The Life of Abraham Lincoln. By J. G. Holland. Springfield, Massachusetts. Gurdon Bill. 1866.

If the pursuit of great aims; the achievement of great deeds; the occupying of great positions; the winning of great fame; the possession of great virtues; the illustration of great principles, make men great, then Abraham Lincoln was a great man. History measures men by these standards. and to this measurement it adds those distances that lie between the starting point and the goal-between the foundation and the pinnacle-between the green valley and the snow-clad peak. The majestic ice-berg which dwarfs the loftiest mast-head beneath its glittering battlements is chiefly grand because we know that far down, in a triple depth beneath our line of view, the massive foundations are sunk, upon which its transparent splendors are up-reared.

No one can rise from the perusal of the life of Abraham Lincoln, which has just been given by the pen of J. G. Holland, without the conviction that he has been brought face to face with the greatest man of modern times. With wonderful industry and ability Mr. Holland has given us a biography of the greatest of American Presidents, so minute in its details, and so thoroughly covering the whole period of Mr Lincoln's extraordinary career, that it is difficult to realize how short a time has been expended in the work, and how difficult must have been the exploration which has produced such golden results. With a most loving enthusiasm, the author has traced the various steps which lead from the rude log cabin in Kentucky, on whose hard floor slept the backwoods boy, up through all the intervening scenes to the Executive Mansion, where the greatest of living rulers swayed the destinies of the millions of America, and won the unwilling praise of the millions of Europe. We read the record of Abraham Lincoln's early days, and as we pass from one scene to another in which the poor, unlettered, unknown boy struggled forward, always towards a clearer light and a higher stand-point, we seize upon the clue which leads, without a single break, directly onward to the final glorious consummation of all his aims. We find precisely the same qualities actively at work in the farm-boy, the axe-man, the flat-boatman, the clerk, which controlled the statesman and the President. An unswerving honesty, a child-like simplicity, and a reverent fear of God run like a golden thread through his whole eventful life, a thread, whose eventwisted strands were laid together by the tender hands of a Christian mother.

The narrative of Abraham Lincoln's youth stirs the reader with a thrill such as the subtlest romance might excite. Few, comparatively, have realized as yet how utterly poor and humble that youth was. Left a motherless boy of nine years old, in a rough cabin in a wild section of Indiana, whither the family had removed from Kentucky, he grew up at his father's side, industrious, studious, patient, honest. With a physical frame inured to all manner of hardship, and with agenial spirit that rarely lost its balance, he was the leader of the rough athletic sports of his comrades, the best wrestler, the best writer, the best reader, the best story-teller, the best woodsman, the best water-man of them all. But his aim was always upward. He heard up higher!" and he pressed on with a strange mixture of humility and confidence, undismayed by obstacles, undaunted by defeats, unmoved by the intrigues that surrounded him and unhurt by the brilliant successes that he achieved.

Mr. Holland brings us on from the romantic and stirring incidents of the boyhood and youth of Lincoln, through his political career at the West, where his great contest with Douglas first made his name familiar to Eastern ears, with ever culmi nating interest. By numerous authentic anecdotes which will be new to most of the readers of this fascinating book, he brings out in bold relief the qualities of the boy matured into the thoroughly developed proportions of manhood. Quick, shrewd and ingenious to search out the weak places in the armor of his legal or political opponent, he was so generous, so simple, so noble, so honest, so true-hearted, that we do not wonder at his extraordinary personal popularity, or at his ultimate success His was the character, of all others, to win the enthusiastic admiration and affection of the Western mind, and the whole world has come to endorse the verdict of his earliest and nearest friends

The reader passes on through Mr. Lincoln's Presidential career, with painful sympathy. It is difficult to read, without tears. the story of those anxious weary years of his life. Misunderstood, misrepresented burdened as man was never burdened before, beleaguered with treason, beset with political faction, hunted by the hungry pack of office-seekers, walking under a perpetual sense of fearful responsibility, his pillow was the thorniest and his path the roughest that the ruler of a great people ever knew. Out of the very depths of his care-worn spirit, he cried to one of his friends, "I shall never be glad any more." And yet this strong, great man went steadfastly along his via dolorosa, cheating the superficial observer with a semblance of light-hearted gaiety; rarely losing his even sweetness of temper; never unmindful of the little daily duties of kindness and charity to the poor and suffering who so constantly bespoke his intervention in their behalf; full of sympathy for the lowest soldier in the ranks; quick to detect imposition; quicker still to acknowledge his own short-comings; waiting, striving, praying for the time when the blindness of the people should be taken away.

It is one of the saddest reflections, in reading Mr. Lincoln's life, that as he advanced towards the consummation of his noble aims, he felt that his over-taxed strength was giving way, and that he should not live to see the full fruition of his hopes. To one who congratulated him upon the prospect of the termination of the war, "I know-I know," said he, pressing a hand on either side: "but the springs of life are wearing away and I shall not last." To this idea he frequently recurred, and we cannot doubt that he was deliberately sacrificing his own life to his over-powering sense of duty, long before the assassin's bullet closed his career. Mr. Holland has brought out Mr. Lincoln's religious character with a distinctness that must set at rest all cavil upon that point. "He believed in God, and in His personal supervision of the affairs of men. He believed himself to be under His control and guidance." The Bible was his companion and prayer his resort in his greatest needs. The touching appeal to his friends upon leaving Springfield came from the very depths of his sonl, and no administration of our Government has ever been marked by the religious tone that has marked that of Abraham, Lincoln. We cannot refrain, from quoting a single very remarkable passage from Mr. Holland's biography, illustrating this point. After Mr. Lincoln's election, he was conversing with Mr. Bateman in Springfield in reference to the fact that a large preponderance of the Springfield clergy were expected to vote against him on account of their proslavery proclivities. Mr. Lincoln was walking the room, with a small Testament in his hand, greatly agitated. Stopping at last, he said, with a trembling voice and his cheeks wet with tears: "I know there is a God and that He hates injustice and slavery. I see the storm coming, and I know His hand is in it. If He has a place and work for me and I think He has—I believe I am ready. I am nothing, but truth is everything. I know I am right, because I know that liberty is right, for Christ teaches it, and Christ is God. I have told them that a house divided against itself cannot stand, and Christ and reason say the same, and they will find it so. Douglas don't care whether slavery is voted up or voted down, find that they have not read their Bibles aright." The analysis of the features of Mr. Lincoln's personal character and of the policy of his public life, is made by Mr. Holland with rare judgment and skill. Varied as they often are and conflicting as they often seem to be, they all yield with beautiful harmony to the test of the few simple rules and principles which governed this strange life, and his biographer is thus able to meet and overcome every difficulty which has perplexed and troubled the casual observer of Mr. Lincoln's history.

but God cares, and humanity cares, and I care; and with God's help I shall not fail.

I may not see the end, but it will come and

I shall be vindicated; and these men will

Time and distance are vet to do their kindly offices for Mr. Lincoln's character. We all recognize that principle of history by which the truly great gain their full proportions as they recede from immediate contact and view. The mosses of Time hide many minor defects, and the misty atmosphere of Distance rounds many a rough angle into harmony and beauty. When this work shall have begun : when Abraham Lincoln recedes into history; when the relative distance between him and the great men of the Past shall have been diminished, then the world will be able to appreciate the full stature of this great representative American. Even now men name him second to Washington, and some, with bolder vision, call him his peer. But when History shall come to compare Abraham Lincoln with all that have gone before him, by the measure of early advantages enjoyed, by the power of temptations resisted, by the nobility and purity of personal character, by the steadfastness and courage of his spirit, by the magnitude of the work achieved, by the splendor of the victory won for himself and for his people. by the place which he filled in the face o the whole civilized world, we venture the prediction that Abraham Lincoln will stand upon the bright pages of American History, in many of the essential features of his without a peer! We cannot conclude this notice of Mr. Holland's book in better language than that with which the volume itself closes; "Humble child of the backwoods-boatman, axeman, hired laborer, clerk, surveyor, captain, legislator, lawyer, debater, orator. politician, statesman, President, saviour of the republic, emancipator of a race, true Christian, true man-we receive thy life and its immeasurably great results, as the choicest gifts that a mortal has ever bestowed upon us; grateful to thee for thy truth to thyself, to us, and to God; and grateful to that ministry of Providence and grace which endowed theeso richly, and bestowed thee upon the nation and mankind."

CITY BULLETIN.

THE TWENTY-FIFTH Annual Meeting of the Philadelphia Sabbath Association was held on Thursday evening at No. 1334 Chestnut street. The object of the Society is to promote the observance of the Christian Sabbath. Its affairs and funds are under the direction of a President, Corresponding and Recording Secretary, Treasurer and a Board of forty-eight members.

The Society has in its employ five Mis-sionaries who visit, during the boating sea-son, the Delaware Division, Lehigh, Morris, the Main line, Susquehanna, the Delaware and Raritan, and the Cheseapeake and Delaware canals, distributing Tracts and Testaments and doing missionary work among the boatmen and driver boys.

Against the hostile influences by which the sanctity of the Sabbath, in some way and for some purposes, is assailed, and will continually be assailed, there is at present perhaps no barrier upon which the Christian public can so safely rely, as the prevalence in the community of a correct and enlightened public conscience upon the subject; and as a most powerful auxiliary in the cause of Truth, this Society solicits the especial aid of the Gospel Ministry in our city and State.

and State.

The Annual Report gives an interesting account of the operations by the Society, and the labors of the Missionaries during the past year. The following are the of ficers:

President.—John A. Brown. Vice Presidents.—Thomas Wattson, John M. Atwood, Thomas T. Tasker, Sr., George H. Stuart, John Sibley, John C. Sims, Louis C. Vonte.

Corresponding Secretary and Agent.—Rev. Jeremiah Miller. Recording Secretary Isaac Sulger. Treasurer.-John Wiest.

ALLEGED SWINDLER,-Raymond Gutzesall was arraigned before Alderman Beitler sall was arraigned before Alderman Beitler yesterday afternoon, charged with obtaining goods under false pretences. The accused called upon the Lockwood Manufacturing Company, No. 255 South Third street, and represented that he had been sent by the firm of H. Duhring & Co., for collars and cuffs, and received, by his false statements, about eighty-one dollars worth of goods. It is alleged that he obtained goods, in the same manner, from S. Hovey & Brother, H. P. & C. R. Taylor, Erasmus C. Pratt, Brother & Co., and Hahn, Fernald & Wesherhold. The accused was committed to answer.

THE BILLIARD TOURNAMENT.-Concert Hall was again filled yesterday afternoon and last evening, and the interest in the Billiard Tournament is unabated. The playing yesterday afternoon opened by a game (carom) between Ryall and Hewes, 500 points, which was won by Ryall, who distanced his competitor 264 points. Ryall's highest runs were 71 and 172, and Hewes's 43, 30 and 33. Ryall's average was over 25

Pierre Carme and E. H. Nelme then played an exhibition game of 300 points (push bar-rel), which was won by Carme, who beat his opponent 184 points. Carme's highest run was 92 points,

The evening's entertainment opened with an exhibition game of 200 points, between Carme and Ryall (push barrel), which was won by Carme. After which Messrs, Plunkett and Bruce contested for the championship in a game of 500 points. Plunkett was the winner by 295 points, his highest runs being 92, 81, 102. This afternoon Hewes and Plunkett will contend and in the evening Plunkett will contend, and in the evening Rvall and Palmer.

LIFE INSURANCE.—The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement in our readers is called to the advertisement in our columns of the New York Life's twenty-first annual dividend, which is fifty per cent. for 1865, together with the redemption in cash of all outstanding scrip for the years 1863, 1864. The receipts for the year were over two millions of dollars; just at this time when both life and fire losses are so great, it certainly shows superior management in the officers and agents of this company to make such a satisfactory report to their policy holders, they only being interested in the profits. We know of no company in this country that have cashed their potestanding scrip, and credits in, so short a outstanding scrip and credits in so short a time. The scrip of 1865 only remains to be paid. We can safely recommend this company in preference to many others to persons about insuring; the accumulated capital is now over $4,500,000, and policies for $20,000 are insured in any one first-class risk. Messrs. Lancaster and Gaskill, the well-known insurance agents, N. W. corner of Tenth and Walnut streets, are the agents for this State. Call on them and insure; we have done so.

THE SKATING SEASON.-The recent renewal of the cold atmospheric condition has rejoiced the hearts of all the proprietors of the skating parks, as well as of the visitors who favor the parks with their presence. At Thirty-first and Walnut streets, the skating is delightful, and the scientific movements of Messrs. Edward and William Van Hook charm all who see them. At Fifteenth and Wallace streets, Dr. Jansen's park is thronged, and the ice is really excellent. Both parks at Fourth and Diamond streets are in admirable order, and the skating never was better. At Bushnell's park, Broad street and Columbia avenue, yesterday, the scene was unusually brilliant. Mr. Peter Weaver, one of the most graceful skaters in the world, as our readers are skaters in the world, as our readers are aware, was upon the ice for some hours and delighted hundreds of spectators with his splendid evolutions. At Twenty-first street and Columbia avenue, there is ice as clear as water, and the park is accessible by the Ridge avenue cars. At this park, as well as at the others, there is excellent music

DOMESTIC MARKETS .- Prices in market this morning were as follows: apples, 40 to 45c. per half-peck; butter, 55 to 60c. per lb.; cranberries, 12 to 18c. per quart; eggs, 37 to 42c. per dozen; roast beef 20 to 24c per lb.; 42c. per dozen; roast beef 20 to 24c per lb.; sirloin steaks, 28 to 32c. per lb.; mutton, 10 to 20c. per lb:; onions, 22 to 27c. per half-peck; pork, 16 to 20c. per lb.; potatoes, 22 to 28c. per half-peck; poultry, 18 to 25c. per lb.; turnips, 14 to 16c. per half-peck, and veal 12 to 25c. per lb.

THE CARSON GOLD MINING COMPANY .-We call attention to the advertisement of the Carson Gold Mining Company. The prospectus is a brilliant one, and among the officers we observe the names of some of our most prominent, influential and reliable citizens, and we should think that no investment could be more profitable than one in the "Carson."

AFTER THEM.—The officers of Camden seem to be unrelaxing in their efforts to hunt up incendiaries, whose works have for several months past filled the citizens with several months past filled the citizens with great dread, and endangered their property to such an alarming extent. Several months ago a young man named John Beck was arrested and put under bail, charged with having fired the stables and barns of Mr. Hatch, on the 15th of May last, and on Thursday afternoon he was convicted of the crime. Immediately on conviction he turned State's evidence and made an affidavit implicating several other lads in the transaction with himself, some of whom have been arrested. Whether they are have been arrested. Whether they are guilty or not remains to be seen, but justice demands better and more positive evidence than the oath of a condemned criminal. Their cases, however, will be fairly investigated, as the Prosecuting Attorney, Mr. Jenkins, and Justice J. M. Cassady will not permit any one to suffer who is innocent to appease the self-exonerating statements of the guilty.
