[For the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.]

Snow and Side-walks.

A pecuniary grievance has come upon me like the small pox or the scarlet fever. I can bear legitimate losses philosophically, such as the death of a horse, the passing away of a friend, or of a year's business that drew on the nest egg, or a speculation in oil which produced not according to the prognostications of the oily prospectus. I have done it. Under circumstances of varied fortune (and I have run through several) I have invariably indulged in this comforting soliloquy: "Health, energy, muscle, are all mine; and life—that's insured. Then why should I rave? It would make me hoarse. Why should I tear out my hair? It would end in further expenditure for a wig."

But it is a different thing to be bam, boozled out of one dollar and to see, feel, taste nothing as a substitute—the pro quo a barren desert—no bread, no butter, no amusement—vexation only—this it is which agitates a mind naturally sensitive.

It is quite right. Owners and occupants of property ought to clear the sidewalks of the leather-permeating snow. It makes our toes cold. How it must harrow the feelings of that generous man who clears his gutters to see how few of his neighbors do likewise.

I am a suburban inhabitant and live in a corner house. A policeman pulled our bell on Friday. We might save the expense of a warrant by removing the snow from our sidewalk. It is lamentable to think that one of my neighbors in the rear—he has never called on us, though in time, down in this vicinity, he takes precedence, if nothing else—entered the complaint, and his son was lucky enough to get the job of removing the objectionable snow!

1. The snow to be cleared from two hundred and twenty-five feet of sidewalk!—a side sidewalk too, upon which the feet of man or woman is never seen, and but seldom the feet of boys in boot-testing wantonness seeking the roughest way; boys in thick cowhide boots, and pants tucked in like a fireman, or less fortunate boys, in boots dilapidated and scanty pants, alike regardless of penetrating slop, and wet socks (if any); boys who for three or four squares before touching our pavement have, it kept to our side, stumbled over interminable piles of filth and ashes and flopped into the intervening valleys of besplashing slush!

As I sit in my "study"—my legs in easy horizontal—puffing a splendid Havana (poetical truth, though I never smoke), the smoke curling and circling about my head, and I fall into sweet and placid reveries, and the smoke curls and circles up around the head of the statuette Minerva, until in the general dreaminess I cannot decide whether her hair is done up in waterfall or otherwise, and my eyes wander out of the verandah window and down the animated street, where ladies and gentlemen and children are coming up and going down, always walking in the middle of the street like the inhabitants of Marblehead, in Massachusetts, or those of many European towns and cities where the side walks are eighteen inches wide and paved with corn-provoking cobble-stones.

Having recently paid a dollar to clear a walk which nobody uses, I make up my mind that something ought to be done by somebody, towards removing the feathery deposits from two whole squares of sidewalk directly, on the way to the railway, that takes unwilling suburbans "up town," and over which everybody would like to travel, and nobody ever does, on account of the slush in the melting time, and the ice in the ruder snaps. Then, I say, thinking of ashes and rubbish one sees on every street, is this Philadelphia? No! no! Let us go up to Fifth and Chestnut cheerfully. We are respectfully referred to the Chief of Police. "Hail to the Chief!" Well, there was comfort in his reference (for every official has his reference. Think of their documents without that antique endorsement "respectfully referred"). "To the Commissioner of City Property. A complaint," said the Chief, "coming from a citizen may have more effect than from me." Did he inwardly think that the effect would, on the whole, be about the same? "You can do," said he, "what I cant; you can sue the city." "Yes," thought I, "I can; but I won't." My way was up a winding stair. (Circumlocution offices usually are. It takes longer to get round.) Commissioner out of town. I found his substitute already agitated about other city sidewalks; surrounded by superintendents of parks, who were brushing the slush from their boots or resting from the fatigues of bossing the men who cleared the walks; wondering when they were likely to get pay for a job "which there wern't no 'propriation for."

"Where are the sidewalks?"

"The Parade ground."

"Oh, that's out of town! We have all we can do to take care of the walks in this part of the city."

"In Philadelphia, isn't it? Pay taxes down town, don't we?". (I inhabit—not own.)

"Not much."

"Oh! I fancied we did. However, allow me to inquire if there is any sense in the city compelling me to clear my sidewalk when she neglects to clear her own?"

"What can we do? There's no appropriation."

"Nor propriety. There ought to be."

"I know it."

"At least, the policemen ought to have instructions giving them discretionary power. The idea of clearing a walk which nobody uses! There was no appropriation, but the job had to be done."

"It's bad—very bad indeed. I can't do anything; I'm already out of pocket several fractional papers for labor of a similar nature performed about these very buildings, for which, if you'll pardon an official expression, there wasn't any appropriation."

"Ha, ha, ha! Ha!

We can't do anything about the matter here. I tell you what you do—complain in your own Ward."

"Much obliged to you, but I shan't do that. Nothing to be got out of that operation. If there's no appropriation at Fifth and Chestnut, there's none in my Ward. I came here from the Mayor's office and now I'm going back the Mayor's office. My business is not remarkably pressing just at present. Therefore, take notice," (and I took an imposing position in the doorway,) "so long as I am compelled to clear off my side sidewalk which nobody ever uses, so long as I am obliged to avoid sidewalks along the city property which everybody would gladly use, nobody care for the slush—just so long shall I bang at this office or some other." I walked into Third street.

HOWLET.

SERIOUS STABBING AFFRAY IN CINCINNATI.—On Saturday evening, the office of the Planters' Hotel, on Broadway, near Third, Cincinnati, was the scene of a desperate affray between a young man named B. S. Hine, one of the proprietors of the hotel, and his partner, an elderly man, named W. S. Knott. The quarrel had its origin in a wordy warfare as to the character of a woman who was stopping at the house. Knott pronounced her a strumpet, while Hine contended that she was a respectable married lady. In the course of the dispute Knott called Hine several harsh names, whereupon the latter pulled his whiskers. The two then clinched, and, in the course of the hand-to-hand struggle which ensued, Hine drew a stiletto, with which he was armed, and stabbed his antagonist twice in the bowels, inflicting wounds which will soon prove fatal. Shortly after the occurrence, Hine proceeded to the Hammond street police station and surrendered himself to Lieutenant McGrew.

Patent Truffles.

"Spiridion," the sprightly correspondent of the Boston Evening Gazette, tells the following story of a French Yankee trick:

Let Connecticut rend its clothes, fill its hair with ashes, sit in sackcloth, bury itself in bunches of onions—a Frenchman has wrought a greater miracle than making nutmegs out of elm-wood. He has given us truffles seventy-five per cent. below the rates current at Perigueux, which is, you know, the Newcastle of this black diamond of the dinner table. There isn't a truffle-finder in all Perigueux who will consent to part with this edible cryptogam for less than two dollars and a half a pound for prime, two dollars for second best, and one dollar and sixty cents for small bulbs. These prices few of us can afford to pay, especially those whose incomes have to run the gauntlet of exchange—that fatal race in which dollars leave America containing one hundred cents and reach here wan, pale, exhausted, with only sixty-seven centsstowed away between their head and tail! It has been at least five winters that I flattened my nose and cast sheep's eyes through Vero Dodat's window coveting possession of the truffled hog's feet so daintily lolling in the white dishes beyond the translucent barrier which separated meum from tuum. Ardent as my desires were, they have been platonic, for truffles were quite out of my reach. But I hope this week to enjoy those savory dishes, for, as I have said, a Frenchman has discovered the art of procuring truffles seventy-five cents below the market quotations. My hopes miscarried, and my love for truffles, like many another of my loves, is an unhappy love. The police have arrested and lodged in jail the benefactor of people with tastes of gourmands and the purses of wandering Jews. Give a dog a bad name—you can cap the saw—they gave this man the very bad name of swindler, and might might as well have hung him for all the good he will do us hereafter. He had observed and mourned the high prices of truffles and determined to abate them by pressing with all the power of his genius on the supply. He knew that if the supply increased beyond the demand, prices must fall. Make pearls as common as oysters, you can buy your dozen for twelve cents. His first efforts were directed to open a conscription in fields of black turnips to draft their skins into an army of truffles. He was so successful he was obliged to abandon this scheme. Everybody went to buy his truffles and his sales were so great he found himself literally buried under the turnips he had flayed. He could not sell all of them; peddlers looked with suspicion on turnips which had undergone this surgical operation. In fine, the magnitude of his operations was fatal to his success. He consequently looked around to discover something which should be of as black color and be all skin. He judiciously gave no thought to digestion, as everybody knows nothing but an ostrich considers truffles of easy digestion—and ostriches don't go to market this side of Sahara. After many sleepless nights and feverish days and countless experiments, he hit upon black merino, which would be perfect were it less easy of digestion. He at once proceeded to transform it into truffles. A pair of delicate scissors was his magical wand. He, with it, pared and carved the merino until it looked unmistakably like a truffle. Did you ever see a truffled hog's foot? The porcine tribe has no more tempting avatar. It is the collection of all the tit bits of the feet and legs stripped off the bones and delicately hashed into a homogenous mass, which is properly seasoned, and then wrapped in a portion of the cuticle which covers the fat of the hog, and which is so thin it is transparent except where it is veined with snowy fat. Under this transparent envelope very thin slices of truffles are slipped to perfume the whole "foot" with that peerless scent. The magician who transformed merino into truffles was a pork-butcher; his business greatly increased and his customers were unanimously of opinion that finer truffles had never been eaten. Unfortunately he sold one of these feet to a haberdasher who detected the truffles to be only merino at fifty cents a yard, and complained to the police. Search was made in the pork-butcher's house, and the truth discovered.

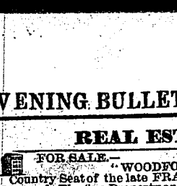
MEDICAL.



AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, for the RAPID CURE OF COUGHS, COLDS, INFLUENZA, HOARSENESS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION, and for the Relief of CONSUMPTIVE PATIENTS IN ADVANCED STAGES OF THE DISEASE.

So wide is the field of its usefulness and so numerous are the cases of its cures that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other expectorant is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produces cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

We can only assure the public that its quality is carefully kept up to the best it has ever been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all that it has ever done.

Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of our remedies, but space here will not permit the insertion of them. The Agents below named furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC, in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the complaints they cure.

Those who require an alterative medicine to purify the blood, will find AYER'S COMP. EXT. SARSAPARILLA the remedy to use. Try it once, and you will know its value.

Prepared by J. C. AYRE & CO., Lowell, Mass., and sold by J. M. MARIS & CO., Philadelphia, and by all Druggists. ja16-m,w,s,2m

ORAL DENTALLINA.

A superior article for cleaning the Teeth, destroying animalculæ which infest them, giving tone to the gums, and leaving a feeling of fragrance and perfect cleanliness in the mouth. It may be used daily, and will be found to strengthen weak and bleeding gums, while the aroma and detersiveness will recommend it to every one. Being composed with the assistance of the Dentist, Physician and Microscopist, it is confidently offered as a RELIABLE substitute for the uncertain washes formerly in vogue.

Eminent Dentists, acquainted with the constituents of the DENTALLINA, advocate its use; it contains nothing to prevent its unrestrained employment.

RIGHTS FOR SALE.

It is one of the most useful inventions for domestic use ever offered to the public. The flour is sifted in one-quarter the time (and much better than by any other process) by putting the flour in the top of the Sifter, then, by turning the crank, the flour passes through the sieve with great rapidity. Clean, very fine and light. This Sifter has no India rubber rollers to grind up the dirt, such as bugs, worms, flies, &c., but sifts all articles and leaves the dirt remaining in the sieve; the Sifter is made of tin, is very neat and easy to keep clean. It is the only Sifter now in use that gives SATISFACTION. Every Sifter is warranted. Be sure and ask for Spencer's Patent Tin Sifter.

☞ Wholesale trade supplied on reasonable terms. Samples sent to any address on receipt of $1 00.
