without any covering on her feet except a pair of stockings. She went through the monntains, climbing stone fences, difficult even for a well person to surmount, over rocks, through bushes and briars, climbing some time on her hands and feet, to the summit of a steep and precipitous hill, from which, as would appear, she walked off. striking her head against the limbs of trees and against the rocks below, upon which in a number of places were found marks of blood. She was discovered at the foot of the hill, cold and lifeless.—Newark (N, J.) Advertiser. Coal Statement.
