[For the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.]

One Day's Contribution. H. D. TORREY. Just one day's contribution, One day of hand and brain, To cheer a living hero's heart,

Or soothe some dying pain. It seems a simple offering, An insuffici nt mile, But reproduced a thousand times,

It swells upon the sight, Till, like con min led waters, wide, Made up of rain and dew, We see amid the ocean's depth The drops from which it grew.

One day to our defenders brave, Gone forth to fall, or die, Or lift our Starry Banner up, Victorious to the sky. One day to cheer their onward march,

One day to make them feel A Nation's heart behind their own Is beating true as steel. One day-who would not give it, Its product or its gain.

To wait our boys such blessed aid Upon the battle plain? Who would not give a hundred days To lay secession low, And help our brothers deal its cause

The final, crushing blow ? Then bid the iron muscles move, Leap forth in wondrous play, And with the mind competing, toil Thro' one brieffleeting day. One passing day to Freedom's sons, Their country, children, wives,

Whilst others to secure us these, Most freely give their lives! I see the pride of manhood leap, The patriotic fly, Till loyalty from freemen's hearts Lake incense seeks the sky; And one day's contribution

From every hand and heart.

Will leave a blessing everywhere
