FORTERSS MONROR, March 8, 1864.—The undersigned, members of the "Board of Distribution," lately confined in Libby Prison, feel that the greatest favor they can confer on their unfortunate comrades is to call the attention of their friends and families in the North to the following suggestions:

First—Boxes should not exceed twelve cubic feet, or two feet square and three feet long.

Second—They should invariably be stoutly and securely bound with 1ron hoops.

Third—Coffee, tea, sugar, flour, tobacco and articles of like character should be put in stout paper or canyass bags.

COLONEL DAHLGER'S BODY.

[From the Richmond Examiner, March 8.]

Dahlgren's body was boxed up at Walkerfown on Sunday and brought to Richmond, with the object, we understand, of its positive identification, and the establishment of the fact of the finding of the infamous documents upon it, all of which has been attested by witnesses. Her ceforth the name of Dahlgren is linked with eternal infamy, and in the years to come defenceless woman and innocent child-hood will peruse, with a sense of shrinking horror the story of Richmond's rescue from the midnight sack and lavage led by Dahlgren. It would seem something of the curse he came to bestow upon others lighted upon his own carcass, when it fell riddled by avenging Southern bullets. Stripped, robbed of every valuable, the fingers cut off for the sake of the diamond rings that encircled them, when the body was found by those sent to take charge of it, it was lying in a field, stark naked, with the exception of the stockings. Some humane persons had lifted the corpse from the pike and thrown it over into the field, to save it from the hogs. The artificial leg worn by Dahlgren was removed, and is now at General Elzey's headquarters. It is of a most beautiful design and finish.

Yesterday afternoon the body was removed from the car that brought it to the York River Railroad depot and given to the spot of earth selected to receive it. Where that spot is no one but those corcerned in its burial know or care to tell. It was a dog's burial, without coffin, winding sheet or service. Friends and relatives at the North need inquire no further; this is all they will know—he is buried a burnal that befitted the mission open which he came. He has "swept through the city of Richmond" on a pine bier, and "written his name" on the scroll of infamy, instead of "on the hearts of his countrymen," never to be crased. He "asked the blessing of Almighty God on his mission of rapine, murder and blood, and the Almighty cursed him instead.

THE NEGRO GUIDET.

[From the Richmond Examiner, March 8.]

Dahlgren's guide, recommended to him 'a the last moment' as the 'very man he wanted' by one 'fruly yours, John C. Babcock,' has reached the Libby, in company with the two or three hundred brigands he attempted to guide into the heart of Richmond: His name is John A. Hogan, an Irishman by birth, twenty-three years old, fall and lithe, with a fine, open countenance. When asked his rank, he declared himself a full, high private, and did not aspire to anything che. Being interrogated as to his knowledge of Richmond and its suburbs, he said he knew it 'dike a bog;' he was a guest at the Hotel de Libby in July, 1563, and knew the officers of the prison. Then recognizing Mr. Ross, the clerk Hogan broke out, 'How do ye do, Lieutenant Ross; glad to see you.' Hogan boasted of his narrow escape, having had four bullets put through his clothing and hair. In reply to a question as to whathe was fighting for, he replied he was fighting for fun. When such fun ends in a hempen rope, as we trust it will, Hogan will cease to estimate his business as a joke.

Hogan disposed of for the present, we would inquire who is this 'John O. Babcock' who sent Hogan on his own horse to Dahlgren! If found, he should certainly be sent headlong after Dahlgren, or brought to 'Richmond to 'participate in whatever fate awaits the outlaws of his command held here.

FALLING BACK OF BUTLER'S FORCES.

FALLING BACK OF BUTLER'S FORCES.

[From the Richmond Sentinel, March 7th.]
An official report to General Hunton, of date March 5th, by Lieutenant-Colonel Robins, says:
I have the honor to report that the enemy has retreated to Williamsburg. This news was brought to me, by my ecouts, who followed them some miles below Slatersville, and had information that they were below Burnt Ordinary, rapidly falling back to Williamsburg. Two regiments of infantry (negroes) came up on the Diasound road as far as Diasound bridge, and remained there until the whole force fell back.

From the Richmond Whig, March 3.]

Up to dusk last evening three commissioned officers and 161 privates had been registered and reported at the Labby Prison. The following are the officers: Lieut. Col. A. C. Litchield, of the 7th Michigan; Captain John A. Clark, 7th Michigan: Assistant Surgeon S. T. Kingston, 2d New York Cavalry. The first was captured at Meadow Bridge, the second at Mechanicsville, and the third on the Fredericksburg road. Of the privates, 15 were captured in Goochland, 7 at Terry's Mill, 2 on the Short Pump road, 47 at Ashland, 30 at Soutlanna, 1 on the Fredericksburg road, 7 at Meadow Bridge, 2 at Green's farm, 2 at Austin's farm, 6 at Mechanicsville, 15 on Brooke Turnpike, 6 on the River road, 1 at Spring farm, 1 at Brooke Church, 1 in Hanover, 2 in Henrico County, 2 on the Plank road; besides 15 not registered. About 90 of them were captured by Gen. Hampton. Equads were coming in all day yesterday and with the captures not reported the whole number will approximate 20.

THE RICHMOND PRESS ON THE RAID.

It requires no fine disquisition to see our way clear as to what should be done with those of the banditti who have fallen into our hands. But it does require nerve to execute the palpable convictions of our judgment—a judgment which will be promptly sustained by the civilized world, including China, the most truculent of nations; nations not uncivilized.

Are these men warriors? Are they soldiers, taken in performance of duties recognized as legatimate by the loosest construction of the code of civilized warriars? or are they assassins, barbarians, thugs, who have refetted (and expect to lose) their lives? To are they assassins, barbarians, thugs, who have refetted (and expect to for ore hellish purposes than were ever the Goth, of all Christendom will shudderingly proclaim them monsters, whom no sentimental idea of humanity, no timorous views of expediency, no trembling terror of consequences, should have shielded from the quickest and the sternest death.

What more have we to dread from Yankee malice or bratality than we now know awaits us, if success attend them? What have we to hope from their clemency? Will justice meted out to these poor creatures stimulate either the brutality of the Yankees on the one hand, crincrease their capacity and means for diabolism on the other? Both are now in fullest exercise.

If these men go unpunished, according to the exceeding magnitude of their crimes, do we not invite the Yankees to a similar, and, if possible, still would ere now have been their fate, it, during a war, such a body of men, with such purposes hands us have a such as a such as most emphatically say, send nothing excepting letters.

In making this recommendation we would not be understood as charging the Confederate authorities with want of faith or disposition to carry out their pledges, but owing to the soarcity of transportation and the uncertainty as to the whereabouts of the person addressed, it is almost an impossibility to secure the proper delivery of any package.

The results, indeed, of this tremendous intention of ravage and butchery were contemptible. The picked command, selected from brigares and regiments," for the thieving and murcering expedition, was not quite up to the mark; "the braves who were to have swept through Richmond" were very easily swept away from before Richmond, and their balls of oakum and turpentine, instead of bissing and flaming in our dwellings, and amidst terrified women and children, a-was expected, had to be thrown into the Pamunkey for the present Nevertheless, the minute programme of that piece of business cannot fail to be it structive. After our Government has existed for three years, and has all that time maintained large armies to meet and baffle their far greater armies in fair fight on the field, they think it till an allowable, nay a virtuous and glorious proceeding, to steal upon our chief magistrate and his Cabinet in their beds, and, after burning their houses, to hang them up on the next tree, just as the French in Algiers would do to a Kabyle chief and his encampment in the desert, or the English in India to some Nena Sahib or Ghoorka marauder.

the French in Algiers would do to a Kabyle chief and his encampment in the desert, or the English in India to some, Nena Sahib or Ghoorka marander.

Now—it is as well to look our position straight in the face—we are barbarians, in the eyes of our enemies. Our way of lite is, according to the diclum of one of these philosophers, whe sum of all barbarism." Against us, everything is fair. We also, though we have newspapers, and orators, and a certain command of the English language, are yet hemed in, for the present, by blockading fleets and armies that cur protest, if we attempt any, dies away in silence too. It is the simple fact, let us take it as we will, that those enemies against whom we fondly believe we are waging an honorable war, as nation against nation, are carrying on against us the very same sort of warfare that English armies think good enough for the revolted Sepoys and mutinous hill tribes. If they can surprise, by any sort of artifice, our kraal of Richmond, and deliver it over to the mercy of their troops, and hold in it one good carnival of lust and rapine, they will write their names in imperishable letters on the hearts of their countrymen. This situation of affairs was always known to us; but it was doubted or denied by many Confederates of feeble brain. Do they believe it now, understand it now, that we have i under the hand of federal officers of the law, and massacring indiscriminately the population.

instructions for sack and massacre in Richmond. Our government owes it to its own army and to its own people, if it cannot at the moment retaliate such atrocities in kind, at least to bring to condign punishment the robbers who, in the guise of soldiers and under pretence of war, have been caught lurking about Richmond with their oakum balls and turpenune, and their written programme for murdering the chief magistrate and setting fire to all the houses till the city is burnt in a hundred places at once, and then inviting eight thousand bloodthirsty, lustful ruffians to gut the blazing mansions, rape their mistresses, and knock the masters in the head in the dreadful confusion.

But if we hang these wretches then the enemy will select an equal number for the gallows? Not while we hold sixteen thousand hostages. But if we sbrink from that there is another alternative, and the only one left us—hanging and massacre all on one side. We can choose ketween the two: other choice there is none.

"LOOK TO VOUR ARMS."

[From the Richmond Enquirer, March 8.]

picture of the saying that 'estermal vigitance is the price of liberty,' and now. Within the last week this city has escaped a doom as awful as ever befel or could befal any city on the face of this globe. Three thousand ferotious horsemen, blasphemously invoking the blessing of Almighty God, essayed to sweep through our capital with the naked sabre in one hand and the pistol in the other. Six thousand equally ferocious prisoners were to have been let loose, with an order to kill our President and Cabinet, and burn 'the hated city,'' If these horsemen had got in by surprise, if these prisoners hud been suddenly let loose, our town, from Hollywood to Rocketts, from the basin bank to Nayy hill, would have been one volcano of fire, and amid the explosion of magazines and laboratories, and the burning of armories, stores and dwellings, there would have been heard the appalling shricks of thousands, nay, tens of thousands of women and children burning in the fiames. Rape and robbery, murder and massacre would have reigned supreme, and Yankee horsemen as per the programme laid down by the demon Dablgren, under orders from that incarnate fiend, Lincoln, would have fed and watered their horses outside the city (for, because of the flames inside, they could not do so), all the while centemplating with devilish delight the horrors within. And even suppose no woman or child perished in the flames, but escaped to the hills around, what would have been their fate, without food or raiment, or a roof to cover them? They would have died in thousands from fright, famine, and the cold. Look well to your arms, then, men of this city. Wait not til the last moment to call at the armory for arms or ammunition, or an exchange of arms; but have everything at hand and in good order, so that the call to arms may be answered instantly. Horsemen travel fast, and come down with a swoop. Be rendy to meet them.

THE GERMANTOWN RAILROAD AND THE SOL-

The Germantown Railhoad and the Solders.—When the 51st regiment P. V. returned to Norristown they met with an appropriate reception, and one of the organizations which participated was Captain Roberts's company of volunteers from this city. The committee of arrangements of the reception applied to the Philadelphia, Germantown and Norristown Railroad Company for the bill for the transportation of this company and received from Mr. Smith, the patrictic and popular General Superintendent, the following reply:

James Boyd, Esq., &c.—Dear Sir. Yours in relation to payment of fare for Captain Roberts's men is before me. Allow me to say, in reply, that I thought you were jesting when you offered to pay for them. Do you think we would make a charge for men who were the escort of the brave Sist regiment, whose Colonel has led them to victory so often, and whose brow is covered with laurels? Why, sir, we have carried over 10,000 soldiers without charge for the Government, and run extra trains time and again to do it. My dear sir, there is not only no charge, but whenever the Sist arrive again, a train is at their service.

Respectfully yours.

Another City Railway Reduce.—There are no less than three bills before the State Legislature for the friends of the deceased officer has which go over large portions of the city, and which go over large portions of the city, and which go over large portions of the city, and which go over large portions of the city, and which go over large portions of the city, and which go over large portions of the corporators named if the bills do not live upon or near the lines of the proposed roads, and can have no reason for desiring to construct roads, not demanded for their own or the public convenience, the inference is plain that their projects are mere speculations intended to fill the pockets of the projectors without regard to the public wants. The third bill is of a different character. The failway proposed to be constructed under its provisions will run upon no other thorough are but Spring Garden street, having a double track from Sixth street to Fairmount. The Corporators and others interested in the charter, all live or do business directly upon the line of the street, and if this bill becomes a law they can either construct the road or not as the wants of the public may demand. At all events the control of the street will be kept out of the hands of mere speculators. speculators.

The Ringing of the State House Bell.—Delegates from thirty-five fire companies held a meeting last evening at the Phœuix Hose House, in reference it of the recent order prohibiting the ringing of the State House bell except when a general alarm is necessary. Wm. Y. Campbell presided and James S. Hallowell acted as Secretary. It was stated that the Mayor had agreed to modify the order so that the bell may be rung between 10 P. M. and 6 A. M. The Thirteenth section of the Ordinance regulating the Fire Department, which provides for the ringing of District bells and the State House bell upon the discovery of a fire was read, and a committee was appointed to petition the Mayor and Councils to have the law carried out. The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That we most earnestly and respectfully urge upon his Honor Mayor Henry to give this subject a careful consideration, believing that the security of our citizens from loss by fire will be greatly promoted by repealing the recent order. Adjourned to meet at the call of the committee.

COURTS.

SUPREME COURT—Chief Justice Woodward and Justices I hompson, Strong and Read.—The following judgments were entered this morning:
Fleming vs. Fleming's Administrators. Error to District Court, Philadelphia. In this case the Court say that the only question for decision is whether the investment of knoneys in bonds and mortgages, by an attorney in fact, instead of remoting them abroad, as instructed, was fraudulent concealment. A majority of the Court think it was not. We hold that it was no more a fraudulent concealment than if the attorney had kept the money in his own pocket or bank account. A breach of duty it undoubtedly was. He ought to have rematted the funds as directed. And because he was suably for this breach of duty, the statute (of limitation) which always acts on the remedy and not the right, began to run, when the actice might have been brought. To arrest its progress, the plaintiff should have shown a fraudulent concealment of the monies, which, we think, was not done, by showing a safe investment of them... In order to arrest the running of the statute, a venire de nore is awarded.

Muhlenburg vs. The Reading Railroad Com-

arrest the running of the statute, a venire de nome is awarded.

Muhlenburg vs. The Reading Railroad Company. Certificate from the Nisi Prius.

It was optional with the complaimants, by the terms of the bonds, the subject of this bill, to have converted them into sock of the Company any time before the 1-t of July, 1860. If the election were not made within the period neither at law nor in equity could the Company be compelled to submit to the conversion, by rea ons of anything contained in the bonds. The option was forever gone and could only be renewed or the right to exercise it renewed by virtue of a new contract. The time has long since elapsed within which the election could have been mide, without the right having been enerciseo, a dithe Company refuse its exercise now. Decree affirmed.

Tripner et al vs. Abrahams et al. Certificate from the Nisi Prius. Judgment reversed and remire de noro awarded.

Nisi Prity Justice Agnew. John Bailey vs.
Augustus Muth. An action to recover damages for injuries received in consequence of an assault and battery committed on defendant. On trial:
QUARTER SESSIONS—Judge Ludlow.—Patrick Dougherty, William McEwen and Robert O' Donnell, were put on trial charged with assault and battery, and with assault and battery with intent to kill a boy six years of age. On the 26th of December last, the defendants, with gans; went upon a lot at Twenty-third and Fitzwater streets, and set up a turget at which all three shot, notwithstanding the presence of a large number of small boys who were playing. After being on the lot about ten minutes, the contents of one of the guns entered the side of the face of the child, who was sitting some distance from the target. The defence offered no testimony, but their counsel characterized the prosecution as ridiculous. The Common wealth abandoned the count charging the intent to kill, and the jury convicted of assault and battery. The defendants were sentenced each to pay a fine of $25 and costs.

Upwards of 100 Mexican officers, made prisoners by the French, and now residing in various parts of France, are said to have given in their adhesion to the Government of the Archduke Maximilian, and will probably return to their country at the same time as their new Emperor.

The Messager of Ixelles, in Belgium, contains a strange account of some experiments which, it affirms, have taken place in that town, to show the effect produced by music on petroleum oil lamps. That journal asserts that they are at once extinguished by a certain note sounded on a brass instrument. "During a quation," it says, "three or four lamps placed in different parts of the room went out simultaneously, and M. Duhem, professor at the Brussels Conservatoire of Music, extinguished eight lamps successively by the sound of a trampet." Very strange, if true!

Replying to clerical deputation the other day Victor Emmanuel is reported to have said: "I am aware a report is circulated of my being on ull terms with the Holy Father, from whom I nevertheless again received, during the past year, further proofs of affection on the occasion of my daughter's marriage. His Holiness has invited me to Rome. I will add that I am in correspondence with him, and that I have good hopes that the time is not far distant when all differences will disappear."

A letter from Constantinople states that the Sultan, while on a hunting excursion at Esk-Medi, was placed in a very dangerous situation. When at some distance from his soite he suddenly found himself close to several wild boars. The Sultan fired at them, when the animals rushed fariously on him and threw him to the ground. Fortunately for the Sultan, two sportsmen came to his assistance and put the boars to flight. He received no wounds, but has been since indisposed for a few days.

While the Danes were making their preparations for the defence of the Dannewerke, they found it advisable to cover the tops of the palisades with cheraux defrice, and the work was just completed when they abandoned the position. In the innocence of his heart the blacksmith, who had taken the contract, asked for an interview with Field Marshal von Wrangel, and presented him with his little bill for the work done, imagining, with charming aniete, that the Prusians, as the present possessors of the Dannewerke, were responsible for all outstanding liabilities, and he was not a little disconcerted to hear the Field Marshal congratulate him on having accomplished his work so well, and express his hopes that he would soon receive payment—from the Danes.
