THE SHENANDOAH.

Correspondence Between Mr. Adams and Earl Clarendon.

Recapitulation of the History of the Rebel Pirate.

How an Innocent Merchant Vessel was Converted into a Cruiser.

The British Government Requested to Put the Crew on Trial.

Earl Clarendon's Reasons for Declining to Accede to this Request.

The Difference Between American and British Neutrality.

The Canada's mails, bringing the Adams-Clarendon correspondence, in reference to the pirate Shenandoah, have arrived.

The entire series of letters is too voluminous for publication to-day, but we give the most important portions. On the 21st of October Mr. Adams wrote to Earl Russell complaining of the British origin, equipment and manning of the Shenandoah, as well as of the origin, &c., of the Alabama, and the rescue of her crew by the British yacht Deerhound. Mr. Adams denounced these affairs as flagrant outrages against neutrality, and gave details proving his assertions.

On the 7th of November Mr. Adams wrote to Earl Clarendon, requesting that the Shenandoah, which had arrived at Liverpool, be given up to the United States authorities. On the 11th of November, Earl Clarendon wrote to Mr. Adams that the Shenandoah had been delivered to the United States Consul at Liverpool, but that the officers and crew being "all foreigners" they were allowed to depart from the vessel with their effects. On November 14th Mr. Adams replied to Earl Clarendon, complaining of the "distinguishing" way in which the pirates had been released by the British authorities. Several other letters passed between the ministers in reference to this question, and in regard to the Alabama and the yacht Deerhound. The remainder of the correspondence we give below. Letter No. 9 is as follows:

MR. ADAMS TO THE EARL OF CLARENDON. (Received Nov. 14, 1865.)

LEGATION OF THE U. S. IN LONDON, Nov. 14, 1865. My Lord: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th inst., in reply to my letter of the 7th inst., in which I have the honor to inform you that the United States Government has decided to release the crew of the Shenandoah, and to allow them to depart from the vessel with their effects.

My Lord: I have the honor to inform you that the United States Government has decided to release the crew of the Shenandoah, and to allow them to depart from the vessel with their effects.

President, who dwelt upon the necessity of adopting prompt measures of prevention in his annual recommendations to Congress in the year 1857. The President's recommendation was adopted by the United States in answer to the demand that should be made by the House of Representatives, which report recommending that these establishments should be promptly suppressed, and that the necessary means should be taken to prevent their re-organization.
