A Tale of a Dog-

We know a very worthy family residing near Germantown that was lately the possessor of a dog that is a character. Billy, for such is his name, belongs to the poodle species. He is not such a poodle as lolls about on cushions, eats custard, nestles in ladies' laps and barks querulously and constantly at everything and nothing. Billy is made of sterner stuff, and he is a perfect canine disciple of Demosthenes in respect to his fondness for action, action, action! The young men of the family afforded Billy a fair field for the exercise of his restless qualities, and when he was commissioned to do an errand he never stopped for the formality of opening a gate; but he would clear thegarden fence at a bound and dash off to do the bidding of those who sent him. Billy would go to the store of an errand. taking written orders for what was wanted and the money to pay for it, and he never failed to do his errand faithfully and intelligently. He went to Germantown regularly for the evening paper, and we presume that he would have been too sharp to have a yesterday's paper foisted upon him, or to have put up with any other sheet than the Bul-LETIN. Billy was always on the lookout for the interests of the family in which he was dominiled. When visitors came to the house he could tell with half an eye who were respectable and trustworthy, and he paid no further attention to them except to skylark with them, if they desired it, or to play dog tricks for their amusement. But let a beggar or a suspicious looking individual come about the place and Billy was another dog; he made no unnecessary fuss about it, but discreetly dogged the intruder from place to place with an air and a manner which declared almost as plainly as though he had said it: "I know your tricks. and I mean to keep an eye on you; so the sooner you take yourself off the better for all parties."

Billy was of course a great favorite with the boys of the neighborhood and he participated in all their out-door amusements with the most refreshing wim and spirit. Even in such sports as "coasting" Billy was foremost among the foremost. Furnish him with a sled, and mounting upon it he would go down the hill merrily and when he reached the bottom he would seize the rope between his teeth and away he would caper to the top of the hill to join again his fellow coasters on another and another descent to the bottom.

But Billy has become dissipated; he has turned "fire-sharp;" he runs "wid der macheen," and instead of being the denizen of a quiet mansion, he "bunks" fat the engine-house. Deserting his old friends, he has been led away by the fascinations of the fire company to which he has attached himself, and while he maintains friendly relations with his old friends by paying them occasional visits, he has taken up his permanent abode at the engine-house. Billy has an eye to the advantages of personal embellishment, and he frisks about and wags his tail at a wonderful rate whenever he is treated to a new collar, an oil skin cape, a red shirt, or any other personal ornament of a fireman cast. On such occasions he always dashes off to his old friends to show them his new finery, and he makes no secret of the pride which he feels in the display. Within a few days he made his appearance gotten up in most stunning style and evincing a corresponding degree of the most animated delight. His firemen cronies had developed his moustache and eye-brows by a judicious application of rezor and soissors: these hirsute appendages were dyed a jetty black; his tail had received adainty pink tint, and his long lapping ears were of a brilliant solferino hue. To the critical eve Billy presented as ridiculous a figure as a lady with a gigantic water-fall attached to the rear of her head and with a trail of costly materials sweeping up the dirt of the side walk. But Billy, keen as he is in general, failed to appreciate the absurdity of his appearance and after showing off his finery to his old friends, he promenaded back to Germantown "as proud as a dog with two tails." After all there is a good deal in common between human nature and canine nature, and Billy is a distinguished exponent of that fact.

CITY BULLETIN.

There was not only a "sound" of "revelry," last evening, at the Academy of Music, but the absolute reality was experienced by several thousands of "the beauty and the chivalry" of Philadelphia. The concourse was drawn together in honor of "La Coterie Carnival," which took place then and there, and it certainly, without qualification, was the grandest bal masque ever given in this city. The Academy was beautifully arranged for the occasion, the decorations were extremely tasteful, and the musical portion of the festival, being under the charge of Mr. Birgfald and other able conductors it can readily feld and other able conductors, it can readily be seen that that part of the entertainmen was really superb. We could have wished that the weather had been superb also, but it was not. In fact it was direfully slushy and the carpet laid from the carriage-way to the door of the Academy was decidedly pleasant innovation. Every one has me story to tell of the difficulties of reaching Broad and Locust streets and of the passage through the crowd which thronged about the door; but once inside, the ladies could settle their plumage with com-fort and the gentlemen could restore the pristine polish of their boots in the course of a few minutes. Proceeding from the "tiring a few minutes. Proceeding from the "tiring rooms" and looking towards the stage, from the balcony, the scene presented was one of genuine splendor. The vast building showed sea of faces; wherever a seat could be a sea of faces; wherever a seat could be obtained it was occupied, from the parquet circle to the amphitheatre, while the parquet, which had been floored over on a level with the stage, was thronged with a concourse of hundreds of ladies and gentlemen in the most brilliant, grotesque, odd, quaint, outré and absurd costumes. Gold gleamed, jewels flashed, bright eyes sparkled, white shoulders looked like Parian marble, and soft voices murmured like the ripnling of a soft voices murmured like the rippling of a hundred brooks in summer. To add to the enchantment of the scene the piercing meenchantment of the scene the piercing me-lody of scores of canaries, whose cages decorated the house, rang from parquet to roof, the merry birds seeming to be intoxi-cated with the light, the music, and the hum

It is difficult to describe a ball, or any other merely social entertainment, and "La Coterie Carnival" was like others in respect to the flirtations, the triumphs, the jea lousies, the torments of the coat room, &c. dc., &c. It was, however, badly managed in some respects. For instance: There should have been no confusion or tumult at the principal door; there should have been arrangements which would have been satisfactory in the "eating department," and more care should have been shown in the disposal of tickets. The bounty-jumping and pickpocketing fraternity still flourish and their representatives appeared "in full feather" at this entertainment. We make the suggestion for the future use of Messrs. Abel & Risley, the chief spirits of the ball. In regard to the costumes we have nothing to say save unqualified praise. No such dressing has been seen, within our recollection, in this city, and we doubt whether such splendid costuming has ever been known in the United States. A mere glance at the various dresses of prominence would have occupied the gazer half of the night, while his attention would have been in constant danger of distraction, by reason of the other delights of the festival.

Union Temporary Home for Chil-DREN -The annual meeting of the contriday afternoon. The report of the managers state, though the accommodations are all on a liberal scale, and the children as healthy and contented as could be, yet the institu-tion, from lack of means, is able to do but a tithe of what is demanded from it. In one single month fifty needy applicants have had their children rejected solely through want of funds to provide a larger building, and they have gone away dispirited and sorrowing, During the year 1865 sixty-five children were admitted. There are now in the Home sixty-three—boys, twenty; girls, forty-three. Their health has been excellent and none have died during the past year. In the last five years only one child has died in this institution.

DEATH OF AN OLD CITIZEN.-Mr. George Ord, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Philadelphia, died at his resi-dence, in Front street, above Catharine, on the 24th instant, aged eighty-four years. Mr. Ord lived in the house in which he died from the time of his birth, and at his decease the family mansion remained as he knew it in his boyhood days, no change whatever having taken place in it. nor had any article of furniture been removed. He was for a long time President of the Academy of Natural Sciences, which position he resigned some years ago, by reason of his increasing age, and he was an active and much respected member of the American Philosophical Society, and of other scientific and literary associations in this country and LARCENY OF MOLASSES. -Before Alderman Beitler yesterday afternoon, James McArdle, a drayman, was charged with the larceny of fourteen hogsheads of molasses, valued at $115 per hosghead, the property of White, Brother & Co., and McBride & Co., Nos. 310 and 312 South Delaware avenue. The hogsheads were missed on the 12th of December last, and eight of them were recovered at a vinegra cestablish. them were recovered at a vinegar establish-ment in the lower part of the city. It was testified to that Mr. Horans had purchased five hogsheads from one of the firms, but the other eight had not been paid for. Several draymen, under the superintendence of the prisoner, testified that they had been instructed to haul the hogsheads to the establishment. lishment by McArdle. The accused was committed in default of $2,500 bail.

BOOTS AND SHOES WANTED .- There has been very great suffering among the freed-men in Tennessee, and other mountain dis-tricts for want of shoes. It was resolved at a meeting of the Finance Committee of the Woman's Penna. Bruch of the American Freedmen's Aid Commission, to apply to each of the dealers in boots and shoes of this city for donations in kind. The Committee earnestly hope for a liberal response. Men's, women's, children's shoes, odd pairs, old jashioned or imperfect stock will be grate-fully received. The Freedmen's Rooms, 418 fully received. The Freedmen's Rooms, 410 Walnut street, are daily open from 11 A. M., till 2 P. M., to receive goods or subscriptions. Any donation of shoes made in answer to this notice, will be immediately cknowledged in the public press.

Ashland.—From the Lexington (Ky.) Observer and Reporter, we learn that "Ashland," so long the home of Henry Clay, has been purchased by the Trustees of the Kentucky University, at a cost of $90,000. The farm contains about three hundred and twenty-five agrees of the best land in the twenty-five acres of the best land in the Blue-grass region of Kentucky. The Kentucky Agricultural School, which is under the patronage of the State, as well as the other schools of the University, will be established at "Ashland," and it is proposed to begin the improvements on a most extended and magnificent scale. A greater portion of the farm will be devoted to experimental farming, as the best and most effectual means of securing to the students of the Agricultural School a thorough knowledge of practical farming.

LA COTERIE BLANCHE.—The grand hop of La Coterie Blanche will be given at the Academy of Music on the 7th of February next. The management of the affair ha been placed in the hands of gentlemen who are thoroughly competent to make it a suc-cess, and another brilliant scene, such as was witnessed last evening on the occasion of the Coterie Carnival, may be expected.

THE GREAT BALL.—The topic of the day, a well as of yesterday, is the "Garnival" at the Academy of Music. New Jersey Matters. BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS. About fourteen years ago, the introduction of these useful institutions was met with or these useful institutions was met with many predictions of failure. The experiment was tried, however, with what success is attested by the addition of more than a hundred houses to our city. To-day, those who were renters twelve and fourteen years ago, occupy their own houses; and would be tonents still but for building and be tenants still, but for building and loan associations. The acquisition of real estate is not the only advantage they afford. Those owning shares, and able to give proper security, can procure capital to com-mence or enlarge business; and when the institution winds up, the debt is paid. In either case, the payments, being paid monthly in small sums, are scarcely felt. Aside from this, they answer all the purposes of a savings bank to those who have no immediate use for money. We have two, if not three associations of this kind in Camden in operation now. The Franklin is a continuation of the one started about thirteen years since, which wound up its affairs so satisfactorily, that the old share-holders immediately formed another with the same title. It will soon complete its third year; and although the premiums do not come up to those of the past, the average sales are quite encouraging. Poor men could ask no better facilities for se-

ATLANTIC CITY .- Early last fall operations were commenced at Atlantic city for build-ing a number of new and fine residences, most of which were of the cottage style, and for private uses. But since that time mea-sures have been taken to increase the improvements there to a very large extent. Contracts for several hotels, and upwards of fifty private dwelling houses have already been made, and other buildings are like-wise to be erected for various purposes. At the corner of Atlantic and North Carolina avenues, the Misses Lee, of the Mansion House, have given a fine lot of ground to the Episcopal congregation, on which a tasteful and commodious church edifice will be erected. Efforts are being made to reconsolidate the city into one ward, the permanent citizens believing such a condition would better facilitate the municipal regulations and government thereof. Altogether, the coming spring will be a very active one in the building line,

ANOTHER RAILROAD PROJECT .-- A number of New York gentlemen interested in the Raritan Delaware Bay Railroad, are endeavoring to obtain a charter authorizing the continuance of that track from Jackson Junction to the Delaware river, at Pennsgrove or Pennsville. This scheme has been before the New | Jersey Legislature on several occasions, but it has not yet been anthorized, and it is not likely that it will be this winter.

NEWSPAPER REMOVAL.—The South Jersey Republican, the Organ of the Union party of Atlantic county, will soon be re-moved from Absecom village to Hammonton, where Mr. Snow, its proprietor, intends to locate it permanently. This journal has done good service for the Union cause, and deserves liberal support.

BEAR CAPTURED.—The citizens in the vicinity of Smithville, Atlantic county, had rare sport a few days ago, in chasing and capturing a bear, in one of the numerous swamps in that vicinity. Old Bruin fought bravely, but was soon outflanked and had to yield.

Union LEAGUE ROUMS.—The rooms of the Union League at Fourth and Federa streets, are handsomely fitted up and supplied with the various papers and docu-ments of the day. Since its formation this League has worked a wonderful revolution in the politics of Camden city and county.

CRIMINAL CASES.—The courts for Cam len county, which during the present week have been engaged in disposing of the appeal cases, will resume the criminal business of the term on Tuesday next.

The Parisites are not very particular in the matter of beef. A girl named Leonard found a hundred dollar bill the other day while sorting over stock. Several bills of smaller denomination had previously been discovered. It is suggested that the bills were originally is-

On Christmas day, while the congregation were attending Divine service in Dudley Church, England, a heavy piece of iron was thrown through one of the new orna mental windows upon the north side of the edifice. Such attempt at introducing missals into the Episcopal church should be prompt v put down. A recent Court Circular mentions that

Her Royal Highness Princess Beatrice attended service at Whippingham church. It speaks badly for the discipline of the Queen's family when they resort to whip ping-'em on Sunday.

Death of Frederika Bremer. Yesterday's European steamer reports the death of Frederika Bremer, the Swedish novelist, one of the best known women of the century. She was born in 1802, on the banks of the Aura, near Abo, in Finland. Her family, which was wealthy, removed into Sweden when she was about three years old. She was carefully educated spent a year in Paris, and was afterwards teacher in a female seminary in Stockholm. In 1842 her novel "The Neighbors" was translated into English by Mary Howitt, pub-lished in England, and immediately became popular. Subsequently Mrs. Howitt translated "The Home," "The Diary," "The H. Family," "The President's Daughter," Family," "The President's Daughter,"
"Nina," "Brothers and Sisters," "Life in Dalecarlia," and "The Midnight;" all of which were republished in America, and widely circulated. In 1850-51, Miss Bremer visited America, and was very warmly welcomed. She had previously traveled widely on the continent of Europe and in England. On her return from the United England. On her return from the United States, she published a book made up of letters to her sister, entitled "Homes of the New World," which appeared simultaneously in Sweden, England, and America. "England in 1851," appeared at Altona in 1852. In 1856 she wrote "Hortha," in 1858 "Father and Daughter," and after a residence in the South of Europe she published in 1860 "Two Years in Switzerland and Italy." This was followed by a journey to the Holy Land, whence she returned by way of Turkey and Greece, and in the latter country prepared her books on the Holy Land and Turkey. At the time of her death she was residing in

Miss Bremer will be very generally re-gretted in the United States, where her books are widely read, and where she made many personal friends during her visit. The most complete edition of her works was published at Leipsic in 20 vols., from 1841 to 1853; and many of them have been translated into German. French, and Dutch, as well as into English.
