the ocean of a large district of this State. Her metropolis has always been the resort of the farmers and traders of many of our counties. They will go to it in greater numbers and with better heart, when the accursed institution of slavery is forever extinct. We welcome Maryland to the noble fraternity of free States. THREE YEARS OF WAR. It is now within a week or two of the anniversary of the day when armed treason boldly struck at the Federal Government with parricidal hands, and brought down to the dust the proud banner which had been the ensign of freedom and republicanism for eighty-five years. Semter first fell three years ago, and the retrospect of the intervening time teaches us the wisdom of the principle never to despise an enemy, no matter how insignificant he may seem to be. The North and the South both fell into the same error at the outset of our National troables. Each underrated the prowess and resources of the other, and both have had abundant reason to regret their error. The domineering Southerner, accustomed to carry the manners of the plantetion into every walk of life, and to beat down opposition in the legislature of the nation with the strong hand, if he failed in keen argument and sound legic, and who was deferred to by obsequious shop-keepers, who were willing to humor his temper for the sake of his custom and his dollars-fell into the error of believing that all Northern men were either dirt-eating, time-serving, dough-faced politicians, or huckstering tradesmen, whose souls were in their breeches pockets, and who were content to be kicked, provided they could make an extra six pence by the operation. Independent of all these considerations, the chivalry had armed itself to the teeth through the "wise forethought" of Thief Floyd, and they believed that the "mudsills" lay at their feet and at their mercy, and ready to crouch like spaniels beneath the lash. It is no wonder, then, that they promised themselves and the world that Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia should be seized, and the Confederacy be firmly established upon the ruins of the old republic within sixty days. How miserably this anticipation has failed is a matter of history. Instead of a beaten, cowed and humiliated people, the loyal North and West are as bold in their port as a gladiator just engaging in the perils of the arena, and their merchants and tradesmen are giving of their means towards the cause of the Union, both in the field and the hospital, with an unprecedented liberality. Meanwhile the hiss of the Copperhead is scarcely heeded amid the hum of honest toilers for the good work, and the sun of patriotism in the loyal States is not dimmed by the doughfaced spots upon its surface.

But while our "wayward" termagant sisters of the South made a terrible mistake in their first start in the war, we of the loyal States were not free from error. The seventy-five thousand men first called out, and the three months promised as the limit of the rebellion, scarcely served as a fit inauguration of the great struggle. More men have fallen in the Union cause (either through wounds or disease) than were first called upon to vindicate it, and the end is not yet.

While both sides have made great mistakes of calculation and of action, the results in the different sections are strangely different. The loyal States, aroused from their lethargy by the boom of the stolen guns leveled at Sumter have raised and equipped a huge army. The most formidable navy in the world (perhaps) has been improvised, and the power and majesty

A REPORT from Washington, in a morning Taper, represents that Brigadier Generals Stone, Andrew Porter and Naglee have been reduced to their original rank (that of Colonel of the regular army) and ordered to join their gomery has been dropped from the rolls. We do not know whether this is true or not, but we do know that there is no truth in the remark added by the correspondent that none of the four officers named had ever been in an engagement. They all served in Mexico, and three of them were in various battles in that country. General Stone was very useful in the beginning of the rebeilion, and might have been in various engagements, but for his arrest and long imprisonment, of which there has never been sny explanation. General Andrew Porter commanded a brigade in the first Bull Run battle, and was with the Army of the Potomac as Provost Marshal in all the battles of the Pentasular campaign. General Naglee was in the thickest of the fight at Fair Oaks, as well as in various other engagements.

EVENING BULLETIN THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1864.

UNION STATE CONVENTION.

The Union State Committee of Pennsylvania met yesterday in Harrisburg, and determined to hold the State Convention, to elect Senatorial delegates to the National Union Convention, on Thursday, the 28th inst. The interchange of sentiment among the members of the committee and other citizens from various parts of the State. developed the fact that the desire of the Union men of Pennsylvania is for the renomination of President Lincoln. The most ingenious politicians and the most cunning factionists cannot persuade any one of the contrary. Mr. Lincoln is unquestionably the choice of a very large majority of the people of Pennsylvania. Now let the Union men all over the State go briskly to work to choose their delegates to the State Convention and their representative delegates to the National Convention. We want the best men that can be got-men who have the respect and confidence of the community; who are not trading politicians, or office-holders, or Government contractors, but who are disinterested patriots, and not under suspicion of serving the party for selfish reasons. In a time like this we want our best men in the national and State conventions.

EMANCIPATION IN MARYLAND. Although the Secessionists of Maryland refused to go to the polls yesterday, there is no doubt that a large majority of the qualified citizens voted, and the result is extremely gratifying to every friend of liberty. The people have decided to call a convention to amend the Constitution of the State, and they have elected a decided majority of delegates in favor of the immediate and unconditional emancipation of all the slaves. Simply as a as a matter of humanity and civilization, we rejoice at the result. But the people of Maryland are to be congratulated on it as a matter of self-interest. Slaves have long ceased to be profitable property in that State. In many counties the institution has been virtually almost-extinct for years, and those counties have been the most prosperous and progressive. In some of the southern counties money has been made by raising negroes to sell to more Southern States; but in all of them, slaves, as laboring men, could not compete advantageously with freemen. To get rid of the institution, therefore, in any manner, is a boon to the people of Maryland. To get rid of it in a peaceful, constitutional way, by the vote of the citizens themselves, is something over which Marylanders may be proud, and the friends of freedom may rejoice. Henceforth Maryland is to be a free State, and we anticipate for her a glorious destiny. We Pennsylvanians can heartily extend to her our congratulations and sympathies. Her great river, her great railroads and her canals carry Ohesapeake bay is the natural ontiet to the who prove competent, of the nation has had a new and Minerva-like birth in springing full grown and armed from the brain of the parent emergency. The loyal States are prosperous almost beyond precedent : smiling plenty is to be seen upon all sides, and no portion of free-soil is trodden by the foot of the open foe, except as a prisoner of war. While we have large armies in the field, an immense navy afloat, and all the machinery of a great war in operation, our resources are scarcely trenched upon, and they seem absolutely unbounded. We mistook the necessity for this huge exertion at the commencement of the war, and we were equally ignorant of our ability to make the vast effort that is now in progress.

What a melancholy contrast to all this is the condition of the rebellious States. General devastation, trade paralyzed, credit dead, commercial, social and material ruin; resourceg destroyed, ports blockaded, the soil of the "Confederacy" occupied at almost all important points by the hated Yankee; the "pecnliar institution,"for which the war was commenced, scattered and broken up beyond the hope of resurrection, and every available man and boy forced into the field by a merciless and sweeping conscription, as the forlorn hope of the dying monster of rebellion.

But a dying monster is terrible even in its death-struggle, and we should not delude ourselves into undervaluing the enemy, who has already dealt us some hard blows, and who is now as desperate as a beast at bay. The most vigorous policy is the wisest and the most humane, and to that end the loyal people of the country should strengthen the hands of the Government in every possible way, and rebuke quasi treason at home, while crushing, abroad, the most causeless and wicked rebellion the world has over known.

GUSTAVE ADMARD'S NEW BOOK, "The Red Track," published by T. B. Peterson & Brothers this day, will make a sensation among the thousands of admirers of that distinguished writer. He lived so long among the Indians that he understood them better than any man who has ever written tales of Indian life. His books have the merit of presenting faithful portraits of Indian character. Nor has he ever been excelled in narratives of adventure in the mountains, prairies and forests of the far West. "The Red Track" will be found equal to the best of his former works, a list of which is given in an advertisement in to day's BULLETIN.

MESSRS. CROSS AND JARVIS will give another of their classical soirées to-morrow evening, in the Foyer of the Academy of Music. They will be assisted by Messrs. Gaertner, Roggenbergen, Ahrend and Buchner, and the programme, which is advertised to-day, will be found uncommonly attractive.
