SENATE. __Mr. Conness offered the joint resolu-

SENATE. --Mr. Conness offered the joint resolu-tion of the California Legislature, endorsing the President's policy, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed. Mr. Grimes presented a bill repealing the joint resolution approved February 24, 1864, authoriz-Xog the transfer of men from the army into the navy; which, after some debate, was referred to the Naval Committee. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution amending the Constitution. Mr. Harlan said it was not proposed to exclude the States in rebellion from the count in estimating the yout. There were now thirty-five States, and the vote. There were now thirty-five States, and "it is expected that three more may be introduced, "making thirty-eight in all." There were now tweet-ty-five States represented in Congress, which, with the three new States, and Arkansas, Louisiana and the three new States and Arkansas, Louisiana and Tennersee, would give us thirty-one, or more than a constitutional majority for the measure. Mr. Harlan controverted the argument that there was any real title in slave property, or that the in-statution itself could be justified by the history of the world or the Sacred Scriptures. He quoted from the Levitcal law to show that shaves were returned to liberty when they had rendered a fair equivalent in labor to their masters. He denied that colored people needed the gnardianship of the whites, and he considered the control exercised over the blacks by the whites a mere nsurpation, which could not be justified by the laws of God or iman. He denied that shavery was a Divine, and therefore a desirable institution, as it abolishes the conjugal relation. If this measure should Dass, it would furnish the means to fill up our wasting armies, and also recure us the sympathy wasting armies, and also secure us the sympathy and support of the civilized nations of the old world world. Mr. Saulsbury (Del.) said that when preachers became politicians, politicians could become preachers. [Laughter.] He quoted the Scriptices in support of slavery. He denied the proposition that three-fourths of the States could do now what might have been done by the original tramers of the Constitution. He relieved that this amendment would be as good a cause for secression as could be would be as good a cause for secession as could be furnished to any State of this Union. The Consti-tution was made by the States in their separat: ca-pacities, and was never submitted to the p-op's The Uonstitution was made by the States in their separate ca-pacifies, and was never submitted to the propie for their ratification or rejection. It required State ratification before it became binding. In inswer to Mr. Johnson, he contended that the preamble to the Constitution was not to be considered, out the instrument itself was to be regarded. The instrument itself showed how the great blessings of justice, tranquility and liberty were to be conferred, secured and perpetuated. The power did not exist to sub-mit these annendments to the people in the manner prescribed by the Constitution. He was a firm believer in the inequality of the races. He would not attempt to explain it, as it was the work of the Divine Architect who pre-sides over the destines of man. He opposed this samendment, not because the people of his State were peculiarily interested in the institution, but from the highest convictions of duty to the country. Besides the fact that we could not submit this called ment to one fourth of the States, the times were unpropitious. The time of war was not the time to change our organic law. The adoption of this measure would prolong the ware beyond the Uffaction of the prolong the war beyond the diffe-time of any member of the Senate. Mr. Hale had supposed there were no reasons that could induce him to make a speech. Under the present circumstances, speeches were very spit to recoil ou their authors, as he once learned in the State of Maine to his sorrow. When stopping at a hotel and calling for something to read, the only thing to be procured was an anc:enthnews-paper, containing one of his own speeches. [Langhter.] Slavery cied hard. When Charles i. was about to be beheaded, a suggestion was made that he might resist, and to prevent it the proper pulleys and pinions were provided for such Tade that he might resist, and to prevent it the proper pulleys and pinions were provided for such an eme-gency. So with slavery. If it does not quietly submit, the pulleys and pinions will be applied to keep its neck under the are. This was a day he long had struggled for-the day in which the nation was commencing its real life, and waking to the meaning of the sublime truths un-tency between our profession and practice as a free Government was hereafter to be abolished. He wanted to say a word to the great Democratic party, that their belief that it was theirs to save the country, and more than that, themselves, was can utter delusion Taking experience as a text, what did the Demo-stratic party de to save the country when the Ex-dention of the subliter of the sub-stratic party de to save the country when the Ex-ecutive, Cabinet, Legislative Department, Sa-preme Court, and a majority of the Legislature of the States, could not only not preserve the peace of the country, but could not preserve family peace, but got up a quarrel and a split in their dittle love-feast down in Charleston. He asked his friends if when they read the news-

He asked his friends if when they read the news-papers they did not feel that the power of the Democracy had departed, and that Charles I., a well bred, sensible gentleman. when he saw the appliances around his scaffeld, quietly submitted; was it too much to ask the Democratic party, like that Christian gentleman, to put their head under and submit to what must inevitably come? '[Laughter.] He feit to day that we were on the true road to honor, glory and peace. Mr. McD. ugall said we were now in the third year of a terrible war, and hundreds of thousands of our friends and brethren had gone down on the great battle fields. This was not a time, he would tell the Senator from New Hampshire, for gibes jests and fantastic tricks; such at this time, before high heaven. would make angels weep. Mr. Powell. proposed an amendment, as an ad-ditional section. providing that the Presiden; and vice President shall not hold their offices more than six years. h.r. Powell said he believed that no President who had desired a re-election but what ihad the power to promote it. A free nation must protect uself by force of is own haws. His amend-ment would not affect the re-election of the pres-ert Erecuive. He was onnows the amend ment, such a such and to affect the re-election of the pres-

(The streets, if opened, will pass through the depot grounds of the Philadelphia and Trenton Railroad.)

The organ is depoty growing of the philadelphia and Trenton Railroad.) Mr. Barger reported from the committee two bills relative to jurymen. The present law provides that after a man has served on a jury he need not serve again for three years. One bill of Mr. Barger proposes to reduce this term to two years. The remaining bill allows the Court of Common Pleas to increase the num-ber of special jurors so as not to exceed sixty at any one period. The Committee on the Removal of the State Capital to Philadelphia are awaiting the visit of a delegation from the Councils of Philadelphia, bringing official notice of the passage of the reso-delegation from the Councils of Philadelphia, bringing official notice of the passage of the reso-lutions pledging the faith of the city to erect new buildings for the Legislature. As soon as infor-mation of an official character is received on the subject, a bill will be prepared and presented to the House of Representatives. A bill to give halt-pay to old and infirm school teschers was reported favorably by the Committee on Judiciary. The bill has already passed the Senate.
