XXXIXth CONGRESS-FIRST SESSION.

CLOSE OF YESTERDAY'S PROCEEDINGS SENATE-The resolution on kidnapping being under discussion, Mr. Sumner read a letter from a gentleman in Alabama setting forth that the facts stated, in the, preamble actually exist, and that Federal officers Mr. Johnson (Md;) called for the name of the author. Mr. Sumner said he had been requested not to give the name. The writer was well known in the other House. Mr. Sumner then read a letter to similar purpose from the United States District Judge of Florida. Mr. Davis (Ky.) had no doubt the Yankees were endeavoring to re-open the slave trade. He knew they would do so, if they thought they could make money out of He was in favor of the resolution.

The resolution was adopted. Mr. Wade (Ohio) called up the bill to give the consent of Congress to the annexa tion of the counties of Berkley and Jeffer son, of the State of Virginia, to the State of West Virginia. bill was read, and, at the suggestion of Mr. Johnson, was postponed until to-House.--Mr, Smith (Ky.) introduced the following resolution, which was agreed to: Resolved, That the Military Committee be instructed to inquire into the present condi-tion of the property known as the Arlington He ights, and the expediency of converting said property into a home for the disabled and wounded soldiers of the last war, with a view of establishing an invalid corps, for the purpose of manufacturing such stores. &c., as may be required by the army and navy of the United States:

Mr. Broomall (Pa.) introduced a resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Reconstruction, asserting that the termination of the recent civil war has left the lately normed territory in the hands of the conquering power, without political rights; that the political condition of the people in the lately rebellious States must be fixed by the supreme legislative power; that the effect of the amnesty is to relieve individvals of the punishment of crime, but not to cenfer political rights; that Congress should confer the necessary power to enable them to ferm their own State governments, but this cannot be done until the rights of those among them always true to their allegiance f ball be guaranteed and protected. Mr. Voorhees (Ind.) called up the resolution heretofore submitted by him, viz.: Resolved, That the Message of the Presi-dent of the United States, delivered at the opening of the present Congress, is regarded y this body as an able, judicious and patriotic State paper. Resolved. That the principles therein advocated for the restoration of the Union are the safest and most practicable that can now be applied to our disordered domestic affairs. Resolved, That no State or number of States confederated together can in any mun-ner sunder their connection with the Fede ral Union, except by a total subversion of our present system of government, and that the President in enunciating this doctrine in his late Message has butgiven expression to the sentiment of all those who deny the right or power of a State to secede.

Resolved. That the President is entitled to the thanks of Congress and the country for the faithful, wise and successful efforts to restore civil government, law and order to the States whose citizens were lately in insurrection against the Federal authority, and we hereby pledge ourselves to aid, assist and uphold him in the policy which he has d to give harmony, peace and unio to the country. Mr. Voorhees said that in introducing these resolutions he did not intend to step in between the majority and the flesh pots tution. He had no eye on the public crib on which they had fed and fattened so long; nor upon unfathomable contracts. or anything that was theirs. They had been assaile by the veteran of the Republican party, Mr. Stevens, and every word was filled with contagion and death; that gentleman had deliberately declared that the Southern States were destroyed by the rebellion, and remain destroyed to the present day. And now the House were asked to ravel to pieces all that the President had done and begin to reknit anew. He himself should stand by the President's position as a cure against the blind empiricism which first pronounces the patient dead and then gives the medicine. He was in no sense the President's partisan. He did not support him for election, He decided the issue which would be made i he obtained power, but since the day he took the oath of office he beheld in him the ma gistrate, not the private citizen. To say that the Southern States are dead, vasion. assert that the war to restore the Union is an utter failure. In every aspect was the theory of the majority fraught with death and disgrace to the Government. With this he contrasted the course of the President, who, when the temple of Janus was closed, extended the hand of friendship to the Southern States, to meet the demands of the people. He did not, as others, view the conduct of the President as a usurpation of power. He found the Sonthern States without law, and in the performance of his duty he used best means to restore them to power. He hailed the appointment of Sharkey, Perry, Johnson and Parsons as Provisional Governors, as bright promises of good adminis-tration, and as harbingers of peace to the Southern people, and prosperity to the whole country. Such men as Butler had been disappointed in the fat, juicy pickings, and the hungry sharks in the Southern Maters had been deprived of their prey. Mr. Voorhees, in combating the doctrine that the States are out of the Union, said that in more than a hundred instances, in letters, proclamations and speeches, the late assault upon the President. Executive always recognized as de jure the Southern States. If these States then are in the Union, what power could close these doors against them? How could this House refuse to receive their representatives? Peace and submission to the laws are the Peace and submission only guaranties that can be demand conquered people. The course pursued by the Southern States in adopting the Constitutional amendment abolishing slavery was wise and in furtherance of these questions of guaranties. Frederick the Great, said, "If I wanted to ruin my Government I would make it over to the philosophers, for phi-losophers contradict themselves," and of this they had abundant evidence. Those, too, who claimed to be representatives from Virginia, were admitted during the war, but were now excluded.

Mr. Deming asked the gentleman to in-form the House whether he thought the right of representation must commence at Antietam or Gettysburg? Mr. Voorhees said he would answer by repeating a sentence he had already uttered, namely, that peace and obedience are the only guaranties for the future which any Government can require, and when pea reigns he held that the people cannot be governed without representation. The yet Congress ignores its record of the last our years, as if it were blotted out. Besides what he had mentioned, he said the principle that the Union was unbroken was disobeyed in all the party platforms. The time to which Mr. Voorhees was restricted by the rules having expired, on motion of Mr. Smith, the House unanimously granted an extension. Mr. Voorhees, in continuation of his speech, indorsed the views of the President on the tariff question. Taxes must be imposed equally. All history shows that class legislation has destroyed the public liberty. The President having sprung from the loins of the people, they will hall him as their friend, for he has not lost his love and care for the dignity of labor. On the leading measures of restoration an interesting chapter has been written. He submitted it to another test on which it had been assented by those who claim to be the only friends of the Administration: They were engaged in making it appear that th President has done nothing. The gentle man from Pennsylvania (Mr. Stevens) pronounced it impracticable and untenable while an arrogant Senator (Sumner) pro nounced the whole thing a fraud. Members too had crowded into the pre sence of the President. saving his plan does, not promise to give success, and, therefore, must be recognized as a failure. And then the majority ask him to set it aside, and not open his lips, while they smash to pieces his pillar, and knock to the earth his almost complete structure. It is their mission to destroy, not to build up, and to strew the broken fragments. Under the peaceful policy of the President we can celebrate victories not less renowned than

May the two sections meet as friends, and the future of the American Union will be bailed with the love and praise of all its citizens. The above are some of the points which were elaborated on by the honorable gentleman, who, after taking his seat. was warmly congratulated by his friends.

Mr. Bingham (Ohio) expressed his surprise at the speech of the gentleman from ndiana. When the rebellion was rife the President had no support from the gentle man and his friends. He had not forgotten that the gentleman was accustomed in his place to join the cry—"You cannot sustain the Government by arms." When the war was rocking both hemispheres, and when the land was filled with lamentation and death, the gentleman was with his party among the conspirators at Chicago, who, in Convention declared that the war for the Union was a failure He would have re-mained silent but for the fact that the genleman would indoctrinate the House and the country with the same foul spirit which inaugurated the rebellion. The gentleman's argument could not be mistaken. It was

It did not appear to the gentleman, when he read from the President's Message, that he President reproduced from the author of the Declaration of American Independence the truth that the true intent of Government is "equal and exact justice to all men.

This constitutes the watchword of the President's Message. But of this the gentleman was oblivious when he made his first speech. In the first Congress of the Confederation a motion was made to limit citizenship to white freemen. Four fifths of all the people were there rep-resented, and in 1778 the Deputies rejected it with scorn, and excluded it from the fundamental law, and therefore it never found a place in the Constitution and laws of the United States. Having one measure of necessity, we may reculre another, and the purpose of the Con stitution is equal to exact justice. He thanks the President for uttering this watchword of the purer and better days of the republic It applies equally to the white and black man. The time was when it was unsafe fo a citizen of Massachusetts or other Northern State to be found in the streets of Charleston or Richmond, because, in despite of and in violation of the Constitution of the United States, all the guarantees of that instrument

It was time we take security for the future. so that no more attempts may be made to dismember the Republic. He repelled in scorn the assertion that he co-operated with any party which imposed unequal or unjust burdens on any State of the Republic. He undertook to say that the President would co-operate in introducing into the Constitution that which will perfect it, so that we may reap the great end for which the Constitution was ordained, and "to make a more perfect union, promote the public traquillity and establish justice," as now written in the front of the Constitution. Well might the President say, "equal and exact justice to all men.'

He repelled every intimation that the representatives here have manifested the lightest disposition to interfere with the just prerogatives of the President, or to make up conflict with him. If the day ever come when he will find no supporters, excep among those who in 1864 were buried so deep that the hand of resurrection can neve find them, then God help the President and save him from his friends. [Applause.] The Speaker promptly interfered to check the disorder, and reminded those who pro duced it that neither such approbation no disapproval would be permitted. Mr. Bingham, resuming, examined a lit-tle more closely the President's position. He had understood all his life that a difference in words was nothing if they agreed in substance. The express position of the President was in exact accord with the position of the House, that the functions of the insurrec tionary States were suspended by their own claim representation on this floor until the representatives of all the States are satisfied that they have placed themselves in their
