EVENING BULLETIN

MONDAY, APRIL 4, 1864.

DEATH OF ENGLISH STATESMEN. The arrival of three foreign steamers is announced in our telegraphic column to-day, and reports of the death of the Earl of Aberdeen and of Lord Ashburton are among the latest items of intelligence. The date of the death of the former is mentioned, and it is possible that in telegraphing the reports the name of Lord Ashburton may have been incorrectly used for that of Lord Aberdeen. We give, however, brief sketches of both these distinguished statesmen:-

The Earl of Aberdeen was born in 1784, and was educated at Harrow and at Cambridge. In his younger days he displayed quite a taste for literature, and founded a club, the members of which must each have taken a journey to Greece. Lord Byron gave him a passing fling in "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers." At the age of 22 Lord Aberdeen was elected one of the Scotch Representative Peers in the British Parliament, and for a number of years he was actively engaged in public affairs, both in England and as a secret envoy on the Continent. In 1828, under Wellington's ministry, he was Foreign Secretary, and was probably the worst tory of all that tory ministry. In 1841, under the Peel ministry, Lord Aberdeen again became Foreign Secretary, and in 1853 he again held office, as Prime Minister, but his indisposition to carry on the Russian war with vigor, was the means of his being compelled to resign. During his entire career he preserved a taste for literature and the arts, which made him almost as prominent in literary circles as in the arena of political life. His intense toryism, however,kept him from ever becoming popular with the masses.

Lord Ashburton, whose death is also reported, was the grandson of Sir Francis Baring, the great British merchant, and was the son of that Lord Ashburton who negotiated the Northwestern Boundary Treaty with Mr. Webster. His father was one of the most distinguished English statesmen of the century, and his mother was the daughter of William Bingham, the American senator and merchant. He was born in our city in 1799. He was active in British politics from early youth, and was al-

THE CONTINENTAL THEATRE MURDER. One more tragical event has been added to the history of the Continental Theatre, on Walnut street, above Eighth. This house has been unfortunate. It was there that a number of years ago an elephant became enraged, and after killing his keeper, kept the neighborhood in a state of terror for several hours before the monster could be subdued and secured. Some time after this occurrence a young girl was herribly mutilated, on the same spot, by a tiger which clutched her dress through the bars of his cage as she was passing along, and tore her frightfully with his terrible claws before she was rescued. Still later, the most shocking tragedy of all was enacted on the spot, when the dresses of the ballet girls, engaged to give effect to a sort of sensation presentation of Shakespeare's play of the Tempest, took fire and nine or ten of the poor creatures were burned to death. The latest horror was that of Saturday night, and it was unlike its predecessors, inasmuch as it was the result of vice, and not of accident or mere brute ferocity. The story is a simple one, and one that is too common in great cities. A girl fallen from the paths of virtue, whether from inclination, or from the goadings of want, we know not, has a young man in her toils. The youth has no honorable principles to restrain him, and while earning a disreputable livelihood he shares his gains with the fallen female. He expects fidelity where truth and honor are strangers. and becomes angry because his paramour fails to possess the virtues that he has himself discarded. Then came jealousy, and revenge, with the grand climax of the bloody corpse of a murdered woman and her half maudlin lover and murderer awaiting the decree of the law which may send him to the gallows.

This shocking murder seems to have happened most opportunely to give force and effect to the law of the Legislature which was signed by the Governor on the very day of the murder, forbidding the employment of waiter girls in such places as that in which the tragedy of Saturday night was enacted. The murdered female had been a waiter-girl at the very house where she afterwards fell by the hand of the assassin, and it is probable that while thus employed she first engaged the attention of the youth who afterwards became her murderer. There is no knowing how much of his own vile career is chargeable to this association, or how many offences against law and morality he may have committed in order to procure the means to keep himself in favor with his merely mercenary lover. Jealousy came in the natural order of things; then followed the butchery in a crowded theatre, with terrible remorse and a public scandal, in the present, and a public trial, and perhaps a public execution in the fu-

It is an agreeable task, and none the less agreeable because the opportunities of performing it are rare-to congratulate the Legislature upon putting a stop to the "Pretty Waiter Girl" nuisance. The evil has long been recognized, and the tragedy of Saturday night furnishes a glastly example of what comes of it-

TRISH EMIGRATION TO AMERICA. By the latest foreign mails come journalistic accounts of the new Irish stampede for America, which indicate that the emigration from the "Green Isle" almost equals that of any former year. In describing the departure of vessels for the United States, the Cork Examiner says:

"We believe the extent of emigration which is caused by Federal recruiting in this country to be greatly exaggerated, at least so far as our observation of that which goes on at Queenstown entitles us to judge. Unquestionably, there is amongst the departures many a tall fellow whom the crimp would be glad to seize; but it has never been otherwise. Nor is the proportion of such men different from what it would be at the most ordinary periods. Of those who went yesterday, at least one-third, if not a larger share, were women and children. Nor was there anywhere visible that swagger which so commonly be rays the aspirant for glory and bounty. Many, very likely, when they land, may yield to the inducements with which they are pretty sure to be plied, but we doubt if there were many—perhaps we should say any—at all under pledge to do so. Of the passages it is true that a number are often prepaid, but in this there is nothing new. It is so well-known a custom of the Irish in America to provide for the passage over of their relatives and triends, that the circumstance of a larger number being now prepaid ner savs : passage over of their relatives and friends, that the circumstance of a larger number being now prepaid would hardly justify any particular conclusion being drawn from it. The truth is, that it is a farfetched idea to suppose that Federal recruiting is in any important degree the stimulus to Irish e algration. It arises out of the condition of the country, and the dazzling, if not perfectly reliable, prospects held out by the labor market of the Northern States. "

The Francium is wichtless if it appoids the

The Examiner is mistaken if it considers the prospect of the rewards of labor in the United States to be unreliable. Never since the world began was the remuneration for labor so great and the demand so pressing as in this country at the present time, and the instinct which brings hither the toiling masses of Ireland is a true one. According to another journal, the Sligo Champion, great numbers of "well dressed, healthy-looking men and women" have emigrated recently from half a dozen parishes in that vicinity, and that paper considers the emigration by no means confined to the impoverished class. The Tyrawley Herald remarks:

'Scarcely at any season have we in years past seen the exodus so considerable as it is now, when the month of March has only been just entered on. It is no unsual thing, on any day of the week in Ballina, to count nineteen emigrants, between old and young, upon one of Biancont's long cars, and this three times in the day, and at the same time to see the long van of a private car-owner, with smaller cars, and caris more numerous still, filled all of them by the same class, proceeding to Liverpor l and America. We are informed that no less than one hundred and twenty-one persons from a single parish within five miles of this town are preparing and intend setting off in company for America. And this is no isolated case. The entire country would seem to be on the qui vive, and to be determined to know no quiet and happiness till it shall be enjoyed in the midst of new associations and new labors in the New World. At the present rate of progress outwards, Erris will soon be depopulated, and many parts of Tyrawley will be in no better plight."

Confirmation of the foregoing facts may be

Confirmation of the foregoing facts may be found in a paragraph from the Tralee Chronicle. The editor states that a gentleman in a position affording peculiar facilities for information concerning popular movements, says:

concerning popular movements, says:

'Not a farmer who does not seriously consider the advantage of leaving land and home; not a laborer who does not long for the means which shall enable him to fly from the miserable land. He instances one case of this sort, and it merely indicates the process which is going on throughout the country, and which promises to leave Kerry a waste, if some means shall not be taken to remove the causes which excite to this lamentable depopulation. Church Hill is a hamlet, situate a few miles from Tralee. It is not worse circumstanced, either as to proprietorship or otherwise, than others in the country, but from this small hamlet twenty-five emigrants left for America on Monday last. This, we believe, was fully half the population, and much more than half the able-bodied inhabitants of Church Hill. Our informant states that, of these, one family emigrated at their own cost, having sold the farm on which they dwelt, and all the others have been aided to leave by friends who have preceded them to that paradise of the laborer.'

From the above statements it would seem ways identified with liberal principles and pop- that the number of immigrants who will reach ular reforms. If his death has taken place the our shores during 1864 will probably largely exceed that of last year, which reached two hundred thousand. The waste of the war willthus he mainly made up, and the nation will be enabled to pursue with steady step the path of developement which above all countries on earth is peculiarly her own.
