brim of a goblet a pleasing vibration is produced, and the sound is purer, more musical, than when the glass is struck. Any air can be played in the compass of an octave; thus, eight goblets will make a set—or, better still, t will extend to an octave and a half. The best form of goblet is the bell shape, uncut, and having a foot. The goblets must vary in size;

the large ones forming the base notes, and the smaller the treble. If the tones of the glasses are required to be very correct, they must be selected and compared with the notes of musical strings, minute variations being readily corrected by placing more or less water in each goblet. Thus tuned, make a mark to where the water reaches, in order to save the trouble of future tuning. Now fix the glasses about an inch apart in an oblong tray, and they are complete to perform upon. Clean the hands from grease with soap and pumice stone, so that the fingers may be more sensitive to touch. Wet them frequently, and draw them over the glasses, according to the sound or musical note required, and by passing them rapidly from brim to brim harmony is readily produced. Though such instruments are now rarely seen, we may infer, from what Goldsmith says in the "Vicar of Wakefield," that they were in use a century ago. "They talk," says Goldsmith, "of nothing but high life and other fashionable topics, such as pictures, taste, Shakspeare, and the musical glasses."

The Queen of England is said to be writing her memoirs. The London Review says : "The first publication from the Royal pen was issued, we believe, in 1834, when the Princess Alex andria Victoria was in her sixteenth year. It was a small volume of poetry-a mere pamphlet-and was only distributed amongst the immediate members of the Royal circle. A copy was sold at the sale of the library of the Princess Elizabeth about two years since. That her Majesty is engaged upon a literary undertaking connected with the history of her reign has certainly been stated in various Continental journals, which, upon all matters relative to the proceedings of royalty in this country, appear possess some secret sources of information not open to the home journals."

A Paris letter in the Independence of Brussels says "the Sultan is now having executed in Paris, by the most eminent sculptors, twentyfour animals-lions, tigers, elks, horses and bulls-destined to ornament the gardens of the splendid palace which is built at the Sweet Waters. All the animals will be of natural size; fourteen of them will be cast in bronze, and afterward undergo a bath of gilding, and ten will be in Carrara marble. There is a particularity attached to the production of the elk. Only one animal of the kind exists in France; it belongs to the Baron de Rothschild, and it has been, therefore, necessary to apply to the illustrious banker for permission to visit it.

That was graciously granted, and MM. Rouil-lard and Esler are about to proceed to the Chatean of Ferrieres, where the elk is kept in an enclosed park.

Frenchwomen we know are, as a rule, very quick and ready with their answers. One of them was last week on the point of starting for Austria, where passports are still required. The official document was on the table. Now Madame de B----- is not only twenty-five years of age, but her intimate friends assert that she has been twenty-five for many years. A visitor calling to take leave, inquisitive as Parisians are apt to be, took up the passport, and read the fatal "nee 18-," a date which reduced the twenty-five to an absurdity. "Ah, mon cher," do R.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

The following is an extract from an appeal which was made to the Italians on behalf of Hungary :

"Hungary is reduced to misery; the future ally of Italy is dying of famine. After a drought mexampled in history, the country situated on the banks of the Tiza remains with its crops destroyed, its stock starved, and its ground arid. The district known as the 'Region of Plenty,' of Hungary-it was, indeed, of Europe—was last summer like a desert, a barren plain, dotted with the carcases of dead animals. At this moment there are not in that district either horses, horned cattle, sheep, or pigs. At first the cattle were fed on the crops, which, growing only a few inches high, and producing no grain, were useless for harvest. When the were exhausted there was nothing to fall back on. The stock which had survived the disease that had raged for two seasons then perished of starvation. The turn of the men came next. The last year's harvest had failed, and so the supply of provisions was scanty even before the end of the spring. In a country the sole oc-cupation of which is agriculture, such a failure was equal to a general famine. All in want, local charity was soon exhausted, whole villages left their homes to seek for work and a mouthful of asked in vain, for a permission to do that which any good Government would have hastened to initiate. At length even the Austrian press exclaimed against the governmental apathy. "Who," it asked, "is to pay the taxes, if the soil is uncultivated, and the people die off?"

After this the Minister was compelled to move; but, instead of help, he ordered in inquiry. Even in the hands of Government agents, this inquiry showed that the loss of crops alone amounted to 315,000,000 francs in the year. It was naturally expected that after this the minister would interfere, asking later for a bill of indemnity minister would interfere, asking later for a bill of indemnity. He waited till the Reichsrath assembled. Then—it was the end of Septem-ber—he asked only for a credit of 30,000,000 florins. The Austrian deputies opposed this grant as excessive, and finally reduced it to 20,000,000 florins. Note, too, that this was no gift, only a loan, secured by private individuals and provincial authorities. But voting and giving are not the same things in these days. Up to the present hour only a part of this loan has been advanced, and part of this advance was in grain. The Government prefers collecting the back taxes to advancing the balance. Severe from the first, the suffering became extreme at the beginning of a more than ordinary severe winter. For instance, on 17th January there were 17 degrees of frost in Pesth, and 24 degrees in Kolosvar. Then, all work being stopped and private benevolence exhausted, the misery assumed fearful proportions. In Szabadka one-third of its population (60,000 souls) were inscribed on the list of paupers. See what the Superior of the Convent wrote on the subject :--- On the 18th of this month (February) we buried the first victim of the famine. We have more than 3000 persons begging for food. The town cannot support them, and we receive no assistance. The Pesth committee did send five hundred loaves of bread, but that is to last eight days, and just give a 1 lb of bread to each. Our convent is at the end of its resources, and we have to send away hundreds of starving applicants. In the last three months I have distributed food to the value of 2000 florins, which I borrowed, to repay, Heaven knows how. Now we too suffer, and shall die with our clients if God does not aid us. Wha

"don't look at that passport, it is an old one." A rather ludicrous incident occurred the other night, when the Paris students went to serenade Georges Sand on account of the success of "Le Marquis de Villmer." In the excitement of the moment the lady appeared on the balcony in her nightcap, which was not becoming, and, indeed, caused her to be taken for the concierge, come out to send the crowd away. Under this impression some speeches little complimentary to the authoress were uttered by the students, and, finally, a chorus of "Il porte son bonnet" was sung by thousands of voices.

Lately two broadsheets were posted on the gates and doors of the Roman Catholic churches in Dublin. Both are signed " Sarcedos ;" one is headed " Letters of His Holiness Pins IX. on the American War,"and the other " Letters of John Mitchell, William Smith O'Brien, John Martin, and 'Sarcedos,' on the American War.'' Their object is to discourage Federal enlistments in Ireland.

The export of English books to the States of America fell from £140,000 worth in 1859 to less than half that value in 1861; and the returns now published show that in 1862 it was little over £50,000. The export to Australia has also fallen off considerably. The export of English books to France has risen greatly. In 1859 it only amounted to £9,569; in 1862 it was £16,355.

A remarkable death from lock-jaw has occurred in London. A man was driving his horse and cart, when he smacked his whip, the thong returning and striking him on the cheek. The place became irritated; at the expiration of a week lock-jaw set in; and all the skill of the bread. Cities and societies alike asked, but surgeons at Westminister Hospital failed to prevent a fatal result.

The will of Mr. John Moritz Oppenheim, of New Cannon street, London, merchant, and of Hamburg, Lepsic, and New York, was proved in London, under £250,000 personalty in Great Britain. There is a bequest of £1,000 to Louis Koseuth, "as a trifling mark of respect, and in admiration of his wisdom, skill and patriotism."

Mr. Thomas Luders, of Paris, proposes the use of steel bands as a substitute for leather for driving machinery. The metallic bands are to run upon wooden or iron pulleys, covered with two or three folds of leather. The ends are either brazed or laced together with leathern thongs, the holes being in the latter case bushed with soft metal.

It appears from a table published by the Moniteur de Boulogne that the Italian army now consists of 400,000 men, namely: 22,000 royal carbineers, 30,000 bersaglieri, 275,000 infantry, 24,000 catalry, 36,000 artillery, 23,000 engineers and men belonging to the baggage and ambulance department.

It is intended to hold in Malta, in April next, a general exhibition of the arts and industry of the islands of Malta and Gozo. The nobles and gentry of Malta have guaranteed the expenses, and the government have granted the use of a magnificent public hall for the purpose. The sum realized for Eugene Delacroix's works and sketches exceeds anything ever known in Paris. No less an amount than three hundred and seventy thousand francs (fourteen thousand eight hundred pounds have) been received, and all the works are not yet sold. Dr. Lankester, of London, has ascertained that in the course of three years as many females have lost their lives by fire in the metropolis as were sacrificed from the same cause at Santiago-over two thousand five hundred. The University and colleges of Oxford, exclusive of the fees which they receive from students, are supposed to possess an income of from two to three hundred thousand pounds a year.

Coloning, comforts and reading matter for gra-traitons distribution. VOLUNTARY DELEGATES, in numbers greater than ever before, have been sent to preach the Goepel at the stations and in regiments, bat-teries and camps without Chaplains, distribute reading matter and stores, and labor for the good of the Soldiers. A PERMANENT FIELD AGENCY has been sufficiently extended to establish stations and superintend the work.

superintend the work. THE BLESSING OF GOD rests signally on all parts of the work. Many thonsands have been cheered, benefited and saved. Still a large part of the Army remains unreached, and double the number, both of sizuons and delegates, are needed to meet the urgent demand for them. The Christian Commission offers to the people a perfectly reliable and wonderfully economical channel to reach the entire army in all its variour-fields. The money given goes in full measure, in benefits for body and soal, directly to the Soldiers; and stores also, immediately from the hands of delegates from home, who add words and deeds of hi dness to the gifts when bestowed. Let the people give the Money and Stores, and the work will be done. The large corps of Delegates now in the field will serve as a grand corps of relief when the armies shall move and battles be fought, and the greater their number the more prompt and effec-tive will be the relief they shall render. Let not the present work languish. Wait not for the cry of the wounded and dying before pro-viding relief. Send now and send abundantly both money and stores, and the soldiers' blessing shall be upon yon. Send money to JOSEPH PATTERSON, Trea-
