XXXVIIITH CONGRESS.—FIRST SESSION. CLOSE OF YESTERDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

SENATE.

The Senate, on motion of Mr. Ramsey (Minn.), proceeded to the consideration of the bill granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad from St. Paul, Minnesots, to the head waters of Luke Superior.

Hr. Howe opposed the bill at considerable theneth length.
Messrs. Ramsey, Wilkinson and Johnson sup-

Mr. Doolittle replied to the remarks of Mr. Johnson, and defended his State from any narrowminded policy as against her sister State Minnesota.

On motion of Mr. Doolittle, the bill granting dands to aid the coastruction of a rathroad from St. Paul to the head of Lake Superior was postponed antil Thursday.

The Senate went into Executive session at 3.15 P. M., and shortly afterwards adjourned.

House of representatives.

Mr. Alley, from the Committee on P st Offices and Post-roads, reported a bill for carrying the mails between the United States and foreign countries. It requires all steamers and salling vessels to perform the service when so directed, and promptly to deliver the mails, for which they are to receive such reasonable compensation as may be allowed by law. Mr. Alley explained the remaining provisions, saying the committee thought the above was just and proper, inasmuch as those vessels received the protection of the United States at a vast expense. The next section authorized the Postmaster General to make contracts for four years for the transportation of mail matter other than letters by the Pacific or Nicarragua route, provided the expenditure shall not exceed one hundred and sixty thousand dollars per annum, and if in any case more than one company shall be engaged, the Postmaster General shall determine the proportion to be paid to each. At the present time the Department contracts for the carrying of the overland mail at a cost of one million dollars. The newspaper mails, conveyed by the sea, cost one hundred and sixty thousand dollars. This is contracted for by the overland mail contractors. The Department though: it but ter the Government should itself contract immediately for the service, so that it might have direct control. The fourth section provides that all mailable matter overland shall be subject to prepaid control. The fourth section provides that all mailable matter overland shall be subject to prepaid letter postage, but not be held to exclude newspapers—one copy to each remuse and a copy to each remuse where the cop paid letter postage, but not be held to exclude newspapers—one copy to each regular subscriber. Vast amounts of mail matter are, Mr. Aliey said, now sent overland which should go by sea. The Postmaster General, by this bill, may enter into contract, not exceeding one year, for carrying mails in steamships between the United States and Pacific and Gulf coasts. The bill also legalizes the transportation of mails to and from New Orleans. Pauns and penalties are provided for the violation of the provisions of the bill, which was passed. The House took up the Senate's amendments to the Deficiency bill.

The House took up the Senate's amendments to the Deficiency bill.

Mr. Brooks (N. Y.) said when this bill was originally reported from the Committee of Ways and Means, it contained an appropriation of four millions one hundred and eighty thousand dollars. When it passed the House the sum had been increased to seven and a half millions, but to this the Senate added amendments to the extent of pasters. Senate added amendments to the extent of nearly ninety-nine millions, so that the appropriations had swollen to a hundred and six millions at the commencement of the session. The Secretary of War had not asked a single dollar for deficiencies, War had not asked a single dollar for deficiencies, but now he demanded ninety-nine million dollars. In the course of four or five years, at this rate of increase, the burdens would be too heavy fer any nation on earth to endure. For the fiscal year ending with June, 1864, including payment of bounties, the expenditures for the War Department would be a thousand millions.

Mr. Brooks contrasted the former war expenditures under this Government, for the purpo-e of showing the appalling increase of expenditures. His mind failed to fully comprehend the subject, for the figures confounded him. It was beyond the power of arithmetic to understand the calculation and the principles on which it was founded. He regarded it as unjust that such an enormous debt-should be left for posterity to pay, instead of making provision for its liquidation by taxation. In examining the estimates of thirty millions for the Quartermaster's Department, he said, some of the transportation was for carrying soldiers to New Hampship. Quartermaster's Department, he said, some of the transportation was for carrying soldiers to New Hampshation Work. New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland, to execute the purpose of the party in power, in order to carry the elections. The money, he believed, was not expended for the legitimate expenditures of the war-not for the capture and overthrow of the rebel army, and to carry the stars and stripes to Capitol hill, at Richmond, or to the forts of Mobile and Charleston-but to subdue the conservative power of those States. This he denonneed, with all his power and vigor. He appeared from the majority of this House to God Almighty, to put His mark of reprobation on such wicked acts. He would not vote one dollar of these items until their objects were made clear.

Mr. Stevens (Pa.) was glad the gentleman had taken this time to get before the country this cam-taken this time to get before the country this cam-paign document There was no better time for it. paign document. There was no better time for it.

As to the appeal from the majority of this House to another tribunal, he (Mr. Stevens) did not know either party had standing in that court to try the issue. The gentleman's declaration not to vote for transportation very well suited the tactics of the other side, who would have not transportation.

other side, who would have no troops, or if we had troops, would keep them out of the field.

He (Mr. Stevens) did not expect any help from the other side of the Honse. He and the gentleman from New York were formerly members of this branch of Congress and of the same party, and when a gentleman from Alabama, as Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, reported extravagant appropriation bills, the gentleman made just such a speech against extravagance as he did to day. The speech fitted just as well at that time as it did now, but he (Mr. Stevens) hoped the Committee would at once proceed to consider the Senate's amendments, eighty in number. In explanation of the increase of the appropriations for deficiencies, he said when the bill was first reported, there was no call for five hundred thousand troops, but when the call was made, new estimates had to be furnished, and which were presented to the be furnished, and which were presented to the Senate and the House. If any of the items were improper, the House could vote them down had the very idea that we are to paralyze the arm of the Government and starve our brave soldier might become the other side of the House, bu might become the other side of the House, but would be disgraceful to patriots.

The item of thirty thousand dollars for medical attendance of contrabands having been read, gave rise to a debate, during which, Mr. Smith (Ky.) said the South cared nothing for us, and would destroy both white and black if necessary to maintain their independence and overthrow our Government. For himself, speaking as a slaveholder, and whose family, as far as he could trace back, were staveholuers, he would be ever ready to give aid and comfort to any slave who would escape from his rebel master, and make him a free man. The Government, if wanting means to put down the rebellion, was at liberty to take his horses, negroes, corn, or anything else, and he would no more undertake to restore to slavery those who more undertake to restore to slavery those who had fled from their rebel masters than he would cut off his right arm.

Mr. Mallory (Ky.) did not mean to be led into a humanitarian discussion; but white men as well Mr. Mallory (Ky.) did not mean to be led into a humanitarian discussion; but white men as well as black are daily coming into our lines, and are entitled at least to a proportion of the Government's charity. He would not consign any class of people to starvation in this world and perdition in the next. He repeated what he had heretofore uttered in debate, namely; that the negro is not fit for free men and not able to compete with white men. He was willing to contribute money out of his own private pocket to assist all those in distress.

Mr. Smith (Ky.) in replying to Mr. Mallory, said he knew petitions had been sent hither from Mr. Smith (Ky.) in replying to Mr. Mallory, said he knew petitions had been sent hither from Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas planters, in favor of the system of free labor; some owning from one to three hundred slaves have agreed to enter upon that system, and to day are employing their slaves on their plantations at wages, and are thus making more money than they ever did before under the old plan. The policy is just and right, and should be maintained.

Mr. Bliss (Ohio) opposed, and Mr. Farnsworth, of Illinois, briefly supported the item under consideration.

Mr. James C. Allen was opposed to voting money for the henefit of everybody who may attach himself for the benefit of every body who may attach himself to a military camp. He said that at one time in East Tennessee our soldiers were on half rations, while the government was supporting contraband negroes. The entire policy of fostering and protecting negroes in military camps was vicious in its effects.

ats effects.

Mr. Blow (Mo.) supported the item, and asked Mr. Mallory whether he did not know the fact, that men in Missouri have been engaged in running off free persons of color in Kentucky to be sold into

Mr. Mallory replied, that if such was the fact he was not aware of it, but if so there was a statute in Kentucky to punish such crimes. As to mixed classes, he had heard of a convention recently assembled at Louisville. They were neither Chase, Fremont or Lincoln men, but all got along lovingly together and constituted a happy family. He did not know until now there were sable gentlemen present at the convention.

He did not know until now there were sable gentlemen present at the convention.

Mr. Blow never heard of any one being punished for such offences in Kentucky.

M. Mallory—Have you yourself ever heard of any colored persons being forciby carried from Missouri into Kentucky?

Mr. Blow—I have.

Mr. Mallory—If you point out the guilty person in Kentucky, he will be punished.

Mr. Frank P. Blair (Mo.) in reference to his colleague (Mr. Blow), remarked that it could not possibly be that freemen had been run from Missouri into Kentucky. He knew of no anthentic, produce the proof. His colleague and his colleague's friends had seized on the sorrows of the negro race to make political capital. He recollected when his colleague was a pro-slavery man, and that not a great while ago, when he supported that a gainst Col. Benton.

Mr. Blow said he never owned a slave in his

Mr. Blow said he never owned a slave in his life, and never favored a pro-slavery candidate.

Mr. Blow said he swas himself a member of the american party, while the party of his colleague (Mr. Blair) was divided. He knew what his colleague claimed to be, but did not know what fraction of the party he belonged to. With regard to coing in the Legislature for United States Senator, the American war was party amounted the entire the the American party supported the candidate be-cause he belonged to that organization irrespective of his views on the slavery question.

Mr. Blair replied that the contest in the Missouri Legi-lature was not a question of Americanism but only a subterfuge of the American party to over hrow Col. Benton, and his colleague yeted to over hrow Col. Benton, and his colleague yeted instead of Joniphan for Atchisoa, as the latter better represented his colleague's pro-slavery views. He appealed to his colleague (Mr. Rollins) to say whether the statement was true or faise. Mr. Rollins (Mo.) replied that he was too modest a man to be drawn into a fight of this character. He was outside the bar of the House when the contest commenced, and therefore did not fully understand it.

Mr. Stevens said he must call the gentlemen to order. Let them speak on the amendment or not at all.

Bir. Blair to Mr. Stevens—You take care of your own bantling.

h.r. Stevens—I don't take care of anybody, nor do I care for anybody. [Laughter. A voice—

That's a fact. | Fir. Rollins then stated a few facts from recol-Hir. Rollins then stated a few facts from recollections. Whatever credit is attached to emancipation in Missouri, his colleague on the left (Mr. Blair) was certainly entitled to be called the father of it in that State, being willing, as far back as 1850, to break a lance on the subject. He had always understood his colleague on his right (Mr. Blair) in 1855. He (Mr. Rollins) had the honor of meeting his colleague (Mr. Blow) in the dark lantern association, (Laughter,) and recollected very well that in the Legislature of Missouri his colleague preferred Atchison because the latter had stronger pro-slavery views than Doniphan, the candidate of the American party. He (Mr. Follins) represented a constituency known as Whigs, strongly inclined to pro-slavery, and therefore he uniformly voted for Doniphan. Although his colleague (Blow) was some years ago a Know-nothing, he was now the representative of the Germans of St. Louis (Laughter.) While the one (Blair) was for emancipation, the other (Blow) was any hyperstreet was the stream.

one (Blair) was for emancipation, the other (Blow) was all the time an inveterate pro-slavery man.

Mr. Blow said in all his controversies he had Mr. Bolims and, the the day of the action of the Legislature, had failed to make a point. His controversies he had never descended to personalities, nor had he done injustice to any gentleman. He would scorn to rob his colleague Mr. Blair, of a single honor, although his colleague, took every occasion to indurge in personal allusions to himself; but he would let these pass as the idle wind. His colleague had himself defended nim against the charges which he had just made. The defence was recorded in the columns of his own organ, where the assirtions were pronounced falsehoods. His other colleague (Mr. Rollins), in speaking of the action of the Legislature, had failed to make a point. His colleague could not show that he (Mr. Blow) was ever a pro-slavery man. There was no such issue at the time.

Mr. Rollins said, did you not at one time vote for Doniphan?

Mr. Blow replied that he did so vote, with every member of his party.

Mr. Rollins—Was not Mr. Doniphan a pro-slavery man?

Mr. Rounns-was not mr. Dompinen a pro-sia-very man?

Mr. Blow replied the gentlemen knew as well as himself the position of the American party, to which both of them belonged. They knew the American party made no such issue. It was an extraordinary spectacle for his colleague, who claimed to be a free soiler, to vote forty-four times for Doniphan, who, it was now said by him, was pro-slavery man.

Mr. Bollins explained, that he voted for Mr. Doniphan in order to carry out the wishes of his constituents. His colleague, anxious to defeat Mr. Benton, entered into an alliance against him. Mr. Benton, entered into an alliance against him.
Mr. Blow said the gentleman was welcome to all he could obtain by an explanation. He voted one way, while he thought another way.
Mr. Bolins remarked that he would be glad if he could help his friend to get right.
Mr. Blow further defended his position, alluding to what had been said about him as poor, miserable slanders, produced on every available occasion, and said he still adhered to the principles of the American party.
Mr. Rollins thought his colleague's language was not a fair specimen of chaste English language. He protested that he did not wish to do his colleague injustice, and believed they were both patriotically engaged at this time in all-honorable efforts to suppress the rebellion. He thought they efforts to suppress the rebellion. He thought they had better end the Missouri fight right here. It they did not it would be renewed.

The Committee then rose, and at five o' clock the House adjourned.
