Peter. Peter died young-very quick and soon that bright thing came to confusion. Ho died of excess of life; his vivacity slew him. Plucky and silent under punishment, or any pain from without, pain from within, in his own precious, brisk, enjoying body. was an insufferable offence, affront and mystery—an astonishment not to be borne nystery—an astonishment not to be borne—he disdained to live under such condi-

One day he came in howling with pain. There was no injury, no visible cause, but he was wildly ill, and in his eyes the end of all things had come. He put so many questions to us at each pang—what is thus?

what the — can it be?—did you ever?— as each paroxysm doubled him up, he gave a sharp cry, more of rage and utter exasperation than of suffering; he got up to run away from it—why should he die? Why should he be shut up in darkness and obstruction at that hour of his opening morn struction at that hour of his opening morn his sweet hour of prime? And so raging, and utterly put out, the honest dear little fellow went off in an eestasy of fury at death, at its absurdicy in his case.
We never could explain his death; it was not poison or injury; he actually expired when careering round the green at full speed, as if to outrue his enemy, or shake him off. We have not yet got over his loss, and all the possibilities that lie buried in his grave, in the Park, beneath a young chestnut-tree where the ruddy-cheeked, fat, and cordial coachman, who of old, in the grand old Reform days, used to drive his master, Mr. Speaker Abercromby, down to "the House" with much stateliness and with much stateliness and bouquet, and I dug it for him,—that park in which Peter had often disported himself, fluttering the cocks and hens, and putting to flight the squadron of Gleneagles

Dick. He too is dead,—he who, never having been born, we had hoped never would die; not that he did—like Rab—"exacty" die; he was slain. He was fourteen, and getting deaf and blind, and a big bully of a retriever dear and him one Sunday morning when the bells were ringing. Dick, wno always fought at any odds, gave battle; a Sabba-tarian cab turned the corner, the big dog fied, and Dick was run over,—there in his own street, as all his many friends were going to church. His back was broken and he died on Monday night with us all about him; dear for his own sake, dearer for another's, whose name—Sine Quâ Non is now more than ever true, now that she

I was greatly pleased when Dr. Cotting, of Roxbury, came in yesterday and intro-duced himself to me by asking, "Where is Dick?" To think of our Dick being known in Massachusetts!

Bob.

If Peter was the incarnation of vivacity, Bob was that of energy. He should have been called Thalaba the Destroyer. He re-joiced in demolition—not from ill-temper, but from the sheer delight of energizing. When I first knew him he was at Blink-The toliman and his wife were old and the house lonely, and Bob was too the first the house onerly, and bob was too terrific for any burglar. He was as tall and heavy as a foxhound, but in every other respect a pure old-fashioned, wiry, short-haired Scotch terrier—red as Rob Roy's beard—having indeed ether qualities of Rob's than his hair,—choleric, unscrupulous, affectionate, staunch-not in the least magnanimous—as ready to worry a little dog as a big one. Fighting was his "chief end," and he omitted no opportunity of accomplishing his end. Rab liked fighting for its own sake, too, but scorned to fight any-thing under his own weight; indeed, was

I very soon found I could not keep nim. He worried the pet dogs all around, and got me into much trouble. So I gave him as night-watchman to a goldsmith in Princess street. This work he did famously. I once in passing at midnight stopped at the shop and peered in at the little slip of glass, and by the gaslight I saw where he lay. I made a noise, and out came he with a roar and a bang as of a sledge-hammer. I then called his name, and in an instant all was still except a quick tapping within that intimated the wagging of the tail. He is still there— has settled down into a reputable, pacific citizen—a good deal owing, perhaps, to the disappearance in battle of sundry of his best As he lies in the sun before the shop Teméraire.

I never saw a dog of the same breed; he is a sort of rough cab of a dog—a huge quantity of terrior in one skin; for he has all the fun and briskness and failings and ways of a small dog, begging and hopping as only it does. Once his master took him to North Berwick. His first day he spent in careering about the sands and rocks and in the sea, for he is a noble swimmer. His next he devoted to worrying all the dogs of the town, beginning, for convenience, with the biggest.
This aroused the citizens, and their fury was brought to a focus on the third day by its being reported alternatively that he had torn a child's ear off, or torn and actually eaten it. Up rose the town as one man, and each as two, and, headed by Matthew Cathie, the one-eyed and excellent shoemaker, with a tall, raw divinity stu-dent, knock-kneed and six feet two, who was his lodger, and was of course called young Dominie Sampson. They bore down upon Bob and his master, who were walk-

Bob was for making a stand, after the manner of Coriolanus, and banishing by instant assault the "common cry of curs;" but his master saw sundry guns and pistols, not to speak of an old harpoon, and took to his heels as the only way of getting Bob to take to his. Aurifez, with much nous, made for the police station, and, with the assistance of the constables, and half a crown. got Thalaba locked up for the night, safe

Next morning, Sunday, when Cathie and Next morning, Sunday, when Catme and his huge student lay uneasily asleep, dreaming of vengeance, and the early dawn was beautiful upon the Bass, with its snowy clouds of sea-birds "brooding on the charmed wave," Bob was hurried up to the station, locked into a horse-box—him never shall that ancient Burch forcet or see shall that ancient Burgh forget or see,
I have a notion that dogs have humor, and are perceptive of a joke. In the north a shepherd, having sold his sheep at a market, shepherd, having sold in sheep as a market, was asked by the buyer to lend him his dog to take them home. "By a' manner o' means tak Birkie, and when ye'r dune wi' him just play so" (making a movement with his arm), "and he'll be hamein a jiffy." Birkie was so clever and useful and gay that the borrower coveted him; and on getting to his farm shut him up, intending to keep him. Birkie escaped during the night, and took the entire hirsel (flock) back to his own master! Fancy him trotting across the moor with them, they as willing as he.

THE woolen mill of R. Gardner & Co... at Janesville, Michigan, was entirely de-stroyed by fire on Thursday. The loss is $60,000, and is insured for $25,000 in the Hartford, Phonix and Metropolitan Companies. The factory will be rebuilt at once. A POOR blacksmith in Ohio recently invested a few dollars in two acres of oil land, out of which, in a few months, he made
