WELCOME, 195TH. WELCOME. 1957H.

Let us welcome the warriors who have returned,
With faces all bronzed and with laurels well earned;
And in memory dear we should all cherish those Who have fought for their country and beat back its

At last they've returned, and we welcome at last The battle scarred warriors who stood by us fast,
Who bravely endured and with unsurpassed might,
Fought so well for the cause of their country and right. And now every place which once gladdened their eyes,
Or rendezvous which in years passed they did prize, Should shed forth its charms and its splendor anew, And in joyfulness welcome our "brave boys in blue." Now the wern suit of blue in which death they've dened, They can lay by with honor and speak of in pride, And soon to their country all citizens true, Can in garments of fashion attire anew. And that all may be dressed at a moderate price, we will venture to offer a "word of advice," And say to the soldiers returned from the war, That fashion and cheapness and style's at the "STAB. But beware of those runners by clothing stores sent, Who get for their services fifty per cent.; For on no condition would the "STAR" such employ,

Or by any low trickery soldiers decoy. Boware of runners! who receive from 25 to 50 per cent, for their services in decoying soldiers, but come to the Star, where low prices and fair treatment await you. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1866.

THE NEW AMENDMENT. The proposed amendment to the Constitution, modified by the Reconstruction Committee, was taken up in the House yesterday and, after a brief debate, was adopted by the handsome vote of 120 yeas to 46 nays. In its modified form it reads as follows:

"Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed; provided, that whenever the elective franchise shall be denied or abridged in any State on account of race or color, all persons therein of such race or color shall be excluded from the basis of representation."

The alteration of the original proposition made by the Committee consists in leaving out all reference to the subject of direct taxes. In its present shape the amendment only refers to the basis of State representation in the lower house of Congress. It is substantially such an amendment as the President suggested in a recent conversation, a report of which was published.

This question of representation must be settled with reference to the new condition of affairs at the South since the abolition of slavery. Under the apportionment of the census of 1860, the Southern States are entitled to certain members on account of their slave population. But that population is no longer in slavery, and therefore the apportionment ought not to exist any longer. At the same time, if the whole population were taken as the basis of representation, South Carolina, which has less than 300,000 white inhabitants, would have more representatives than Maine, which has about 600,000; for South Carolina would be entitled to full representation for her 400,000 negroes, to whom she denies nearly all civil rights, and whom she would like to keep still in a condition of virtual slavery. The only proper way to correct this make the voting population the basis of representation, and the proposed amendment adopted by the House simply provides for this. By adopting this method over the suffrage question in the several State, which is precisely what President sition to the amendment, of course, especially from the Democratic politicians, who would like to use for their party purposes the freedmen of the South, trict was invoked by citizens of another the south of the s uniting with the Southern politicians, using the disfranchised negroes as their chief corner stone. But they will failin their design if this amendment is adopted. It will then remain for each State to say whether it will have a represen tation of the whole or only a part of its population. We hope the Senate will act promptly on the amendment, f o that it may be submitted to the vario as State Legislatures now in session be fore they adjourn.

"THE DEAD OF THE NATION." There is a singular fat ality by which many public men atta'ch to themselves particular phrases, v/hich, uttered in a moment, are associated with their names forever. Mr. R'aymond, of New York, has been dou'nly fortunate in this respect, for he will hereafter rejoice in the ownership of two phrases, from which his public reputation will reap a very unpleasant fame. "The elbows of the Mincio," that wonderful strategic expression which the New York Times invented in describing the battle of Solferino, sticks most tenaciously to Mr. Raymond, in his editorial relations, although the real author of it was one of his assistant editors, Mr. Hurlbert. In Mr. Raymond's elaborate speech, on Monday, in opposition to the Amendment to the Constitution, he pronounced the boldest eulogium upon the rebellion which has yet been heard on the floor of Congress. The peroration of his speech closes with these words:-

speech closes with these words:—

"The gigantic contest is at an end; the courage and devotion on either side, which made it so terrible and so long, no longer owe a divided duty, but have become the common property of the American name, the priceless possession of the American Republic, through all time to come. The dead of the contending hosts sleep beneath the soil of a common country, under their common flag; their hostilities are hushed, and they are the dead of the nation forevermore."

Language like this from Garret Davis, or Saulsbury, from Brooks or Voorhees, would not surprise anybody. It is the language which they have learned in their long affiliation with Southern politicians and would sound very natural from their lips. But Mr. Raymond, widely as he seems to have drifted from the position he once occupied, broadly as he has separated himself from those who sent him to Congress, is so new, as yet, to his Democratic associations, that few will read these words of his without astonishment. We do not always endorse all that Mr.

Stevens says and does in Congress, but we heartily approve the castigation which he administered to Mr. Raymond yesterday. It is an insult to the whole North to have such sentiments proclaimed in our National Legislature and they richly deserve the caustic rebuke which they have received. How are we to expect the South to repent of her crimes while Northern men elected by Republican votes are thus thrusting their plenary absolution upon her in advance? Why should the South call the rebellion wrong, when men like Mr. Raymond take such pains to gloss over its iniquity and to exalt its actors and agents to the grand level of the heroes who died for the preservation of the Union? We want no such .hollow reconstruction as this. We want a Union which shall forever recognize the immeasureable gulf which yawns between those who were for and those who were against us; between those who gathered with us and those who scattered abroad. Mr. Stevens did not exaggerate the audacity of this amalgamating doctrine of Mr. Raymond when he said: "If the loyal dead who are thus associated with the traitors who murdered them, put by the gentleman on the same footing with them, to be treated as the common dead of the nation, I say, sir, if they could have heard the gentleman they would have broken the cerements of the tomb and stalked forth and haunted him until his eye-balls were seared." In what noble contrast with Mr. Raymond's apology for the soldiers of the Rebellion, are the immortal words of Abraham Lincoln, at the dedication of the cemetery at Gettysburg: "It is rather for us to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that the government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth." THE CHESTNUT STREET BRIDGE. Our citizens should be gratified to learn that the Supreme Court of the United States has decided that our Chestnut street bridge need not betaken down, nor built at an impossible height, nor be encumbered with a draw, which would impair, if it did not destroy its usefulness.

Strange as it may seem, we were seriously threatened with some one of these calamities. It may excite a smile with the citizens of Philadelphia to learn that it was solemnly asserted and argued that neither the city nor the State could lawfully bridge the Schuylanomalous condition of affairs is to kill river. True, the State had authorized the dam at Fairmount, and the bridges at Callowhill street, and Market street; but when she undertook to go a square further down, and erect a bridge Congress waives all claim to control at Chestnut street, a storm of opposition was raised. First came the bills in our States, and leaves it to be settled by each own Supreme Court, by Pennsylvanians interested in the navigation of the river, Johnson desires. There will be oppo- and by the Port Wardens. These being whom they despise so intensely. They would like to build up their party by Judge Grier, they appealed to the Supreme Court at Washington, and this case it was which was argued some six W' .eks since, and which was decided in ur favor last Monday. Strange as it may seem to us, that the constitutionality of the State Lawshould ever be questioned, we may regard ourselves as fortunate in escaping the adverse decision which compelled the Wheeling Bridge to apply for Congressional aid. The Albany Bridge case, argued last winter, was sustained by a tie vote of the Judges, and in our Philadelphia case three members of the Court, Justices Clifford, Wayne and Davis, dissented from their brethren.

The thanks of our citizens are due to the Law Department, which has watched our interests in this behalf with so much zeal and success. F. Carroll Brewster, Esq., City Solicitor, conducted the case on behalf of the city, and his success against an array of brilliant counsel is one of which he may well be proud.

DRAINAGE.

There must be some radical defect in a system of drainage which permits the streets of a great city to be in the plight that our own thoroughfares are in at present, and that they are usually in during the winter season. We are not enough of engineers to suggest any practical remedy for the evil; but common sense points to under-ground drainage, where the water-courses would not be liable to the action of frost and would he freer from the contingencies which lead to choking up than surface drainage. It may seem strange, but it is none the less true, that the policy of the city authorities is directed to the discouragement of cleanliness and decency in this respect. Very many modern built dwellings are supplied with underground drains, which convey all the waste water from the kitchen, bath room, &c., directly to the culvert. Houses thus furnished may be known by the tidiness of the sidewalks in front of them, by the absence of ice and slush in winter, and the lack of water and slop in summer; upon the other hand, citizens who have not the advantage of private drains to their houses, and who are careless in the use of water in winter, generally have their pavements and gutters covered with ice in winter, to the great annoyance of all pedestrians and the constant peril of the limbs of passers by. A stranger who was not familiar with our municipal regulations, and who should witness this condition of things, would at once infer that the tidy citizen was encouraged in his tidinecs, while the slovenly housekeeper would be expected to pay some penalty for his disregard of private decency and public comfort; but therein the stranger would show his ignorance of Philadelphia municipal tactics. The fact is, the drainless citizen escapes scotiree, paying nothing to the city treasury for the covering of the side walks and choking the gutters with ice, while the man who has a drain to his house has to pay a yearly mulct because he conveys the waste water directly into the culvert instead of allowing it to run over the ground and find its way to the sewer inlet! This discrimination against private decency and public spirit may seem strange, but it is none the less true. We repeat that there are radical defects in our entire system of drainage that engineering skill should remedy.

gineering skill should remedy.
