the Senator make this statement? Gen. McClellan was present during the engagement, and personally superintended the disposit of the forces in this great battle, which not only covered the Army of the Potomac with glory, but added lustre to the army of the United States. The Senator has stated that Gen. Meade had ordered a retreat just previous to the battle of Gettysburg. There was nothing in the files of the War Department, and there had been nothing communicated to us by the Executive showing that such was the case. This proves that it was never given. Mr. Johnson degrees of the army cutive showing that such was the case. This proves that it was never given. Mr. Johnson deprecated this attack upon officers of the army. They peril their lives and reputation as much as the men, and deserved to enjoy with them the success of the war. The honorable Senator tells us this might have been done and that might have been done, and he places his authority in some of these matters upon Gen. Hooker. He (Mr. Johnson) would not quest on the patriotism and courage of Gen Hooker, nor his shility to lead a division or a corps, but he had yet to learn that he commanded the army with more success than General Meade, though his command was an unrestricted one. What was the result of a movement which, however well devised and successful in the beginning, ended finally in lamentable disaster. He did not suppose it could be avoided. The Senator also assailed the Army of the Potomac, not on account of any want of loyalty, but on account of the inclinion of its officers.

also assailed the Army of the Potomac, not on account of any want of loyalty, but on account of the inefficiency of its officers.

Mr. Wade (Ohio) said the President was charged unjustly with planning the peninsmar campaign. If the President's plans had been carried out there would have been no trouble about it. Pefore he allowed Gen. McClellan to go he made it a precedent condition that Washington should be amply protected. McClellan violated the President's orders, and left no sufficient number of troops for its defence; yet he had hardly reached Yorktown before he was calling for McDowell's troops, when he knew a large rebe force was in front of Washington. It was not the fault of the President that he went to the Peninsula.

Mr. Wilson (Mass.) had listened with deep regret to this debate all around. On the one side the officers, and on the other side the government, are held responsible, and between the two it does not seem that the government is suffering. It seemed to him to be wrong to hold the government responsible. It you have no confidence in your officers, there is no hope of success. The gentleman from Minnesota has made a personal gentleman from Minnesota has made a personal explanation against some remarks of Governor Andrew. The Senator should know that we are criticised at home on telegraphic dispatches purporting to give what we say and do here. We should be careful and not censure the President, nor the Secretary of War, nor Gen. Halle-k, for the misfortunes of others. When victories are won they are claimed by the officers winning them. They are loth to share them with the War Department.

Department.

Mr. Anthony read from the testimony of Gen.
Meade in vindication of Gen Burnside.

Mr. Hendricks, in view of the subject presented in the debate, offered a joint resolution of inquiry into the causes of the late disaster in Florida, and ander whose direction it was made; which was Mr. Sherman called up the subject of the disa greeing votes on the Whiskey bill. He called attention to the message from the House, and offered a resolution that the request of the House to another committee of conference, with instruc tions to agree upon a tax of not less than twenty nor more than forty cents on spirits of domestic liquors on hand, be acquesced in. A lengthy debate ensued on the question as to he proper parliamentary mode in a proceeding o the proper parliamentary mode if a proceeding of this kind.

Mr. Sherman's resolution was rejected.

Mr. Grimes thought they had better get rid of the whole subject, as it was evident the Senate and House could not agree, and ki the matter come up in a new bill. He moved that the subject be infefinably a molion of Mr. Conness, that the Senate disagree to the resolutions of instruction prepared by the House, and agree to a free Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, Was adopted.

The Senate went into executive session and shortly afterwards adjourned.

House,—The House passed the Senate bill appropriating forty thousand dollars for military protection to overland emigrants to the Pacific States and territories. The route is through the Indian country a distance of six or eight hundred miles, and is infested by robbers and highwaymen.

Mr. McClurg (Mo.) asked leavy to make an horty stream of the country of the North of men.

Mr. McClurg (Mo) asked leave to make an bour's speech relative to the personalities of his colleagues, Messrs. King and Blair, but objection ade, notion of Mr. Julian (Ind.), the Committee On motion of Mr. Julian (Ind.), the Committee on the Judiciary were instructed to inquire whether there is any starute punishing the tarveny of public property by any Federal court when the crime is not committed on the high seas or places where the United States have not exclusive, jurisdiction, and whether there is any statute to punish the murder of any officer of the United States, unless the act is committed in places over the committed in places. leave to introduce a resolution calling on the President and Secretary of State and the Secretary of War to furnish the name as of all persons arrested and a name of the persons arrested and a name of the secretary of the secre sgreed to, to substitute a bill reported from the committee on Commissioners and solicitors to investigate and report upon claims in the districts of Columbia. West the hard of reports of the country o says in conclusion we ought not to allow any court or tribunal to pass on these claims, however small the amount may be, and the Government should not now commit itself to acknowledge their va-not now commit itself to acknowledge their validity.

Mr. When acquiesced in the views above expressed by Solicitor Whiting, and referred to the character of a single claim from Fairiax county Virginia, the woman presenting her petition to the Court of Claims stating that of the thirty-seven thousand dollars claimed, thirty thousand is for compensation for negroes who have run away. We should not row take jurisdiction of such a mass of claims involving so much pecuniary outlay.

We should not row take jurisdiction of such a mass of claims involving so much pecuniary outlay.

Mr. Thomas (Md.) replied, characterizing Solicitor Whiting's letter as a clamorous report. In relation to Maryland, he knew from observation that farms had been devastated by the orders of our military officers, and not one claim in twenty had been paid or certificates given. He did not believe the payment of honest claims would seriously embarrass military operations.

Mr. Houtwell advocated the bill as it was reported, and expressed himself in favor of considering kindred matters separately.

Mr. Schenck (Ohio) offered an amendment, limiting the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims to cases where certificates have been given by military officers, and where the evidence is clear that property taken has been used or applied to the benefit of the Government, or on cases of contract. Further debate ensued, during which Mr. Grider, of Kentucky, sarnestly opposed the bill, insis ing that the claims of the border States ought not to be postponed while those of other States ought not to be postponed while those of other States ought not to be postponed while those of other States ought not to be postponed while those of other States are paid. They had suffered more than other States, because the people had in many cases been subject to loss both from the rebel and our own army. They of course could obtain no indemnity from the former, but this fact ought not to exclude them from just compensation for serious losses incurred. Mr. Blair (W. Va.) earnestly advocated the payment of claims. To refuse to do so would be unjust to the border States.

Mr. Wilson said some of these claims were of a character never admitted by any government, and he was desirous to prevent robbing the Treasury. Mr. Blair trusted in God some measure might be brought before Congress in which the negro would not be introduced. He was thankful the States of West Utrains was free col. It is a claim.

be brought before Congress in which the negro would not be introduced. He was thankful the State of West Virginia was free soil. If the claims for negroes were unjust, do not pay them.

Mr. Wilson replied that was what he wanted to do by taking the jurisdiction from the court o claims."

Mr. Blair said if he had to pay for negroes, the owners would get but little money. He appealed to gentlemen from all sections to do justice to the border States, which have suffered so much and border States, which have suffered so much and made so many sacrifices.

Mr. Whaley (West Va.) said the border States had abundantly shown their patrictism by rushing to the defence of the country, and now when it was known they had so severely suffered, he appealed to the House to do them justice by providing for the settlement of all loyal claims.

The House agreed to the amendment of Mr. Thomas (Md.), which provides that all claims for Quartermaster's stores may be submitted to the Quartermater-General, and all claims for the subsistence to the Commissary General, accompanied by proof, and its made the duty of those officers to examine the claims, and if found correct they are to to be referred to the third Auditor of the Treasury for payment, which shall be fluid and conclusive. It also, provides for the ascertainment of claims by eq provides for the ascertainment of claims by e appointment of a Commissioner and Solicitor or each of the districts described in the amendment. Care is to be taken to exclude disloyal laims; and all claims not presented within three years are to be excluded.

A message was received from the Senate that that body had disagreed to the House instructions to the latter's committee of conference on the Whiskey bill, and asked for a free Committee of

This was agreed to by the House.
