PROCEEDINGS OF THE HOBOKEN NATIONAL

We regret to see that some of the Jersey papers attack our friend Hon. Jas. M. Scovel, who always makes a brave fight without counting the odds, because of the bold stand he has taken for the right in State and National affairs. We publish with pleasure, the handsome resolutions endorsing Mr. Scovel's course, passed by the National Club of Hoboken. Any man might well be proud of such a record:

HOBOKEN, 18th of April, 1864—To the Hon. James M. Scovel, Senator of the State of New Jersey.—Dear Sir: The undersigned officers of the National Club of Hoboken—a political organization of progressive German citizenshave the honor of making to you the following communication in obedience to a resolution passed by said club at its meeting of the 16th

The National Club of Hoboken, having followed with close attention and deep interest the course you have taken as Senator of the last ure of the State of New Jersey, regards it its duty, not only to pay a tribute of admiration to your parliamentary ability and eloquence, as well as to the patriotic loftiness of your principles in general, but also to ex-press its particular sympathy with the coura-geous and manly stand you have taken against the monopoly under which the State of New Jersey is groaning.

As residents of Hoboken we have the unenviable opportunity of suffering under the direct influence which the unscrupulous mono-Polists exercise upon the affairs of this unfortunate city, and therefore, driven, as we are, to offer them unrelenting resistance in self-defered fence, we derive a great deal of encouragement from the fact that there exists so noble standard-bearer of our cause within the councils of our State. At the same time it may perhaps afford you some comfort to become acquainted with additional friends and supporters, while you are contending against over-whelming numbers.

At our late Charter election our efforts in common with other respectable fellow-citizens irrespective of nationality or party, have been crowned with a victory, which, though not complete, augur well for the future. Indeed, we mean to push on, without rest, until not collected the city of Hoboken, but the whole States only the city of Hoboken, but the whole State of New Jersey shall be relieved from the curse

While we present to you in the above the sentiments of the National Club of Hoboken, we gladly embrace the opportunity to express our high consideration with which we are, Dear Sir, your most obed. servants, E. F. Lowenthal, President. S, R. Koehler, Secretary.

COLORED SOLDIERS IN TENNESSEE-A FE. MALE VOLUNTEER. A letter to the N. Y. Times, from Nashville

rays:
The number of colored regiments raised in this State for the service of the Union is seven up to the present time, with several others in process of filling up. The profession of a solprocess of filing up. The profession of a sudder is growing popular with the "cullud people" here, and, I may add, with the people not colored, or colored less deeply. The strong prejudice against the black soldier, exhibited widely at first here, is subsiding. It certainly, should, for Sambo is developing every day soldierly qualities, causing skepticism to yield to faith, and contempt to respect. He is winning "golden opinions" from all sorts of men, and women too. He is obedient, teachable, self-respecting, manly. An arrest for insubordination or disorderly conduct is rare in one of their regiments. A colored regiment, the 17th Tennessee, passed our quarters this morning on their way to Chattanooga, preceded by a band of blacks, playing a spirited air. It was a common remark by the many lookers on that for orderly neatness and completeness of equipment, for elastic movement and soldierly bearing, and for perfect accuracy of step, with ranks compacted and regular, a finer looking regiment had rarely been seen in Nashville. I visited a camp, consisting of three or four black regiments the other day, on the outskirts of the city. All was well arranged and managed, scrupulously clean, creditable. The sable sentries paced their rounds, doing their duty respectfully but firmly.
The usual routine of a buzzing camp went on and nothing save the color of the skin migh distinguish the camp in question from one where well-trained white troops were. A couple of bands were vigorously practising on the other side of a hill near by, and I went over, to look and listen. Another fallacy exploded—that big black lips could no more blow a fife than a "nigger" could fight or make a soldier. But the fifes under thick-lipped inspiration really gave out the true "ear-piercing" notes that Shakspeare speaks of, while the drums rolled forth their "(tan-ta-ra ra melody," as some other poet not quite so great as Shakspeare phrases it, and both in excellent time and tune. In a word, this negro soldier business is proving to be a grand success. A man must be blind as a mole not to see in this a wondrous providential development-a power to aid in striking mortally the direct rebellion that ever defied Heaven and earth-a lesson, to teach the nation what it seemed long unable to learn, that he who makes a good soldier is worthy to be thought and called a man! Several instances of females enlisting as soldiers and performing service in the ranks, since the rebellion began, have been given in the public prints. There is one which I think worth reporting, the subject of the notice being now and for several weeks an inmate of the Officers' Hospital here, suffering from a wound she received after she was taken prisoner. The outline of her story, taken from the heroine's own lips, of the substantial accuracy of which I have no doubt, is as follows:

Her name is Frances E. Hook, of Chicago. Being bereaved of parents, but possessed of warm patriotism, she felt drawn towards the service of the soldier, and contrived to enlist in the 19th Illinois Volunteers, Col.O'Meara, in August, 1862. A month or two after the regiment set out for Cairo and the Southwest, having been assigned to General Loomis's brigade, General W. F. Sherman's corps. She performed a soldier's duties in her regiment, taking part with them in engagements at Jackson and Big Black in Mississippi, and being present at the siege and capture of Vicksburg. At Florence, Ala., in October following she was captured herself while foraging with a small party, and on attempting two or three days after to escape from her escort, who were preparing to cross the Tennessee river with several prisoners, she was fired at and struck in the calf of the leg. Though no more than a flesh wound, it was painful, and in this condition she was obliged to march several miles hand-cuffed and even shackled, as she avers, till the party reached a point on the river, whence a boat was taken to Rome, Georgia, and the cars thence to Atlanta, the place of destination. Here she lay six or seven weeks in hospital, gangrene having got into her wound, and her chance or living seeming for a time very slight indeed. She was finally exchanged at Gravesville, near Dalton, on the 16th February, got to Chattanooga on the 18th, remained there in hospital a couple of weeks, thence came to Nashville the beginning of March, assigned to her present quarters by the Gen-eral in command, and bidden to remain till her wound-a serious one now-is healed, her pay and bounty are received, when she will be mustered out of the service.

Such is the story of the soldier Frances E. Hook, of the 19th Illinois Volunteers, corroborated by parties well acquainted with several of the circumstances related. When it is added that she is but seventeen years old, the experiences will not be deemed less marvelous. Whether it was love of adventure, or love of country, or some less worthy motive, that led her to don her soldier's uniform, she belongs clearly to the class of heroines thought worthy to wear wreaths. Certainly her two years' soldier's life has enough of remance and incident about it to furnish all the materiel needed for a first-rate popular tale, such as fair and facile fingers are wont now-a-days to weave.
