THE ARCHDURE MAXIMILIAN AND THE MEXICAN On the ground of difficulties which have arisen

On the ground of difficulties which have arisen as to the presumptive succession to the Austrian throne, says the London Daily News, of March 29, the Archduke Maximilian has deferred the recep-tion of the Mexican notables who had beet de-puted to request his acceptance of the Imperial Orown of their country. It will be remembered that Sunday last had been appointed for the recep-tion, at which the Archduke was to have formally accepted the Imperial dignity. The agent of the International Financial Society, with a large ad-vance, is still in Vienna, awaiting the result of the Archduke is required by his brother, the Emperor of Austria, not only to surrender his continual reput is function to have a strong the the provention of the continue of the Austrian cown, but the proval and imperial property.

right of succession to the Austrian crown, but the royal and imperial property. . The London Post says it is understood that the Archduke was ready to renounce for his descend-ants their presumptive right to the Anstrian crown, reserving to himself his title to it in case it should revert to bim. The Emperor of Austria has one son and one daughter; the Archduke Louis is an elder born brother, all of whom must succeed to the throne before it can come to the Archduke, but inclined to support the views of the Archduke, but the council of the Imperial Family were of a dif-ferent cabinet, whilstone of the Imperial Arch-dukes has proceeded to Miramar in connection with this affair.

THE REPUISE OF THE PRUSSIANS AT DUPPELN. The reported repulse of the Prussian attack upon the fortified Danish position at Duppeln is con-firmed. At three o'clock on the morning of Mon-day, March 25, the Prussians made an assault in force upon Bastion Six and the whole line, but ware repulsed three times in the whole line, but force upon Bastion Six and the whole line, but were repulsed three times with heavy loss At last the Prussian colders refused to obey their ef-ficers' command to advance. The Danish iron-elad Rolfkrake fired on the Prussians' right from the Wemmingbond.

the Wenmingbond. A German account of the affair says: "When the outposts of the Raven brigade had almost com-pleted their entrenchments, the Danes, supported by the fire of their batteries and of the Rolfkrake, renewed the engagement with varying success. The fighting became hand to hand, the treops en-gaged using the butt ends of their muskets as well as the bayonet. Ultimately the Raven brigade drove back the enemy, retaining the advanced po-sition it occupied in the morning. The Rolfkrake was driven off, having been struck by four solid shots;"

shots." The village of East Duppeln was set on fire. Fifty-three Danish prisoners were taken. The Prussian regiment of the Guard lost fourteen killed and fifty-three wounded. Other losses killed and fifty-three wounded. Other losses not yet ascertained. Duppein is a foriress, which the Danes have sur-rounded with a series of ingenions and novel de-fences. The first obstruction is an irregular line of masked diches, with sharp stakes firmly fixed at the bottom to impale the unlucky man who may fall through; next comes a line of chevaus defrise; then ano her of large man-traps; and finally a common wire fence—the latter a simple but very effective impediment to both infantry and cavalry. Not content with these lines of circumvallation, the Daush engineers have crowned both scarp and counterscarp of the earthworks with pali-sades, crested with a bristling line of sharp swords —an expedient borrowed apparently from the French defences of the breach of Barbijos Both within and without the works are fixed planks, studded with long nails, the points upwards, and concealed by a light covering of earth. We must add to these amenities the mines that underlie all the assailable parts.
