The public were startled on the 18th by the announcement that Garibaldi's visit was to be abruptly terminated, and that he would leave London on his way for Caprera, on the 22d.

The excitement was alleged to be too much for his health, and medical evidence was adduced in support, but it was circulated that his departure was suggested by the Government, at the instigation of Napoleon. These reports were emphatically denied by Lord Clarandon, in the House of Lords, and Lord Palmerston, in the House of Commons. They asserted that Napoleon took no exception to Garibaldi's welcome, but fully appreciated it, and secuted the idea that the British Government would have listened to any interference. yould have listened to any interfer THE DANISH WAR-PALL OF DUPPELN.

THE DANISH WAR—FALL OF DUPPELN.
A Berlin dispatch of the leth thus announces the fall of Duppeln:
"The Duppeln redoubts were captured, this morning, by the Prussian troops. Two thousand Danes were made prisoners. The Prussians have taken intrenchments Nos. 7, 8, 9 and 10.
"They stormed the Tete du Pent, and captured there three thousand Danes, including forty-five officers. The Danes have blown up the bridge." A Glavenstein despatch of the same date says:
"The assault upon the Danish works at Duppeln was delivered at ten o'clock this morning. Redoubts Nos. 1 to 7, together with the communica.

"The assault upon the Danish works at Duppein was delivered at ten o'clock this morning. Redoubts Nos. 1 to 7, together with the communications in the rear, were occupied by the Prussians; and while the Brigade Rayen took Redoubts Nos. 8, 9 and 10, and the Tete du Pont, the bridge was destroyed. victory before Duppeln was announced at

The victory before Duppeln was announced at Berlin by salutes on the evening of the 18th. Great crowds of people surrounded the royal palace, cheering the King and Queen, and singing the Prussian national hymn. Their Majesties appeared on the balcony, and thanked the people. Hearty cheers were given also for the army. Many houses were magnificently illuminated. The King sent the following telegraphic message to Prince Frederick Charles, of Prussia, whose headquarters were at Snitzberg near Gravenstein. adquarters were at Spitzberg near Gravenstein:
Next to the Lord of Hosts I have to thank my splendid army, and the leadership, for the glorious victory of this day. Express to the troops my highest acknowledment and my reyal thanks for their performances. (Signed) WILHELM."

The Daily News says: "The Conference may now meet as soon as it pleases. The assault on Duppeln has been delivered. The defenders, outnumbered by five to one, have succumbed to the fortune of war. The Prussians have now only to take Alsen to make themselves masters of the whole of Schleswig.

"The material guarantee which the German Powers sought will then be in their hands, though which they might not have had without it, is more than ever doubtful.
