SENATE.-Mr. Trumbull (Ill.) called up the bill for the protection of all persons in the enjoyment of their civil rights. Mr. Dayis (Ky.) took the floor, in continu-ation of the speech commenced yesterday, and offered an amendment to strike out the first section of the bill, and insert a provision that the citizens of one State shall be entitled to be citizens of the several States, &c. Mr. Trumbull replied to Mr. Davis's speech, saying Mr. Davis had characterized the bill as monstrous, intolerable and unconstitutional, simply because it declared that all men should be equal in the enjoyment of their rights. It was not a bill for the benefit of black men, nor the benefit of white men; but it simply proposed to break down the barriers which heretofore have denied civil rights to the black man. It had nothing to do with political rights, nor did it confer the right of suffrage, but it simply gave secured rights, guaranteed by the adoption of the constitutional amendment.

Mr. Guthrie (Ky.) did not think the bill was warranted by the Constitution nor by sound policy. The pretence for the bill was the adoption of the constitutional amendment. He could not see the benefit of any such bill. Slavery was abolished, and a laws relating to slavery were abolished with it, and he would advise the people of all the States where slavery formerly existed to put the emancipated slaves upon an equality with the whites as to civil rights, and they would do so without this bill.

Mr. Hendricks moved to strike out the ninth section of the bill, which empowers the President to use the army and navy when necessary to prevent the violation and did not believe this bill as dangerous as the Freedmen's Bureau bill, because it opened the Courts for the settlement of questions arising under it. It had a sting in its tail, however, which he proposed to remove by striking out the last section.

P.Mr. Lane (Ind.) spoke in favor of the bill.

He had heard Senators on the other side de-nounce this measure, but he had not heard them say anything against the Fugitive Slave law, from which it was drawn. He stood by every provision of it, and endorses it all. He believed every provision fit to be justified by the second clause of the consti tutional amendment. Mr. Wilson replied to Mr. Guthrie's remarks. Mr. Guthrie had said that freedmen ought to have civil rights, yet six of the Southern States had passed labor laws which the military authorities had been compelled to set aside. He referred to Gen. Grant's late order for the protection of colored persons, and said he was sure it was issued with the approval of the President.

Mr. Cowan rose to protest against the doctrine that it was justifiable to substitute the military authorities for the writ of error or the certiorari. To do so was to make this Government a military despotism. The bill before the Senate did not propose only to abolish slave codes. It proposed to abolish all State laws making distinctions between white men and black men. He denied the power of Congress to repeal such State laws as were confined to the relations of the citizens of the States for themselves.

Mr. Trumbull replied again to the arguments urged against the bill. Mr. Guthrie ments urged against the bill. Mr. Guthrie had said that it was his opinion the slave laws were abolished with the abolition of slavery. If all persons thought with Mr. Guthrie, there would be no security for such a bill, but it was evident from what the Southern legislatures had done lately, that there was necessity for such a law. Mr. Saulsbury moved an adjournment which was voted down.

The question was then taken on Mr. Hendrick's amendment, and it was rejected -ayes 12, nays 24.
The vote was then taken on Mr. Davis'

The vote was then taken on Mr. Davis amendment, and it was negatived.

Mr. Saulsbury moved to amend, by inserting after the words "civil rights" the words "except the right to vote."

Mr. Trumbull hoped Mr. Saulsbury would not insist on his amendment; voting was a political right, and the bill only referred to civil rights. The amendment was therefore wivil rights. The amendment was therefore unnecessary.

Mr. Saulsbury was confident that if the bill passed it would be decided by Republican courts that the negro had the right to vote under it. He could not differ with the judge who so decided. The right to vote was a civil right, and could be construed in no other way. He called for the yeas and nays on the adoption of his amendment.

Mr. Norton offered an amendment, which was adopted, striking out a clause in the seventh section as follows: "And in case of the escape of the person for whose arrest such warrant or process was issued, shall moreover forfeit and pay, by way of civil damages, to the party claiming to have been aggrieved by his act, the sum of $1,000, to be recovered by action of debt in any of the Courts aforesaid, within whose jurisdiction the said offence may have been committed." SECTION 1. That all persons born in the United States, not subject to any foreign power, excluding Indians not taxed, are hereby declared to be citizens of the United States, without any distinction of color, and there shall be no discrimination in civil rights or immunities among the inhabitants there shall be no discrimination in civil rights or immunities among the inhabitants of any State or territory of the United States, on account of race, color or previous condition of slavery; but the inhabitants of every race and color, without regard to any previous condition of slavery or involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted shall have the same right to make and enforce, contract, to sell, be parties and give evidence to, inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold and convey real and personal property, and to full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of person and property, and shall be subject to like punishment, pains and penalties, and to none other, any law, statute, ordinance, regulation or custom to deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or impriconment not exceeding one year or both in the discretion of the court.

The remaining sections define the judicial proceedings to be taken under the bill.

The Senate adjourned at half-past five to meet on Monday.

House.—Mr. Brooks yielded the floor in order to enable Mr. Garland to move a recess of ten minutes so that Major Generals Meade and Thomas, who were now in rais Meade and Thomas, who were now in the Hall, might be formally introduced to the House. The motion was unani-mously agreed to. The Speaker then left his seat and escorted Major General Meade to the stand, and Mr. Garfield walked arm in arm with Major General Thomas, extending a similar courtesy, the House and galleries applauding vociferously as these gentlemen were passing up the main aisle. The Speaker then delivered the following brief address:

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives While time shall last and the republic shall endure, none of us can ever fail to be grateful to the officers and soldiers who periled their lives for its preservation. True as the truest and brave as the bravest were Major General Meade, Commander of the Army of the Potomac, and Major General Thomas, Commander of the Army of the Cumberland, whom I have the pleasure, under your order, to introduce to you to-day., The address was received with renewed applause from all parts of the hall.

Major General Meade said—Gentlemen of Major General Meade said—Gentlemen of the House of Representatives: Impressed, as I am, with what I may call the solemnity of this occasion, and having been introduced to you in so complimentary a manner, as I have been, by the Speaker of this House, it is impossible to find fitting terms with which to express the gratitude of myself, and friend and brother officer, Major General Thomas for the honor which you have ral Thomas, for the honor which you have conferred. If we are permitted to consider this distinguished mark as any approval of our course in the war which, by blessing of God, has so gloriously terminated, it will be to us an ample reward. We shall ever bear it in grateful remembrance, and al-ways think of it with thankfulness.

The House and galleries again applauded, and some gentleman called on Major General Thomas for a speech, when that gentle-man said it was not his intention to say anything, but to trust to General Meade express their feelings; but since they had called upon him, all he could say was, "I join with him in every word he has said, and sincerely thank you for the compliment." [Applause.]

Mr. Spaulding (Ohio) asked for three cheers, which were given with, if possible, more earnestness than before. All the members and the occupants of the galleries were on their feet. Cheer after cheer went up in deafening chorus amid the waving of hats and handkerchiefs. The time for the recess having expired the House resumed

Mr. Brooks said the very moment the testimony came under his control he put it in possession of the Clerk of the House. The summoning of witnesses, the testimony and other expenses had cost him nearly $3,000. The testimony of the contestant made five hundred and forty-one pages. His own was equally as long. The attorneys on both sides had agreed on the testing ony. There was no point in dispute as to the testimony taken.

Mr. Dawes said the committee at least a dozen times understood that the gentleman had been notified, and it was not known to them that he was not entirely ready until they had been proceeding with the hearing for two days.

Mr. Brooks asked whether he had not made two points before the committee. First, That the notice served upon him was not within the time required by law, and that until that point was decided he was not under the necessity of bringing in his testimony because if the committee decided. testimony, because if the committee decided in his favor they would not need the

mr. Dawes said the committee notified the parties to appear at a given time to be heard, without an intimation from either party that they were not ready. The con-testant proceeded with his case in the ordiber made two. points, and the committee permitted him to interrupt the argument. Then the gentleman proposed to hear the case as the contest was made up, and if rendered necessary then he would surrender the parents.

Mr. Brooks said: If the committee decided the first point in my favor it would be unnecessary to deliver the papers. Mr. Dawes—Not at all; but it was not for the gentleman to take that risk, After further proceedings, Mr. Dodge, the contestant, addressed the House. The election, he said, was held in November, 1864.

Immediately after the election there was very strong evidence of irregularities and frauds in the Eighth Congressional District. The whole number of votes cast was twentytwo thousand, the sitting member obtaining a plurality of one hundred and forty-eight. He was reluctant to enter into such contest, but he was urged to do so from all parts of the country, and especially by those who had taken a deep interest in the canvass in his district. He thought it was a duty to expose the machinery by which for years the wealth and influence and the mercantile portion of the city of New York had been deprived of a proper representahad been deprived of a proper representa-tive on the floor of Congress.

The testimony was taken on his part by Judge Brady, according to law, who took charge of the affidavits and all the papers connected with the testimony, sealed them up and transmitted them to the Clerk of the House. On the 6th of December these papers were referred to the Committee of Elections and ordered to be printed. He now sat here, taking a deep interest in the proceedings, but altogether a silent member of the House, but was exceedingly anxious, from personal considerations, that the contest should be settled at as early a day as possible by the committee.

After further stating the facts in the case, Mr. Dodge said that after stating to the complained that the gentleman had met him with this stern requirement when he single one of the provisions of the statute. (Mr. Brooks) himself had not conformed to a single one of the provisions of the statute.

Mr. Dodge, in reply to Mr. Brooks, said that Mr. Barr was the regular nominee of Tammany Hall, and was known to be a loyal Democrat, and had broken from his party to shstain the country. Mr. Brooks, not satisfied with this, had himself (Brooks) nominated by Mozart Hall and Farnando nominated by Mozart Hall and Fernando Wood. Only about four or five thousand Democrats voted for Mr. Barr, but the great mass of the unterrified Democracy of New York went up boldly and voted for Mr. Brooks, because they were mostly composed of men who had skulked away and refused to enlist until, bounties were raised so high to enlist until bounties were raised so high as to override political prejudices.

Mr. Brooks said the gentleman had given him but little to reply to, but he repeated he had literally complied with the law. He was not in the city when his testimony came, but the very day it came in his possession he brought it to the clerk, subject to the order of the Committee of Elections.

After further remarks by the gentleman, Mr. Dodge said he would be willing the motion to reconsider be withdrawn, promotion to reconsider be withdrawn, provided, in the opinion of the committee, the papers be printed as rapidly as possible so as to be set before the committee, that the matter might be proceeded with without delay.
Mr. Raymond said his motion was simply intended to cause a short delay. He understood that the contestant would let the matter drop if the sitting member would permit it to go forward.

Mr. Brooks thought that too much time had already been spent.

Mr. Raymond had a contrary opinion, as the House had obtained some facts of which it was not previously in possession.

Mr. Raymond withdrew his motion to reconsider, and introduced a bill providing for the erection of warehouses in the port of

New York, for the reception of merch arriving in vessels subject to quarantine by the laws of New York, and a resolution authorizing and directing the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of the Navy to place hulks and vessels at the disposal of the Commissioners at Quarantine at New York, These were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. O'Neill (Pa.) presented the memorial of nine hundred and fifty-two soldiers of the war of 1861, who enlisted into the military service of the United States after April 9, 1861, and before October 24 1863, and were 1861, and before October 24, 1863, and were severally discharged from service by reason of sickness or disability incurred in the line of their duty, but received no bounty, because debarred by the acts of July 22, 1861, and March 3, 1863, they not having served for the full period of two years, as prescribed by said acts, and praying for the passage of an act equalizing all the bounties granted or to be granted to the soldiers of the late rebellion who enlisted and served as above as well as those who enlisted during the same period and served two years or more, acing them on an equality with soldiers who enlisted later in the progress of the war. Referred to the Committee on the war. Reserved to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition from the carriage bolt manufacturers of Philadelphia and other places, recommending an increase of import duty on carriage screw bolts, which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Ways and Means. On motion of Mr. Washburne (Ill.) it was Resolved, That the Committee on Com-merce be instructed to inquire as follows and report by bill or otherwise, viz: whether any legislation is necessary to prevent the combination of pilots of steamboats on the western waters; and second, into the expe-diency of abolishing the office of naval offi-cer and surveyor; and third, into the condi-tion of the American trade on the coast of Africa, and what measures, if any, are necessary to extend and protect it.

The House resumed the consideration of the Senate bill to enlarge the power of the consideration of Freedmen's Bureau, when Mr. Kerr (Ind.), concluded the speech which he commence yesterday, opposing it, and saying he could not find in the Constitution the faintest shadow of authority for such an exercise of power on the part of Congress. The House then adjourned.
