

and airy hamadryads and fauns, imagined the chief gods at Olympus to be the gor-mandising, guzzling wretches they were. Those offsprings of Grecian and Roman imagination were insufferably worse than the imaginations that sculptors of that day put into marble. Their own eating the Greeks and Romans conducted on principles somewhat æsthetic, reclining at table, diverting themselves with games, songs, and the plashing of fountains; and this not so much because they were Sybaritic, as that they wanted to relieve eating of its animal cha-racter. Why, then, did they figure their gods as eating at all? We have not received the formula for ambrosia, although it must have been "home-brewed;" and the gods may have been genuine hippophagi for aught we know, for the door of the celestial kitchen was never left ajar. There it stands, however, the unexplained contradiction for scholars to smooth away—the fact that an habits, but went further and made gods of wine bibbing wretches vastly worse than themselves, as if Circe had been their god-mother-in-chief. How much better are we American moderns of this century towards ourselves? Unquestionably, the highest tribute ever paid the human race, in profane literature, is in Hamlet's words to Guildenstern-"What a piece of work is man! how noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form and motion, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angle! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals!" But our rapacious bodies compel us to a great descent from this. The dining-table is the confessional to which, three times a day, we must repair and admit that we are weak and miserable Newton come down from the stars, and Shakspeare leaves Hamlet standing with Yorick's skull in his hand while each fills up the machine he carries, to wit, his own body. Man is lord of the fowl and the brute; but thrice a day he bows to their level, with only this difference, that craunch their bones raw, while he takes his cooked. The hand that holds the reins of empire picks up a fork or a spoon, grasping it with equal eagerness; the tongue came to bury Casar goes home and rolls itself around baked meats. Nothing but the repetition and universality of eating saves it from being counted a shame. If one man alone bore this necessity, he would feel himself an outcast, branded worse than Cain. Little Jack Horner, who sat in a corner eating his Christmas pie, did not do so altogether because he feared some other boy would be after the pie, nor vet for the sake of the rhyme, but because he had an inner shame at proving himself aweak, hungry little boy, and so wanted to be secret at it. And when the age is prepared to allow that animals have souls, it will say that puss slinking under the dresser with her mouse, and the tiger, carrying an ox into the jun-gle, do so because they are ashamed to be seen; that the secret instinct proclaims eating weakness, which only convention-

The two extremes are exalting, the art of dining to the height of a supremeobject, and on the other hand, yielding to the necessity for food with ungracious reluctance. is the distance between the two, and the former is the more honorable, if one must choose. So the Greeks and Romans cer-tainly thought; and the French now-a-days sin in the same direction, if at all; but Americans have squarely jumped to the other evil extreme. We do not carry out instinct, and seek our caves when we dine, because that is not convenient, and because we are all in the same bondage to hungar; but we do not submit gracefully, rather aggravating and procla ngor by chafing at it. The fable of Ventrum et Membra is acted out, and the members are all against the belly. We throw it food with an illnatured jerk, which means: There, take that, and that, and that, and stop your detestable whining! We make it do what the brain cannot-reconcile and assimilate contradictions and absurdities.

Wretched cooking is supplemented in flavor by an overdose of spice, as though a dish should not be its own seasoning; and as though, if the spice is good in itself, it were not folly to spoil it by adding the dish As a nation, we own one universal liquor, which is gravy. It is a distinct entity, not existing in the plural number; it is a compelling swash which drowns everything, an American garlic which refuses to be buried. The genuine American is sallow and lean, discovering at thirty that he has an infirm stomach, and thereupon resigning hope and going into the hands of the doctors. Dys-pepsia sits at the head of every American table, and certainly keeps all our restau-rants, suggesting that the wicked could not have a more material punishment in the future life than a perpetual dinner at one of them. Bad cooking is our national intem-perance, Pastry is our universal drug, and a monosyllabic epitaph—truthful at least— might be cut on many headstones, thus:

Here I lie, Slain by pie. This is not all fanciful exaggeration. an old number of Harper—so old that it is new—the facetious Bess Browne makes one of his herces declaim thus: "What, sir! do you undertake to tell me that because our friend Mr. Fry, for example, has just breakfasted on a pound of bacon, two pounds of venison, the leg of a rabbit, the breast of a quail, half a dozen mountain trout, and a quall, half a dozen mountain trout, and a can of sardines, he is to that extent hog, deer, rabbit, quall, trout and sardine?" Candidly, one would say not; and yet, re-member that we are only what we have eaten! The work of assimilation is not carried on remotely from ourselves, as in the South cooking used to be done in an outhouse removed from the main building; but the laboratory and real kitchen are within ourselves. What we eat determines largely the beating of our hearts, the evolutions of our brains, the movements of our affections our brains, the movements of our affections. The cerebrum must have good blood, the constituents of which enter the mouth or not at all. Your liver, upon brandy and water, accomplishes nothing. Great workers have been great eaters, if not gormandizers. Handel, in the year of his most prolific com-position, ate the dinner of six, declaring himself the company. The blue devils of gloomy Theology may quite likely come out of the kitchen-fire; the man who wrote the hideous saying that hell is payed with the hideous saying that hell is paved with the skulls of infants may have been writhing at the time under the torment of under-baked bread, mistaking pain of the body -as many before him and after him have done-for veritable agony of the soul.

Dyspepsia is unnecessarily an American isease. It is so because Americans persist in owning ingloriously their human subjec-tion to appetite; because their dealings with the stomach are in a spirit of ill-nature, as though its plaints were unreasonable. The body receives all thought for its raiment, the mind for its culture, the senses for their satisfaction; but the stomach can get along with anything. The kitchen is held to be no the mistress; and so it is turned place for the mistress; and so it is turned over to Biddy, who slaughters us all with her ignorance; and so it will be as long as cooking is esteemed a work of dis-honor. In reality, literature, general work, bappiness, and even Christianity, itself, may be said, without violence, to begin in the kitchen, for they all have root in bodily health. Sana mens can-not be dissevered from sanyim corres and not be dissevered from sanum corpus, and neither from the kitchen. Besides the connection of cookery with our own lives, chemistry, which comprehends everything, waits to be its handmaid, and is that com-mon which may make all science its servant? A Frenchman has come to us, and to New York particularly (which particularly of the crime were peculiar. Dr. Hughes, a married man with one child, had settled in Bedford, where he gained the affections of Miss Parsons, a girl of seventeen, and effected her ruin. They fied to Pitts-burgh, in December, 1864, where a forged divorce was exhibited, and a form of mar-arrested for bigamy. He was sentenced to the Penitentiary, in Pennsylvania, in January, but soon par-doned through the agency of his deserted wife. The infatuation for Tamzen Parsons still strong upon him, he sent his wife and child to England, their native country, and continued his illicit suit; meeting, however, the opposition of Miss Parsons and of her formit Bedd discussion family. Baffled, disgraced, and stung to madness, he took to drink, and ended the madness, ne took to drink, and ended the complication in a murder committed in open day upon the main street of the village. Dr. Hughes is a man of thirty-nine years, of superior education and refined manners, and has borne himself through the trial with a firmness that was not shaken even by the dread sentance by the dread sentence.

MAGNIFICENT DONATION AND ENTER PRISE.—One of the noblest and most judi-cious acts of liberality and enterprise which clous acts of inperainty and enterprise which has occurred in the present era, is the loan by the Adams Express Co. of $2,000,000 of its accumulated capital to several of the Southern railroads, to enable them to re-sume operation. This company, by such donations, attests its great wisdom, and contables near claims to the support and establishes new claims to the support and patronage of the people of the South. A like liberality on the part of other large capitalists, who are interested in our prosperity, would soon restore, nay, give a new perity, would soon restore, may, give a new and greater impulse to our progress and prosperity, and make the South what we believe it is destined in not many years to become, the most flourishing portion of this continent.-N.
