A SINGULAR CASE. A man in Jersey died, of late. Whose seat was by no means great. And his widow, one night, Walking forth, screamed out, and started, For a form met her sight. Just like to the "dear departed" she viewed it by the light of moon— A scare-crow, in a field of corn. From this fact, we may guess That the deceased did not all resemble, in his dress, The patrons of great Tower Hall!

THE PRIZE SKATER. BY L. B. MARBURY. "Hurrah for the skating pond!" cried Billy Bates; "Come, hurry up, post, and bring out your skates. For the pond we both hurried, and soon we were there. Among many "finis fellows" and ladies so fair, Now here a young lassie as sharp as a knife, Who seemed to be fond of the race in life, Declared, "All the charms of a wife I will bring To the skater who does the most wonderful thing. I've traveled the land and have sailed the wide ocean; I've seen many sights that have caused a commotion; But I pledge you my word that about in a trice There followed the longest thing ever on ice. All the men were in glory, the ladies were high, Each tightened his skates while he loosened a sigh: When all, as a sign from this beautiful queen, Did eddies and races things ever were seen. One chap cut an angel and put on the wings; Another cut elephants, canals and rigs; One fellow went backward and drew a bouquet, Just a clown of repute made a greater display. Now here was excitement for all the gay folks— Meet the lassie here who would thrive by his jokes!"

PAID FIRE DEPARTMENT. The New Yorkers are rejoicing over their new Paid Fire Department, and are making comparisons of it to the old volunteer arrangement that are highly favorable.

PHILADELPHIA has, in fact, the expense of a paid fire department, without any of the advantages. In the year 1864 the city appropriated to the fire department were $99,869 65; during the year 1865 they have been larger, as we shall see by the next message of the Mayor.

PHILADELPHIA has, in fact, the expense of a paid fire department, without any of the advantages. In the year 1864 the city appropriated to the fire department were $99,869 65; during the year 1865 they have been larger, as we shall see by the next message of the Mayor. In addition to this, the Insurance companies are called on for large contributions, and many citizens are to be expected every year to give liberally to one or other of the companies. The magnificent parade of last fall must have cost, in different ways, from one to two hundred thousand dollars. Our civic pride at times makes us think this money is not uselessly expended; and when we looked at the splendid machines and the stout, manly forms of the firemen who, without wages of any kind, were ready to protect our property at all hours and in all weathers, we could scarcely grudge the donations made for the showy pageant.

But this kind of thing is all wrong. Good workmen are entitled to good wages, and the fact of their receiving wages makes them responsible to the party that pays them. This is what is needed, especially in a huge city like Philadelphia. The fact cannot be denied that, under the present system, with the different companies totally irresponsible, their houses become resorts for idle boys, who waste time and get into bad habits. They become social club-houses where a great deal of money is spent in handsome furniture and luxurious entertainments that have nothing to do with the proper business of firemen, which is solely the extinction of fires. Some of the fire companies are, to a certain degree, political in their character. At any rate, the lower class of partisan politicians, who are prominent and active in ward meetings, operate extensively among the firemen and often contrive to have the nomination of their favorites effected through their votes. We are indirectly indebted to the volunteer system for the nomination and consequent election of many of the worthless and corrupt men who have disgraced us at Harrisburg, or in councils, or in local offices, for a number of years.

From the early days of fire companies there has descended to this day a mistaken and false pride that makes them repugnant to taking wages. But we cannot see why firemen should not be paid for their services as well as policemen or other persons that, in one way or another, guard the property of the citizens. Labor is not creditable, and, in whatever form it appears, it has a right to demand compensation. Thousands of volunteer firemen have their trades and their incomes, and do not need wages for their services as firemen. But there are thousands of able-bodied and deserving men who have no trades or do not prosper in them, and who would make excellent firemen. In behalf of this large class of deserving men, we would urge the establishment of a paid fire department; so that the hundreds of thousands of dollars which we annually give may afford support to men who really need the money, and that none of it may be expended in extravagant decoration of machines, luxurious furnishing of engine houses and sumptuous entertainments.

Our present fire department, with its chief officers paid by the city, is probably as good as a volunteer department can be in a great city. But it is full of evils, that are not reformable except by a total abandonment of the volunteer system. We believe the time has come for this. It took a good while to get the firemen to overcome their prejudices against steam engines. But they all prefer them now. They have the good sense, too, to learn that a great city like Philadelphia the volunteer fire system is utterly unsuited. Let us observe the operations of the paid systems of other cities, and take the earliest measures to adopt one combining all the best features of each.

"SOMETHING TO DRINK." To the unsophisticated in matters spirituous, the familiar phrase, "Something to drink," would seem to involve half a dozen or so of bibbles. Brandy, whisky, wine, etc., would of course be comprehended in the expression; but the tyro in the science of compounding tipples would have no more idea of the resources of the art than a simple uneducated boor would have of the capacity of the alphabet for forming new and endless combinations. These thoughts have occurred to us in view of a list of fancy drinks published by a well-known publican in Washington, D. C., which has fallen into our hands. It is at once amusing and instructive, and for the possession of those qualities, we copy it.
