ART IN NEW YORK.
[Correspondence of the Phila. Evening Bulletin.]
New York, Feb. 5.—Emil Seitz, the first-rate and wide-awake picture dealer, has just showed me a proof of his heart's darling, his great American Chromo-lithograph from Eastman Johnson's "The Oath." This picture of the "Old Kentucky Home," is a year or more, and is printed from about thirty stones. It is the first attempt in this country to rival the minute German copies of oil paintings, and approaches in deceptive effect Mr. Seitz's print of the "Sunshine and Shadow," by Bierstadt, which was executed in Europe. To test the excellence of the counterfeits, Mr. Seitz placed his proof beside the miniature oil copy of the same scene, which he had caused to be made at an expense of five hundred dollars to guide the lithographers. The painting and the print stood side by side, and not one in fifty of the public for whom the latter was intended, could have detected its nature at a small distance; not only are the colors limited to the slightest shade, but the final embossing of the sheet to resemble the grainy surface of a painting, and the dulcifying of lac, are not wanting to the clever illusion.

The picture itself never was a great one, but it will be popular for that very reason, both here and in Europe. Artistically, it is gloomy and ugly, without the least particle of composition or light-and-shade. In sentiment, it is a bit of rose-water compromise: its view of slavery is of the dear departed patriarchal system, with its honey-suckle catkins, eccentric Uncle Neds and Aunt Sues, lifting their skirts high as they step over into the "quarters." This temper, so extremely well-bred, condescending and pleasant all around, is just what will sell the picture in every State of the Union, and all abroad besides.

Eastman Johnson, a most agreeable and affable middle-aged gentleman, toils every day with all his comfortably rounded contours to the summit of the worst staircase in all this town so opulent in staircases. He has a large room at the top of the University Building, with plenty of light and space. We make much of him, because we have hardly any other native figure, however of any eminence. Lentze is entirely German Meyer, and so in his smaller limit is Constant Meyer, and neither would pass in any gallery for an American painter. Nebligh is as plainly French, and his beautiful picture of a gentleman selecting his sword in an armourer's shop (just painted for Mr. Knoedler), is simply a projection from a French school across the water of American art, like the Rhone through Lake Geneva. These imitations, though valuable as tutors, are too old and fixed to receive the least impulse from our civilization, and are not in any critical sense American artists.

Curious to learn what provision is making for Academic art in this great city, I a short time since went over the Antique Rooms in the new National Academy with Mr. Addison Richards, the attentive Secretary of the institution. (Of course an inveterate art collector, in a newspaper report.) Having often seen the corresponding rooms in the Academy at Philadelphia, I was tempted to laugh. There were very few casts, and what there had been carefully scraped quite smooth and then painted a pale blue. Any artist who forbids his Italian image-merchant to remove so much as the seams of the mould in some fine line should be sunk by the operation, may fancy how these statues look after the sand paper and glossy paint extended to them by the dear old Academy noddies, in their desire to procure smooth things. A leg, for instance, appears to be encased in a stocking, and no very important antique has suffered from these childish theories of reconstruction, the "National" Academy having yet to accumulate the most obvious material for its pupils. Such indispensable models as the Elgin figures and the Torso Belvidere are absent from our little collection. The Arundelian and Phigalian marbles are not represented; while the still more ordinary classical figures place to Canova's figures, a robed Colossus of an Apollo, and that sum of villainies, that whole Academy of base taste, the Hercules Farnese.

As we proceeded around the room, two or three boys entered, trembling with cold, and tried to place their desks among the gleaming light-blue casts; and the "National Academy" was even excited with some hope of another old boy who came in and enquired about the process of admission; but Mr. Richards was as cool with him as with every thing else in the gallery, and the youth sunk in his feelings like a thermometer as he walked around the statues that sometimes chattered on their pedestals at his tread, in addition to being so blue; and I cannot bring myself to imagine that that young man has since reappeared in his country's "National" Academy of Design.

By the way, speaking of casts, did you know of the simple process by which the clever "Rogers Groups" are repeated for publication? I may be the last man to whom the process is a novelty, but I certainly never understood, until Mr. Rogers told me about it a month since, how his copies could be offered for such a trifle. The artist had before him, in three pieces, his group called "Taking the Oath and Drawing Rations"—a composition of four figures, which he was finishing to a high point for casting in bronze. I was surprised to find it in so few parts, considering its intricate nature, and the prevalence of undercasting. So, Mr. Rogers helped me out with a leisurely explanation, as he prodded away in minute style at his work; and this is the way they do it. Mrs. Glass first caught her hare (and I should like to have seen the chase and Mr. Rogers first models his statue. Then he simply constructs a kind of tin band-box around it, and pours in a certain glutinous composition, invented in France. This hardens to the consistency of india-rubber, forming a matrix around the clay, which is carefully divided with a keen blade, in a few well-considered lines. You can now take off the pieces, and if it will not follow you may pull at it till it does; the drawing, and then they tack as they were before, forming once more a perfect mould, from which a dozen casts may be taken before it gets out of shape. This lucky thought saves Mr. Rogers the vexation of making one of those piece-moulds, in a hundred parts, which are (in Mrs. Lirripier's phrase) such fruitful hot water to all parties.

The Arrests at New York.

[From to-day's N. Y. Tribune.]
Late on Saturday afternoon, District Attorney Dickinson received information to the effect that certain parties in this city were engaged in outfitting a large schooner to be used by the Chilean Government in the war with Spain. Acting upon this information, Mr. S. G. Courtney, wickham of District Attorney, went before the United States Grand Jury, who were in session, and that body returned two indictments—one against Benjamin J. McKenna, doer of the schooner, and another against the other agents, Stephen Rogers, The Circuit Court of the United States for the District of New York, in the Southern District of New York, on the third day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six.

New Jersey Matters.
INTERESTING EXERCISES.—The exercises at the Third Street Methodist Episcopal Church, last evening, were of the most interesting character, and the necessary means were adopted to give eclat to the general assembly, such as the singing of hymns, the reading of the scriptures, and the use of the organ. The exercises were highly felicitous in their remarks. The Secretary of this church will mark the year 1866 with the addition of the names of new members added, and with the resources that the wealthiest churches among the different denominations might envy. As a general assembly, it is a most interesting illustration of the motto of its founder—"All at it, and always at it." It has given to the word such a pulpitory as will do for a religious legislator as John Wesley, and such a hymn writer as Charles Wesley. In this country it took an early and decided stand against intemperance, and it was the first religious body to pledge its unwavering loyalty to the Government after the attack of Fort Sumter. It was the first to telegraph congratulations to the Government, and it was the first to offer a resolution in support of the war. The members of this denomination, therefore, are the first to have increased in strength and facilities to advance the cause, and principles it has adopted for the year.

IMPROVEMENTS AT LONG BRANCH.
The popular watering place at Long Branch, New Jersey, has been improved in a large and advantageous degree at the present time. A new hotel, in course of erection, of the dimensions of which are 700 feet long, 40 wide and four stories high. This gigantic structure will be completed in the most satisfactory manner, and will be furnished with every necessary arrangement that will give solidity, attraction and comfort to such a public house. In addition to the new hotel, a new and splendid private cottage, with every modern and comfortable, and will be completed by the summer season. These new improvements will largely to the business activity of Long Branch, and make that seaside resort much more attractive and desirable.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES.
CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—A fire, which broke out this morning, destroyed the residence of a prominent citizen, and the adjoining buildings. Several stores and the Republican office are in ruins. The loss amounted to $70,000, and was insured for $38,000.

MEMPHIS, Feb. 7.—A destructive fire occurred this morning, on the east side of Main street, between Washington and Poplar. Seven buildings were destroyed. The fire originated in the dry goods store of West and Schiller, at the corner of that street, and rapidly spread to the buildings on both sides, including the four brick stores belonging to Mr. Schiller, and occupied by Mr. Fuller, boot and shoe dealer; Mr. Breaker, dry goods, and Bilmertal, Field & Co., carriage boxes, hats, and hats. The destroyed several small stores and establishments adjoining. There was only a small part of the property insured. The loss is estimated at over a hundred thousand dollars.

ALBANY, Feb. 7.—A destructive fire broke out in Ainsworth's hardware store, in Cape Vincent. The flames spread rapidly to the dwelling of George F. Barlett's, and the fire also communicated to W. Warren & George Jarvin's grocery stores. Messrs. Briggs, Ainsworth and Grandell lost their entire stocks.

THE MURDER AT UTECA.
ALBANY, Feb. 7.—The names of the men arrested for the murder of Campbell, are Asa Fuller, Hial Davis, John Vance, Charles Vance, and William Deutter. They are to be held in the Uteca jail until demanded by the authorities of Hocking county.

CONNECTICUT POLITICS.
HARTFORD, Feb. 7.—The Democratic State Convention, held to-day, is the largest for many years. The Hon. Thomas H. Bond, president, and the Hon. James E. English, were nominated for Governor; Ephraim B. Hyde for Lieutenant Governor; Jesse Olney for Secretary of State; Hiram H. Barbour for Treasurer, and Thomas H. G. Kingsbury for Comptroller. Mr. English made a speech of acceptance. The resolutions passed indorse the President's restoration policy.

not known in any official capacity to the city department. Acting on these replies, the authorities held the parties.

After they had been in custody for a short time, they were taken into Court, and McKenna, who is said to be the original promoter of the scheme, was held to bail in the sum of $10,000 to appear from day to day, and was held to bail in the sum of $5,000. Messrs. Geo. G. Hobson and Theo. W. Riley became the bail for McKenna, and Geo. Dickson, Jr., became bail for Stephen Rogers.

The parties justified before Commissioner Stillwell, after examination by Ethan Allen, Esq., and were released, their bonds, however, requiring them to appear from day to day.

From present indications the parties will be placed on trial in a few days.

by his assailants and beaten almost to death in the presence of his wife. Previous to the murder the fellows had beaten two men and stolen two horses and a sleigh.

Facts and Figures.
Glocester is agitated by the question whether she should appropriate fifty thousand dollars for a new town house. If a single double Gloucester is so agitated, what would a dozen do?

The most novel and notable feature of a recent concert given at the Philadelphia Academy of Music consisted in the production of a vast egg, from which there suddenly emerged a large collection of wild birds. They marched about the hall in procession, each giving the peculiar utterance of its kind, and finally re-entered the huge egg which had sent them forth. They came forth like devils. The egg was Abaddon.

"A Pittsburgh paper," says a Boston journal, "noticing the recent reprint of a novel of Theodore Hook's, says Hook 'now ranks among the ablest novelists of the day,' and that he has just completed the above-mentioned work." As it is only twenty-five years since the humorist died, we can hardly expect Western Pennsylvania to have heard of it yet." Our contemporary evidently has an eye to Hook.

An association of amateur fishermen has just been organized in Kentucky, called the Kentucky Piscatorial Society, with a capital of $50,000. Their object is to preserve the fish of Kentucky rivers from entire annihilation, with which they have been seriously threatened during the past few years. Query—"The society or the fish?"

Most of our readers doubtless are acquainted with the fact that one of the most exciting subjects of discussion of late in Scotland is the organ question, that is, whether this instrument shall be used in the churches. This prejudice is gradually disappearing, although, this same writer says, there is but one organ in Edinburgh in a parish church. In Glasgow there are now eight or eight. Seven or eight organs in one church! That church is well organized.

There is more skating in Central Park, in New York, than on any other day. The crowd there last Sunday was estimated 100,000, of whom 80,000 were skaters. There seems to be a moral distinction drawn here for every man. It is a question of skate he did and skate he didn't. The skate thousand was, however, a big thing on ice.

Mr. Forrest drew large audiences the first five nights of his engagement in Chicago, and the aggregate receipts being over ten thousand dollars. The public saw enough of him the first week, however, and he has not worked to fill them any better than playing to empty them.

Mr. Anthony Trollope has begun the publication of a new novel in the Cornhill Magazine, entitled "The Claverings." If the Scotch laugh at the "claverings of an aristocrat," what will Americans do with the claverings of a trollope?

Rev. Dr. Dutton of New Haven was illustrated by the answer which he gave to a parson who once suggested a little modification in the Doctor's theology. It was, "If I cannot reach the truth in the North Church, thank God, I can drive a hack!" In other words, if they drove him out he would drive them out.

A Boston journal says: People who were invited to an opera on Saturday afternoon, could not tell how they liked the new French tenor, a maud, because they could not hear him. Such a singer would suit the clown in New York who says: "If you have any music that may be heard, let it be again; but, as they say, to hear music, the general does not greatly care."

It is said that the people of Haverrhill, Mass., are disturbed nightly by loud, unearthly noises in the cemetery. Probably they are semi-terriered by the barking of mongrel dogs; a semi-terrier dog.

The unconstructed rebels in Mexico are described as seditious and blue, and one letter writer says: "Almost every Confederate who comes down from the interior ends the narration of his experiences with, 'Whenever I leave this rascally country, I'm going home to leave this.' If getting money depends on their getting into scrapes, they will be rich enough to buy a 'home again.'"

A few days ago, says an English newspaper, nearly 1,000 persons had a London plum-pudding feast, at Aughton. One plum pudding weighing three hundred pounds each, and three weighing about seventy pounds each, were consumed in about three hours. After which "on with the dance, let joy be unconfeined," was the order of the day.

We were aware indignation will make us his prey. But my dash enjoyment with sorrow. I wish it were to be to-day, and send for the doctor to-morrow.

Newton found out the reason why an apple falls—rather than the law of its falling. The reason why apples fall, however, is to be discovered by the unfortunate speculators in that fruit. A summary reason is that the Fall is owing to the approach of Winter.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE PRAT FAMILY.—We eulogize no public entertainment more cordially, heartily and sincerely than that of the Peak Family. They occupy the large hall in the Assembly Building, and every evening and at their matinees the apartment is crowded to overflowing. Such bell ringing as with the "Light Guards Quickstep," with Miss Chase, Elizabeth, Master Eddie, (formerly Miss Fanny Peak). The songs Master Eddie and Albert are so delightful, and are received with a round after round of applause. We can also speak well of the performances in the second part of the entertainment, viz: Mr. A. J. Whitcomb's harp solos, Mr. J. F. Spalton's violin solos, &c. The entire entertainment comprises the greatest possible variety, and is as pure and clear as that of a young parlor in any home of the land. Could we say more?

THE ACE.—Last evening that very popular drama, "Lucretia Borgia," was played by Mrs. Emma Waller enacting the part of the heroine. It was a decided relief to see this strong part classically played, in which it is generally given. Mrs. Waller's reading was really exquisite. Her modulation was perfect, and her thoroughgoing forbearance of wild gesture was to be commended in the highest degree. In fact her entire part was a study. She was supported by E. L. Tilton, McKee Rankin, H. Wallis, L. L. James, T. A. Cress, J. P. B. Gilman, N. Holt, Mr. Pearson, P. B. Fitzgerald, M. Holt, Mr. Pearson, Mr. Worth, Mr. Styles, &c., and they played very particularly Messrs. Tilton, Rankin and Waller. This evening "Macbeth" will be given, with Mr. and Mrs. Waller in the main parts. The afterpiece will be a one-act comedy, with Robson and Mrs. Thayer in the principal characters. To-morrow Mrs. Waller takes her benefit.

THE WALNUT.—Clarke continues his conquering march. His admirers gather around him by thousands in spite of the most inclement weather and the multiplicity of attractions at the skating parks, at balls and at other places of amusement. This evening he appears in the roaring farce of "My Neighbor's Wife," and also as Tom Titler, in "Eight Nights of the Round Table." For his benefit to-morrow he will delight us with his Dr. Pangloss in "The Heir at Law" and also as a new comedietta called "Dickey's Wooing." Clarke probably has the wowing swain. On Saturday Clarke and the company at the Walnut have volunteered to appear at a matinee for the benefit of the Soldiers and Sailors' Home.

THE CHESTNUT.—"The Hour of Ten" will be repeated during the week, including the matinee on Saturday.

Sheridan's and "The Sphinx" still held their court, and the weekly assembly of WALLETT, the Shakespearean clown, is the centre of attraction at the American.

New Hampshire Democratic Convention.
CONCORD, Feb. 7.—The New Hampshire Democratic State Convention has nominated Hon. John G. Sinclair, of Bethlehem, for Governor, and Col. Geo. H. Pierce, of Dover, for Railroad Commissioner.

Resolutions were adopted indorsing President Johnson in his endeavors to have the Southern States represented in Congress, and discontinuing any amendments to the Constitution.

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 7.—The following were the resolutions adopted by the Democratic Convention:
Resolved, That we pledge to Andrew Johnson of the State of Tennessee, President of the United States, our support in the South, and in the execution of his policy in the States immediate representation to all the States, and their full rights under the Constitution; and we call on all patriotic citizens to unite with us in this patriotic purpose.

The London Times mentions a romance of Colney Hatch Asylum. "Some years ago there were in Colney Hatch a young man and a young woman, who made each other's acquaintance at one of the balls given for the amusement of the inmates. Mad though they were, they carried off an innocent courtship, and despite the vigilance of the officials, managed to correspond. Both recovered, and after their discharge, having renewed their courtship, married happily. So far as is known at the asylum, neither has had a relapse of insanity."

There are at present 548,518 men enrolled in the Austrian army, with 17,438 officers. In 1865, 51,000 conscripts joined.
