HADWAY & CO 87 Maiden Lane, New Yo 87 Maiden Lane, New Yo THE FARMER'S SONS. BY THB BARD OF TOWER HALL. A farmer, rich and old, and eage, Had two grown sons, of equal age, But, liking not his farm to share. He meant that one should be his heir, And keep the homestead, while the other Should but be pensioned by his brother. To ascertain the mental bent Of each, these sons to town hesent To see the Quaker City sights, And, what still more each lad delights, He gave two rolls of greenbacks stout To Ned and Joe, ere they set out. Within a week, they both were seen Treading again the meadow green; But Ned in wretched plight, alack! With scarce a suit upoa his back, Now forced for drunken brawls to mourn, With pockets bare and garments torn. But Joe the rural damsels eved.

Now forced for drunken brawls to mourn, With pockets bare and garments torn. But Joe the rural damesls eyed, As on he walked in honest pride, In elegant attree arrayed For which at Tower Hall he paid. We need not say the worthy sire Joe's sense and prudence did admire, Nor hesitated to declare That he should be the homestead's heir. Our stock of Clothing is the largest, and our as-sortment the best in Philadelphia. Our goods are manufactured in the best and most fashionable manner from the choicest styles of Foreign and Domestic fabrics, and are sold at the low process which only a large business allows. AN AMUSING SQUIB. Those who are interested in the great fair to be held in June, as what true Philadelphian is not ?-will enjoy a laugh at the following : "Not being one of those distinguished citi-zens who provided the preliminary $70,000 for the Fair, I noticed the effects of its approach first of all in my wife. We are all young folks, and our family consists of one remarkable boy. My wife had always a weakness for worsteds, and of late she had lavished the products of her skill on that extraordinary child. Inasmuch as Susan was not extravagant in other respects. I had hitherto paid without a murmur her worsted bills, though in some families the introduction of so much zephyr would certainly have produced a storm. But now I saw with surprise that operations were in progress for which the existence of that inimitable babe was no adequate excuse. Certainly, an infant six months old, with Afghans, two breakfast capes, eight sacks, two hoods, an opera cloak, a pair of leggins, a red Sontag, a brown ditto, a pin-cushion, ten pairs socks, and knit underclothes innumerable and unmentionable, was suffi-ciently provided for. It was, therefore, with awe and wonder that I saw the beginning of a huge Afghan, which assumed, as it proceeded, the hues and features of the Star Spangled Banner. Now, I know that a certain general, on the occasion of a serenade, had brought out upon a balcony his wife and baby, the latter wrapped in the American flag; and I remem-bered that my Course flag; the dimemwrapped in the American flag; and I remem-bered that my Susan reading of the circum-stance in the newspaper, had been much impressed with the beauty and sublimity of the idea. I felt a fearful presentiment that she was about to try its effect upon our infant. I knew that my military reputation would not knew that my military reputation would not justify such a step. To be sure, I joined in the great Pennsylvania campaigo, and sojourned a month in the hospital with other rheumatic warriors in the gallant -th; but all this did not "My dear, what are you doing? I hope that isn't for the baby?"

Susan having a gift of eloquence equal, I Susan having a gift of eloquence equal, I think, to Miss Dickenson, replied impromptu. "Yes, love! isn't it beautiful! and Matilda is going to make one just like it; and we are going going to make one just like it; and we are going to have a table; and I am on the committee, and so is that nateful Miss Jewsharp—and I wan fifty dollars to buy materials—and, O, Augus-tus, you must write one hundred nice letters in
