XXXIXth CONGRESS-FIRST SESSION.

CLOSE OF THEFERDAY'S PROC

SENATE. - Mr. Howard (Mich.) called up the joint resolution which was offered by him yesterday, re-commending the trial of Jefferson Davis and Clement C. Clay before a Military Commission, for charges mentioned in the report of the Secretary of War of December

Mr Sumner suggested that it be made a eoncurrant instead of a joint resolution, and this was accordingly done. The resolution was then, on motion of Mr.

Howard, ordered to be printed. Mr. Harris (N. Y.) offered a resolution, landless poor without distinction of color, who may apply for homesteads of not less than one hundred and sixty acres of land, free of charge which was referred to the Committee on Printing, providing for the printing of the usual number of copies of the Congressional Dictionary. Mr. Howard offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling upon the President for any correspondence he may have had with Judges of the Supreme Court respecting the holding of Civil Courts in insurrectionary districts.

districts. Mr. Anthony (R. I.) moved to take up a resolution offered by him some time since for the reference to the Special Committee on Reconstruction of all papers relating to on Reconstruction of all papers relating to representation of the lately reballions States. Mr. Hendricks (Ind.) inquired if the pas-sage of that resolution would send all cre-dentials to that committee. Mr. Anthony replied that it would not; that would be unconstitutional.

The resolution was taken up. Mr. Doelittle (Wis.) moved to amend by inserting in the resolution the words, "ex-cept credentials," Pending the discussion on this subject the morning hour expired, and the unfinished business of yesterday, which was the bill to regulate the elective franchise in the District of Columbia, was taken up. Mr. Morrill (Me.) offered an amendment to include among those excepted from the right of suffrage, all who may have volun-tarily left the District of Columbia to give tarny left the District of Columbia to give aid and comfort to the rebels. Mr. Davis (Ky.) took the floor in opposi-tion to the bill, and spoke at length on its unconstitutionality. He denied theright of Congress, under the second section of the amendment, to confer the right of suffrage on the nervoes, and maintained that even than an officer of the United States, or other on the negroes, and maintained that even if the right existed it would not be expedientto exercise it, the negro being an infe-rior race, incapable of self-government and civilization. He held that the Caucasian was the highest and the negro the lowest of the races, and all attempts to elevate the latter race only ended in their degradation. Cuvier, the great naturalist, had described the African, but he ought to have added to his description that a foul odor exudes from his skin, and his heel makes a hole in the

At the conclusion of Mr. Davis's remarks, Mr. Wilson moved to postpone the bill under consideration, and take up the bill to Columbia. enlarge the power of the Freedmen's Bu-

Resolved, That in re-establishing the Federal relationships of the communities lately in rebellion so as to permit them again to participate in administering the general government, the following are ne-cessary and proper requirements on the part of the United States, and ought to be secured by such measures as will render them, as far as possible, inevitable: First. The absolute renunciation of all the pretensions and evasions of secession is a doctrine and as a practice. Second. The repudiation, both by the State und by the National Governments, of in the South, which, unless prevented, will all public debts and obligations, including State and municipal liabilities, contracted time when that gentleman would not have crushed the rebellion. Mr. Boutwell, replied that the name was left out rather in the absence than with the knowledge of that gentleman's political character. If his colleague knew of the loyalty of Mr. Hill, there would be no obing he should uniformly vote in accordance with the action of his State without regard to party. He believed the two races are distinct, and believing that, he was un-willing to take any step which would place the negro on an equality with the white ection to the retention of his name. Mr. Dawes said that the Hill in the rebel Congress was not Josiah Hill. It was another man. Josiah Hill. It was candidate for Governor of Georgia. Mr. Boutwell, after this explanation, [Laughter.] He hoped to God that slavery was abol-ished, yet while he thus rejoiced he could but believe that the efforts put forth to force political equality of negroes with the whites iwas a gross violation of good faith toward the District of Columbia and Maryland. Military Affairs, reported back the bill to revive the grade of general in the army, He had thought that with the abolishment of slavery all forther agitation would cease. While he conceded that many negroes were intelligent, the great mass of them were unfit to be entrusted as a depositary of which was recommitted. On motion of Mr. Stevens (Pa.) the House took from the Speaker's table the joint re-solution of the Senate authorizing the Committee on Reconstruction to send for peroower.

sons and papers. Mr. Brooks (N, Y.) inquired of Mr. Stevens how long it would be before the House had a report from that Committee. power. The passage of this bill would have an in-jurious effect upon Maryland, and on this issue the rebels of the State hope to divide the Republican party. The former masters of the alaves would exercise great influence over them, and thus the rebels would have Mr. Stevens replied he could not pos-sibly give the information, as the proceedings of the Committee were secret. Mr. Brooks said the gentleman might give the advantage over Union men. In some of the counties of Maryland, owing to the large number of free blacks, there would be his private opinion as to how long a large portion of the people would be deprived of an antagonism between them and the whites, and as a friend of the negro he feared that the negro would thus be the sufferer. Some, representation. This would be interesting to those who are now paying taxes without Mr. Stevens replied that the South had might suppose that because he was not in favor of negro suffrage, that he was the enemy of the negro. He was not his enemy, but his friend, and should so continue as taxed us long enough. The House then concurred in the resolution of the Senate. Yeas, 125; nays, 35. Mr. Dawes introduced a bill to amend the but his friend, and should so continue as long as the negro continued to merit his friendship. He enlisted in the cause of emancipation, and was a member of the convention that abolished slavery at a time act to provide duties on imports, which makes provision for an amendment prescribing that no suit or prosecution for any cause therein mentioned, commenced in a court of any State against any person other when to be an emancipationist was to be hated and despised by many of his warmest friends. He would not unite with any party person acting in the subject matter of said suit or prosecution under such officer in the discharge of his official duty, shall be reto deprive the black man of what was his. He would secure to him life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness, and the enjoyment of the fruits of his own labor. He would not moved to the Circuit Court of the United pull down, but build up. The negro is free, and he would do all in his power to make freedom practical to him. He would carry out this object by making him a States, as in said section provided. The second section provides that any such suit removed under authority of that section, and now pending in any Circuit Court of the United States, shall, by order of said Court, be forthwith remanded to the State Court from which the same has been so removed, witness in a court of justice-subject to the same rules as the whites are. It would be an outrage and shame to throw around him the guards to secure his protection. He would pursue such means as would elevate there to be disposed of as it would have been if the removal had not taken place, and said the negro, and fix him for higher privileges remand shall in no way affect the validity of any proceedings in said State Court prior of voting when the dominant race shall think proper to confer it. Mr. Raymond (N.Y.) inquired whether it was the intention of his colleagne that the resolutions should go to the Committee on Reconstruction, to operate as instructions. Mr. Conkling replied that he had offered them, as other resolutions, for reference. He had offered them on his own responsibility They were a mere relation of his own views Mr. Raymond, in view of this statement his colleague being a member of the Com mittee on Reconstruction. could see no reason why he could not express his opinion with that committee. If the resolutions were sent to the committee they might be regarded as implied instructions. Mr. Conkling presumed that no member of the Honse was excluded from expressing his opinion in the form of resolutions. He did not ask for a vote, but merely that the resolutions be referred. He wanted them printed, so that they may challenge investigation, both in the House and in the committee.

Mr. Blaine (Me.) inquired whether the resolutions did not go to the committee without denial.

The Speaker replied that they had not yet yet been offered.

Mr. Finck objected to the resolutions. Mr. Raymond wished to know the effect of the resolutions. If they were referred by a vote of the House, would not the reference be regarded as positive instructions, as they were in the form of resolutions? Mr. Finck insisted on his objection.

Mr. Conkling remarked that it was not courteous in the gentleman to object, thus preventing him from making a remark after the other side had been heard.

Mr. Boutwell (Mass.), from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back the amend-ments to the bill to incorporate the United States Mutual Protection Homestead Company. One of the amendments proposed to omit the name of Josiah Hill, of Georgia, and several other Southerners, as cor-porators, and substituting other names from the Northern States. He explained that the bill proposed to incorporate a land company, with a capital of three millions of dollars, for the purpose of enencouraging migration to and settlement in the States lately in rebellion. It was to en-courage black as well as white settlement, and introduced a policy to break up the im-mense bodies of land in that section, and distribute them among a large number of holders. The names of several of the corporators were left ont, because the commit-tee were not satisfied with their loyalty. Mr. Dawes (Mass.) said that Josiah Hill was a Union man before the war. That gentleman remained in his seat as a mem ber of this House after his colleagues had seceded, and urged them to return. He atterwards resigned and went home. Mr amendment to the constitution of Pennsyl-Hill was in the late Georgia Convention | vania, strike out the word "white" as a and spoke freely, and there was never a qualification of voters.

be open to rebel speculators. These lands should be set apart for homesteads for both white and black loyal men. If the bill heretofore introduced by him, and which was now before the Committee on Public Lands, should become a law, every freeman would become a freeholder. If it were objected that all the negroes here were too ignorant to vote, he would reply that they were not all ignorant. Many of them are educated and quite intelligent, and the larger portion not so would not suffer by comparison with many white men who in-stitute mebs against unoffending colored people, and published their deeds as negro insurrections, and yet nothing was done to disfranchise them. Every man cannot give a well defined reason for his vote, no more than every man is fit to discharge all the duties of life. He would give the negro the ballot to maintain the liberty already secured. If war can be produced only by denying the negro his rights, the late events in Jamaica should teach us the duty of dealing justly. Like causes must produce like effects. Hatred of the negro is as universal in the South as it was before the war, and the proposition to elevate the negro is everywhere held in that section in contempt and scorn, and the disposition is manifested to continue the colored race under some form continue the colored race under some form of vassalage or serfdom. If the military be withdrawn and the ballot be withheld from the black man, the most disastrous conse-quences might result. The conferring of suffrage, therefore, was a means of safety. If the whites in this District, who sympa-thind mith the rabellup rote it mould have thized with the rebellion vote, it would be mean to withhold the ballot from the loyal negroes. A vote against this bill would be a vote against democratic liberty, and instead of securing justice would install mis-rule and maladministration. Meaner rebels could not be found elsewhere than in this District, and the halter has been cheated out of their necks. He appealed to his Demo cratic friends to say whether southern white men did not vote wrong, and whether Democratic voting did not do much to warm rebellion into life.

rebellion into life. Mr. Sitgraves (N. J.) noticed a remark made by Mr. Farnsworth the other day, that the Democrats of New Jersey refused to give the white soldiers who went into the field and periled his life for his country the privilege of voting even as to who should represent them in the State and Congress, and that this was, perhaps, the reason why there were so many of that persuasion in he House. Mr. Sitgraves said that when the bill was Mr. Sitgraves said that when the bill was pending before the Legislature to author-ize soldiers to vote in camp, many of the Democratic party believed they could not vote for it without violating the Constitu-tion; others thought that no fair vole could be had in camp, and history showed they were right. The charge that the Democratic party of New Jersey were unfriendly to the soldiers, and, by inference, unfriendly to the cause, for which the soldiers fought, was unjust. The gentlemen then proceeded to show what the Democrats had done to aid the country in suppressing the rebelcently made by his colleague, Mr. Kelley, with reference to suffrage in Pennsylvania. with reference to suffrage in Pennsylvania. He was glad to say the Democratic party had been against extending the right of suffrage to the negro race, and in this the Democratic party had the aid of vast num-bers of those who were politically opposed to them. His colleague proposed to make an issue here that he had failed to make at home.

Mr. Kelley said that when he was quite a Mr. Kelley said that when he was quite a young man, and acting with the Democratic yarty, he united in a petition to the Legis-lature to change the Constitution, so that every man in Pennsylvania who was not a pauper or felon, should be a citizen in full. After further debate, Mr. Randall asked his colleague whether he would, by process of the Constitution of the United States, or emendment to the constitution of Pennsyl
