. List! the chimes so sweetly sounding As they burst upon the air, Music to the heart they're sounding, Drowning ev'ry thought of care. List! List! List! Music o'er the hills is bounding. Echoes through the valleys sounding.

List! List! List! Now in volumes grandly pealing, Now in distant whispers soft, Back in echoes sweetly stealing: Borne on Zephyr's wings aloft. Tast! Tast! Tast! Hear the grand old anthems pealing; Harmonies sublime revealing.

List! List! List! How like the changes Time doth ring In the chambers of the soul, Sounds and memories wakened there. From the past in visions roll. List! List! List!

Time those changes still is sounding, Mem'ries of the past surrounding. List! List! List! Now sound they peals of buoyant hope,

Now whispers sad of life's alloys, The well remembered tones of love, Echoes of departed joys. List! List! List! Grief and hope the heart surrounding Still those chimes are sweetly sounding. List! List! List! H. V. McCULLY.

GONDOLAS AND GONDOLIERS.

The Venice correspondent of the Boston Advertiser writes as follows: On a small canal, not far from the railroad station, the gondoliers show you a house, by no means notable, except for the noble statue of a knight, which occupies a niche in one cor-ner, as the house of Othello. It was once the house of the patrician family Moro, a name well known in the annals of the Republic, and one which, it has been suggested, misled Shakespeare into the creation of a Moor of Venice. Whether this is possibly the fact, and whether there is any tradition of the tragic incident in the history of the Moro family similar to that upon which the play is founded, I do not know; but it is certain that the story of Othello, very nearly as Shakespeare tells it, is popularly known in Venice; and the gondoliers have fixed upon the Casa Moro in question, as the edifice best calculated to give satisfaction to strangers in search of the True and the Memorable. The statue, which is worthy of Donatella, is happily darkened by time, and thus serves admirably to represent Othello's complexion, and to place beyond the shadow of a doubt the fact of his residence in the house. Indeed, what can you say to the gondolier, who, in answer to your cavils concerning the latter, points to the knight, with the convincing declaration, "There is his statue! One day I was taken to see this house, in company with some friends, and when it had been victoriously pointed out, as usual, we asked meekly, Who was Othello?

"Othello, Signori," answered the gondolier," was a general of the Republic, in the old times. He was an African, and black; but nevertheless the State valued him, and he beat the Turks in many battles. Well, Signori, this general Othello had a very young and beautiful wife, and his wife's cousin (sic) Cassio was his majordomo, or as some say his lieutenant. But after awhile, happens along (capita) another soldier of Othello, who wants Cassio's employ-ment and so accuses him to the general of corrupting his wife. Very well, Signori! Without thinking an instant, Othello, being made so, flew into a passion (si riscaldo la testa) and killed his wife; and then when her innocence came out he killed himself and that liar; and the State confiscated his goods, he being a very rich man. There has been a tragedy written about all this, you know."

"But how is it called? Who wrote it?" "Oh! in regard to that, then, I don't know. Some Englishman." Shakspeare?

"I don't know, Signori. But if you doubt what I tell you, go to any bookseller, and say, 'favor me with the tragedy of Othello'. He will give it you, and there you will find it all written out just as I tell it."

This gondolier added further to the authenticity of his story, by showing us the house of Cassio near the Rialto bridge, and I have no doubt he would also have pointed out that of lago, if we had wished it.

But as a general thing the lore of the gondo liers is not rich nor very great. They are a lo-quacious and a gossipping race, but they love better to have a quiet chat at the tops of their voices, as they loaf idly at the ferries, or to scream repartee across the Grand Canal, than to tell stories. All history that relates to localities, they are sufficiently versed in to find the places for strangers, but beyond this they trouble themselves as little with the past as with the future. Three tragic legends, however, they know and will tell with the most amusing effect,

The first of these legends is that of a sausage-maker who flourished in Venice some centuries ago, and who improved the quality of the broth which the lugancheri make of their scraps and sell to the gondoliers, by cutting up into it now and then a child of one of the neighbors. He was finally detected by a gondolier who discovered a little finger in his broth. and being brought to justice, was dragged through the city at the heels of a wild horse. The second is the innocent Baker-boy. who was put to death on suspicion of having murdered a noble in whose heart was found a dagger fitting a sheath which the baker had found in the street, on the morning of the murder, and kept in his possession. Many years afterwards, a malefactor who died in Padova, confessed the murder, and thereupon two lamps were lighted before a shrine in the western façade of St. Mark's—one for the murdered nobleman's soul, and the other for that of the innocent boy. Such is the gondolier's story, and the lamps still burn every night before the shrine from dark till dawn, in witness of its truth. The Venetian poet Dall' Ongaro has woven the story into a beautiful and touching tragedy; but the poet is still to be born who shall take from the gondollers their Veneranda Porta, and place that historic figure on romantic Veneranda Porta was a lady of the days of the Republic, between whom and her husband existed an incompatibility. This was increased by the course of Signora Porta in taking a lover, and it at last led to the assassination of its object by the paramours. The head of the murdered hasband was found in one of the canals, and being exposed, as the old custom was, upon the granite pedestal at the corner of St. Mark's church, it was recognized by his brother, who found among the papers on which the long hair was curled, fragments of a letter he had written to the deceased. The crime was traced to the paramours, and being brought before the Ten, they were both conned to be hanged between the columns of the Piazzetta. The gendolier-historiographers relate that when the sentence was pronoun Veneranda said to the chief of the Ten, "But as for me this sentence will never be carried out. You cannot hang a woman. Consider the impropriety!" The Venetian rulers were wise men in their generation, and far from being bulked by this question of delicacy, the chief replied, solving it, "My dear you shall be hanged in my breeches."

Con pared with the truculent hackmen who prey upon the traveling public in all other cities of the civilized world, the gondoliers are eminently intelligent and amiable. Rogues they are, of course, for small dishonesties are breath in the nostrils of common carriers by land or water, everywhere; but the trickery of the gondoliers is so good-natured and simple that it can hardly offend. A very ordinary jocular sagacity defeats their profoundest pur poses of swindling, and no one enjoys their exposure half so much as themselves, while the faintest prospect of future employment purifies them of every trait of dishonesty

The immediate goal of every gondolier's ambition is to serve, no matter for how short time, an Inglese, by which generic title all foreigners except Germans are known to him. The Inglese, whether he be English, American, or Russian, is apt to make the tour of the whole city in a gondola, and to give handsome buona mano at the end, whereas your Tedesco. frugally walks to every place accessible by land, or when, in a party of six or eight, he takes a gondola, plants himself upon the letter of the tariff, and will give no more than the rate fixed by law.

The number of private gondolas owned in Venice is not very great. The custom is rather to hire a gondolier with his boat. The exclusive use of the gondola is thus secured, and the gondolier gives his services as a do-mestic when off his special duty. He waits at table, goes marketing, takes the children to school, and serves the ladies as footman, at the usual rate of five francs a day, himself paying the proprietor of the gondola about a franc daily for the boat. In former times, when Venice was rich and prosperous, most families kept two or three gondolas, and what with this service, and the numerous gala-days of the Republic, when the whole city took boat for the Lido, or the Giudecca, or Murano, and the gondoliers were allowed to exact any pay they could, they were a numerous and prosperous class. But these times have passed from Venice forever, and though the gondoliers are still, counting the barcaivoli of the Giudecca and Lido, some thousands in number, there are comparatively few young men among them, and their gains are meagre.

It is true that the gondolier loves best of everything a clamorous quarrel, carried on with the canal between him and his antagonist, and next to this, he loves to spend his leisure at the ferry or traghetto in talking of eating and of money, in which he does not differ from any of his fellow-citizens in choice of topics. I have seldom caught a casual expression from passers in the streets of Venice which did not relate in some way to gold Napoleons, zwanzigers, florins or soldi, or else to wine and polenia. I note this trait in the Venetians which Goldoni observed in Milanese a hundred years ago, and which I incline to believe is common to all Italians. The gondoliers talk a great deal in hyperbole and figures, and their jocose chaff is quite inscrutable even to some classes of Venetians. With foreigners, to whom the silence and easy progress of the gondola gives the opportunity to talk, they are fond of using a word or two of French. They are quick at repartee, and have a clever answer ready for most occasions.

The skill with which the gondoliers manage their graceful craft, is always admired by strangers who come to Venice, and is certainly remarkable. The gondola is very long and slender, and rises high from the water at either end. Both bow and stern are sharp, the former being ornamented with a deeply serrated blade of steel, which it is the pride of gondoliers to keep bright as silver; and the poop having a small platform, not far behind the cabin, on which the gondolier stands when he rows. The danger of collision, has always obliged Venetian boatmen to face the bow, and the stroke with the oar, (for the gondolier uses only a single oar,) is made by pushing and not by pulling. A surprising degree of art is thus required to keep the gondola's head straight, with all the strokes made on one side, and the sculling return of the oarblade, preparatory for each new stroke, is extremely difficult to effect. Under the hands of the gondolier, however, the gondola seems a living thing, full of grace and winning movement. The wood-work of the little cabins is elaborately carved; the cabin is usually furnished with mirrors, and the seats are luxuriously cushioned. The sensation of the gondola's progress, felt by the occupant of the cabin, as he falls back upon these cushions, may be described, to the female apprehension at least, as "too divine." The cabin is removable at pleasure, and is generally taken off and replaced by awnings in summer. But in the evening, when the fair Venetians go out in their gondolas to take the air, even this awning is dispensed with, and the long, lithe boar olides darkly down the Grand Canal, bearing a dazzling freight of white tulle, pale-faced, blacked-eyed beauty, and flashing jewels.

PROPOSALS.

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR OF THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA, MARCH, 30th, 1864.

Sealed Proposals will be received by the Mayor of Philadelphia, until 12 o'clock, noon, of Wednesday, April 13, for the purchase of the whole or of any part of the Six per cent. Loan of the City of Philadelphia for One Million Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars, authorized by an ordinance of the Select and Common Councils of the said City, approved March 1st, 1864, and likewise of the Six per cent. Loan of the said City for Two Millions of Dollars, authorized by an ordinance approved March 28, 1864.

Such propusals must be addressed under seal to the Mayor, marked "Offer for City Loan," and will be opened by him in presence of the City Treasurer and City Controller at the time above designated, the right being reserved by the Mayor to reject any bid for insufficiency of price.

These Loans are redeemable at the expiration of thirty years from date; their repayment is secured by Sinking Funds provided cotemporaneously with their issue, for the maintenance whereof the faith of the City is specially pledged; their interest will be paid half-yearly on the first day of January and July, at the office of the City Treasurer, without deduction of, or liability for, State or City Taxes.

INITED STATES, EASTERN DISTRIOT OF PENNSYLVANIA, SCT.
THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES. TO THE MARSHAL OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA, GREETING.
WHEREAS, The District Court of the United States in and for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, rightly and duly proceeding on the several Libels, filed, in the name of the United States of America, hath decreed all persons in general who have, or pretend to have, any right, title, or interest in five bales and nine bags of cotton, and three thousand and thirty-three dollars and sixty-four cents, being the proceeds of the sale of said cotton, and the money representing the same deposited and being with the Assistant Treasurer of the United States at Philadelphia (the said cotton having been captured by the Kanawha a vessel-of war of the United States under the command of Lieut. Commanding Miayo,) to be monished, cited, and called to judgment, at the time and place underwritten, and to the effect hereature expressed (justice soreq uiring). You are, therefore, charged and strictly enjoined and commanded, that you omit not, but that by publishing these presents in at least two of the daily newspapers printed and published in the city of Philadelphia, and in the Legal Intelligencer, you do monish and cite, or cause to be monished and cited, premptorily all persons in general who have, or pretend to have, any right, title, or interest in the said cotton, or in the said sum of three thousand and thirty-three dollars and sixty-four cents, the proceeds of sale of said cotton, and representing the same, to appear before the Hon. JOHN CADWALADER, the Judge of the said Court, at the District Court room in the City of Philadelphia, on the twentieth day after publication of these presents, if it be a court day, or else on the next court day following, between the next court day following, between the next court of the publication of these presents, if i at the District Court room in the City of Philadelphia, on the twentieth day after publication of these presents, if it be a court day, or else on the next court day following, between the usual hours of hearing causes, then and there to show, or allege, in due form of law, a reasonable and lawful excuse, if any they have, why the said cotton and the said sum of three thousand and thirty-three dollars and sixty-four cents, the proceeds of sale of said cotton, and representing the same, should not be pronounced to belong, at the time of the capture of the same, to the enemies of the United States, and, as goods of their enemies or otherwise, liable and subject to condemnation, to be adjudged and condemned as good and lawful prizes; and further to do and receive in this behalf as to justice shall appertain. And that you duly intimate, or cause to be intimated, unto all persons aforesaid, generally (to whom by the tenor of these presents it is also intimated), that if they shall not appear at the time and place above mentioned, or appear and shall not show a reasonable and lawful cause to the contrary, then said District Court doth intend and will proceed to adjudication on the said captures, and may prononne that the said five bales and nine bags of cotton did belong, at the time of the capture of the same, to the enemies of the United States of America, and as goods of their enemies, or otherwise, liable and subject to confiscation and condemnation, to be adjudged and condemned, as lawful prize, the absence, or rather contumacy, of the persons so cited and intimated in anywise notwithstanding, and that you duly certify to the said District Court what you shall do in the premises, together with these presents.

Witness the Honorable JOHN CADWALADER, Judge of the said Court, at Philadelphia, this seventh day of APRIL, A. D. 1864, and in Judge of the said Court, at Philadelphia, this seventh day of APRIL, A. D. 1861, and in the eighty-eighth year of the Independence of the said United States.
