A WEALTHY Londoner established a free school in that city some time ago, and directed that the day after Christmas in every year there should be a drawing among the young unmarried women educated there, for a marriage portion of one hundred pounds.

The candidates must be members of the Episcopal Church, twenty-two years of age, and produce certificates of good character from employers with whom they have lived since leaving school. Christmas prizes soon after become wives. A large number participated in the drawing last Christmas, the fortunate pupil being an exceedingly pretty, rosy-cheeked damsel whom nobody would suppose would have any difficulty in securing a husband—doubt or no dowry.

A RECRUIT FROM THE GRAVE.—The war has produced many strange incidents, but none more singular than the following one, related by Colonel Ellis, late of the 1st Missouri Cavalry, in a St. Louis paper.

A few days after a fiercely contested battle, a party of soldiers belonging to the 1st Missouri took a jaunt over the battle-field, and came up to a spot where the rebel dead were buried. In one place the hair of a man's head was seen sticking out of the ground like a tuft of grass, and near by a hand was seen protruding upward, which evidently belonged to the corpse that owned the hair.

One of the men remarked to his companions, in a spirit of levity: "See, there's a dead rebel reaching out for something; let's see what he wants." In the same spirit, they dug out the mischief, almost recklessly, the cavalry men took hold of the man's hand, and hauled the body out of the grave, the loose dirt falling back into the shallow hole.

After the man began to stir and manifest signs of life, to the utter astonishment and horror of the resurrectionists. The man was taken by his rescuers to their tent, and was rubbed down, washed, and in a few days became as "good as new." He said that in the battle he was stunned by the passage of a shell, which knocked him senseless. He was picked up amongst the dead and buried like the rest. Not a scratch was found on his body. He said that he had joined the rebel army and fought the Federal long and well, but at this war his appearance on earth, he would now join the Federals and fight for them. He accordingly enlisted in the 1st Missouri, did a good deal of tough marching and fighting, and last September was mustered out of the service and paid off at Benton barracks.

CURIOUS CLAIM BY INDIANS.—Two Indians from the Indian Reservation in Erie county, New York State, have reached this place, and are about preferring claims to large bodies of land around the junction of Oil Creek and Allegheny river. Their claims are in relation to the land of the "Corn Planter."

They allege that by act of Assembly approved February 1st, 1791, the Pennsylvania Legislature granted to the Chief, "Corn Planter," six hundred acres on the west bank of the Allegheny, about three miles below the New York line, including Shadogwon and two islands, six hundred acres on the Allegheny, near Congruga, and three hundred acres on Oil Creek, including one oil spring near the Allegheny river. This last tract includes a part of what is now Oil City, and extends thence up the creek.

The Indians produced the patent for all the lands under the seal of Governor Thomas Mifflin, dated March 16, 1791. They allege that while a nominal sale was once made by Chief "Corn Planter" of a part of the lands, he never received the consideration money. The manner in which they claim applying to the Legislature is not yet known.—Despatch from Harrisburg.

EXPLOSION OF AN OIL STILL.—On Monday morning one of the stills of the oil refinery of Mr. Jones, in Erie, exploded. The explosion burst the cast iron top from the still and threw it some seventy or eighty feet in the air, at the same time igniting the oil and making a splendid pyrotechnic display. No one was seriously injured. Mr. Jones had gone to look at the still, and found that, although the fire had been kindled some time, no benzole nor oil was running. Getting somewhat alarmed, he sent the men away and attempted to clear the pipe connecting with the condenser, when the explosion occurred. The condensation apparatus was blown to pieces, and injury. On examination it was found that ice had formed above the water, probably from the condensation of steam, and had stopped up the connection between the still and the condenser.

JAMAICA.

No Further Disturbances on the Island

---One Hundred and Fifty Prisoners Still Held for Trial and Arrests

Going On—Qualified Approval of Governor Eyre's

Conduct by the British

Colonial Office—

Another Rebellion Scare.

The steamship Montezuma, from Kingston, Jamaica, Jan. 6, arrived at New York yesterday. No further disturbances had taken place on the island, though the harbors bristled with British gunboats and the troops have been further reinforced.

Christmas day, the date fixed in Jamaica, as in the Southern States, for an anticipated rising of the blacks, passed off with remarkable quietness.

Sir Henry Storks, appointed to succeed Mr. Eyre as Governor of the island during the progress of the commission of inquiry, had not yet arrived there, but was daily expected.

With the knowledge that Governor Eyre had been superseded, the colonial press had suddenly resumed its freedom of discussion and the hanging controversy hotly asserts that the alleged negro plot only existed in the panic-stricken imagination of the authorities.

The House of Assembly had brought its sitting to termination without any steps having been taken to enter into an inquiry as to the origin of the outbreak at Morant Bay.

A bill had been introduced into the Legislature authorizing the establishment of a "West India Manufacturing Company," to introduce manufactures into the island.

The Government had seized a quantity of cutlasses, and had forbidden their use as an implement of agriculture.

More than one hundred and fifty political prisoners, all in custody, and arrests of "rebels" had hardly yet ceased.

A special commission had been issued for the trial of the accused persons, and was announced to be convened they would be dealt with as if martial law still prevailed.

Mr. Sydney Levein, editor of the Jamaica country "Chronicle," had been released under a writ of habeas corpus, and had published an account of his sufferings.

Some other prominent citizens had also obtained their liberty by the same means.

The following significant paragraph, which appeared in Saturday's "Guardian," will go far to explain how and why the people there had been under threats, and that another rebellion was to be apprehended. The military were turned out of the island, and the hungry and homeless of a gentleman from this city were impressed.

Mr. Roach, who had been removed from the district prison under a writ of habeas corpus, was bundled to the island, and altogether were under the bitterest possible apprehensions. The military were marched off in the dead of the night to Serge Island, where they were confined, and the people covered that there was no fear of any rebellion, and that they had only been sent for in consequence of one of the usual disputes between the sailors and the officers of the ship.

In the House of Assembly, December 12, the following despatch was laid before the House: Downing Street, Nov. 17, 1855.—By the mail from the West Indies, the arrival of which did not take place till yesterday, I have the honor to receive from you a report of the 20th October reporting the breaking out of a rebellion of the negroes in Eastern districts of Jamaica, which has involved the cruel and bloody massacre of many of the white and colored persons in that part of the island, and acquainting me with the measures which in concert with the officers in command of the island, you have taken to suppress the insurrection and to prevent its spreading to other parts of the island.

I have been greatly shocked at the barbarities which you describe, and I wish you in the first place to inform the inhabitants of Jamaica how deeply her Majesty's government deprecates such a course, and how sincerely they sympathize with those who have to lament family bereavements incurred under circumstances so distressing.

I will not fail to bring under the notice of the Field Marshal Commanding in Chief and the Lords of the Admiralty the contents of your despatch, and the orders, rendered by Major Gen. O'Connor and Captain D'Horsey, R. N., and the other officers of the army and navy whom you mention, and of the measures which you have taken to suppress the insurrection, and I will do my best to secure that I receive the high, and I doubt not deserved commendation which you bestow upon the conduct of the Executive and the Committee, the Customs of Kingston, Inspector Ramsey of the police, the volunteer and militia officers who accompanied you in the olive-green. I recognize with satisfaction the measures which you have taken to suppress the insurrection, and I shall bring under Her Majesty's notice the loyal and gallant behavior of the Maroons.

E. CARDWELL, Gov. Eyre, &c.

The despatch was accompanied by the following message: The Governor has much pleasure in laying before the Legislature an extract from a despatch which he has received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies in reference to the late rebellion.

The Governor also takes this opportunity of acquainting the Legislature that so convinced are Her Majesty's government of the paramount importance of a strong government being at once constituted in Jamaica, that he has been confidentially informed, and which, under existing circumstances, he has not hitherto belonged to it, yet in a case in which the Crown's deprivation of power is incompatible with the welfare and even the safety of the colony, there would be no hesitation on the part of Her Majesty's Government to accept any amount of additional responsibility which circumstances might seem to require.

Under the press of the Legislature on the part of the Crown to devolve the responsibility of directing the affairs in Jamaica for the future the Government would respectfully invite the Legislature to amend the act recently passed to alter and amend the constitution as would leave Her Majesty unfettered in determining the mode in which the Government should be administered, and the machinery by which the business of the country is to be conducted.

The Western papers are complaining that it costs three bushels of corn to send one to market, a distance of one hundred miles, one hundred bushels to get a pair of boots, one thousand bushels to get a suit of clothes, and two tons of corn for a ton of coal.
